Eklund Escapes in Irons; Jury Deadlocks

Army, Police Comb District For 'Sniper' Case Suspect

Search Spreads To East Coast As Mother Begs Him to Surrender

Every available Washington policeman and a detail of 50 soldiers early today were feverishly trying to track down John Eugene Eklund, 25-year-old accused "sniper slayer," who made a dramatic dash to freedom last night from a United States marshal's van in front of the District Jail. Meanwhile, his mother, Mrs. Sadie Eklund, issued a frantic appeal to her son to surrender.

At the time of the break—10:20 p. m.—Eklund was being returned from District Court, where a few minutes earlier a jury had reported itself deadlocked as to his guilt. As the accused murderer jumped from the van, a blinding downpour of rain was in progress.

Police, in piecing together the story, said that Eklund, both hands handcuffed, lunged past a deputy marshal as the latter opened the van's door at the jail and dashed to freedom. Police also said that the marshal pursued Eklund for some distance south on Nineteenth Street but lost him in the terrific rainstorm. No shots were fired. The marshal's name was not learned immediately.

Many Places to Hide

Upon receiving the report of the escape, police immediately broadcast the alarm. Every available scout car, motorcycle policeman and patrolman was dispatched to the vicinity.

They scoured the swamps and flats bordering the Anacostia River and searched every inch of Congressional Cemetery and the Gallinger Hospital grounds. It was pointed out that the area surrounding the jail affords excellent places for hiding. Besides the marsh lands and high reeds, concrete sewer conduits open on the river's edge. They are 40 feet in diameter. Iron ladders inside lead to openings in the city's streets capped by removable iron manhole covers.

Police broadcast the alarm to Maryland and Virginia police who in turn relayed it to Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, New Jersey, North Carolina and South Carolina.

They also placed a cordon around the home of Eklund's mother, at

Hundley Jury Deliberates 12 Hours in Vain

After deliberating for more than 12 hours on charges against Hiram Ben Hundley, Washington tire dealer accused of violating OPA regulations, a District Court jury last night was locked up in a hotel after failing to reach a verdict. Deliberations will be resumed this morning.

When they returned to the jury room about 10:30 the jurors were told by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough that arrangements had been made to accommodate them overnight in a hotel. One juror commented that he was in the same state of mind as he had been when the jury received the case, and when the court asked if this applied to the other jurors they nodded affirmatively.

Justice Goldsborough then requested that they return at 10 a. m. today for further deliberations. If they are unable to reach a verdict today, they will be discharged, he said.

The jurors were given the case at 10:05 a. m., after a 5-minute charge by Justice Goldsborough, who told them they must acquit Hundley on all counts if they agreed with the defense's contention that Government inspectors had marked as salable tires sold by the defendant.

Hundley is accused of selling new tires, marked as used, to the Star Publishing Co., the Premier Purchasing Co. and the Diamond Service Co. in violation of an Office of Price Administration order.

Two of 12 counts on which he was indicted were stricken Wednesday by Justice Goldsborough. In charging the jury, he said the law in the case had been adequately covered by counsel and it was unnecessary for him to elaborate.

Senators Act To Curb OPA, OCD Salaries

Would Subject Jobs Paying $4500 and Over to Review

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Senate review of all the high-salaried employes in the Government's price control and civilian defense agencies was threatened late yesterday as the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a supplemental money bill carrying 120 million dollars for Leon Henderson's embattled Office of Price Administration.

The committee approved an amendment to the funds bill, whose effect, it was learned, would be to call up for Senate review all employes now earning $4500 or more in the OPA and the Office of Civilian Defense.

Technically, the proviso would bar payments of salaries to all OPA and OCD employes in the $4500-and-over range unless they "shall have been" appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Would Be Retroactive

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, sponsor of the amendment, confirmed the fact that the effect of his plan would be retroactive and would require calling up for Senate review the high-salaried employes who were already on the job, in addition to those who would receive future appointment to jobs paying $4500 or more in the two agencies.

The proviso was not aimed at any particular employes in the OPA or OCD, Senator McKellar said. He added that the employes now on the job who would be affected by his plan could be put through the process of Senate confirmation in short order.

Some of Henderson's appointments had produced sharp resentment on the part of some members of Congress on the ground that they had not been consulted, while the OCD had come in earlier for a hefty portion of Congressional criticism

The eight German spies on trial here were confronted yesterday with the confessions they stammered out when they were caught, just a few days after they slipped off two Nazi submarines upon a mission of espionage, death and destruction.

The statements — recorded by their captors — were placed in evidence before the Military Commission, which will be asked next week to have the spies hanged or shot.

As the seven generals of the commission adjourned for the night, their president, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, issued this bulletin through Henry Paynter of the Office of War Information:

The commission opened the third day's proceedings at 10:27 a. m.

Temporary Office Building Planned

Another temporary Government structure, costing $860,000 and to be completed within 60 days, will be erected on the south side of Newark Street, between Idaho Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, the Federal Works Agency announced yesterday.

What agency will occupy the structure was not announced. It will be designated as Temporary Building T-8 and employes working there will be expected to live in houses to be erected nearby.

Hit-Run Auto Kills Two Boy Hitchhikers, Injures Third

Police of two States and the District last night sought the hit-and-run driver who struck three Washington boys early yesterday on the Southern Maryland Boulevard, killing two and injuring the third.

A lookout was broadcast throughout Maryland, Virginia and Washington.

Bernard E. Davis, 15, of 903 G Street Southeast, is believed to have died instantly, but Charles Keefe, 17, of 209 Bates Street Northwest, was still alive when a party of Washingtonians, returning from a fishing trip, arrived at the scene. He died on the way to the hospital.

The third lad, Russell Fowler, 17, of 522 Tenth Street Southeast, was described as not seriously hurt by Dr. Everard Briscoe, Calvert County medical examiner. Last night he was still at Prince Frederick Hospital, where he was treated for shock and concussion of the brain.

Last night Fowler was still unable to talk coherently, Dr. Briscoe said. However, he quoted the boy earlier in the day as saying he did not know what hit them.

The three boys had spent the day fishing at Chesapeake Beach. Hitchhiking back, they were hit on a curve in the highway about a quarter of a mile south of Dunkirk, according to State Trooper Herman Heiger.

New Surtax On Incomes Is Approved

House Ways, Means Votes Additional 1% Levy, Boosting Bill Over 6 Billions

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

In a zero hour push for more revenue, the House Ways and Means Committee last night voted an additional 1 per cent surtax in each individual income tax bracket to raise the gross yield of the tax bill to $6,047,000,000.

The unexpected boost in the already stiff individual surtax rates was accompanied by a special concession in personal exemptions to all officers and enlisted men in the armed forces.

Army and Navy personnel, under the amendment, would receive the same individual income tax exemptions as under present law—$750 for single persons and $1500 for married.

Civilian taxpayers would have to pay taxes on all income over $500 for single persons and $1200 for married, although an unsuccessful proposal was made to fix the exemption for single taxpayers at $800.

13% on First $2000

The 1 per cent vertical increase in individual surtax brackets previously proposed would range surtaxes under the new bill from 13 per cent on the first $2000 of taxable income to 82 per cent on all individual income over $200,000.

These rates, on top of a proposed 6 per cent normal tax, compare with a present law surtax range of from 6 per cent on the first $2000 to 77 per cent on all over five million dollars.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton estimated the surtax step-up would increase the bill's revenue yield by $310,800,000. Estimated loss from increased exemptions for military and naval personnel was placed at 85 million dollars. Thus the yield of the bill was increased by a net of 225 million dollars.

Action came at an extended night session as the committee raced toward a final vote on the bill today, preliminary to House action next week.

As the bill stood last night, various categories of revenue stood approximately as follows:

Corporation taxes, including excess profits, $2,291,000,000; individual

U. S. Bombers Pound Supply Ships; Air Attack Knocks Out 500 Axis Machines

Cairo, July 10.—Fierce fighting broke out today between British and Axis desert forces on the Mediterranean rim, west of El Alamein, in a renewal of the battle for Egypt, which had been bogged down in an uneasy lull for more than a week.

The new fighting erupted after R. A. F. and American planes were reported to have destroyed or disabled 400 to 500 Axis vehicles out of a concentration of 2000 shuttling forward to replenish Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's

The fighting ended a deadlock of several days during which both exhausted armies dug in under severe sandstorms and awaited supplies and reinforcements.

Front dispatches gave no hint of the trend of the great struggle, but did say that the Axis apparently had not made any additional gains eastward.

Rommel's German-Italian legions already had been compelled to withdraw part of his curved-back right wing northward toward the sea before today's fighting was resumed.

Huge four-motored bombers of the United States Air Force were reported attacking enemy shipping in the sealanes, while the R. A. F.

Savage U. S. Air Attack Left Italian Fleet in Mad Confusion

By Larry Allen
Associated Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, Egypt, June 29 (Delayed).—United States bombers struck so savagely at the Italian battle fleet two weeks ago that Mussolini's armada became "a fantastic circus of wildly careening ships" trying to escape, a British submarine commander who witnessed the attack said today.

Lieut. Stephen L. Maydon told the story upon bringing his undersea raider to its base after sinking a heavy cruiser and torpedoing a battleship of the 35,000-ton Littoria class, seriously damaging it.

The cautious Italian fleet—or what the British have left of it—made one of its rare excursions against the convoy bound for Malta June 15.

Maydon said he sighted the Italian battle fleet at dawn and was closing in when the huge, four-motored American bombers and the R. A. F. loosed their first explosives.

"One of the greatest scenes of confusion followed the first bombing attack," the 28-year-old skipper said. "My submarine was in the center of a fantastic circus of wildly careening capital ships, cruisers and destroyers, none of which kept on course long enough to allow us to fire torpedoes. The urge to surface and use our guns was terrific.

"Bomb flashes seemed to punctuate the movements of the fleet. Red and yellow tracers and black bursts of heavier antiaircraft fire from the Italian battle fleet streaked and blotched the sky in all directions.

"At one period there was not a quadrant of the compass that was not occupied by ships weaving continually to and fro. I gaped through the periscope in utter amazement at the fleet dashing around in mad circles."

The American planes were credited with scoring 35 bomb hits on the two Italian battleships. The British announced after the battle that an Italian cruiser, carrying 8-inch guns, two destroyers and a submarine were sunk. The British lost the light cruiser Hermoine and five destroyers, one of them Polish, in two convoy actions—one to supply Malta

A three-way split in the tripartite War Labor Board along strict group lines over the demand of 137,000 steel workers for a $1 a day wage increase became evident yesterday as WLB prepared to render a final decision in the "Little Steel" case.

During the course of a week's discussion on the steel case—WLB's most important—the four labor members, A. F. of L. and C. I. O. both, have remained firm in their refusal to compromise for less than the full $1 a day wage increase. Likewise, the employer members have consistently maintained that

The deaths of 16 seamen aboard five merchant vessels torpedoed by Axis submarines in the western Atlantic and the rescue of more than 230 others were disclosed yesterday in the Navy's announcements of four sinkings and a Cuban government's report of another.

Meanwhile, the submarine-sinking of three ships in the St. Lawrence River Sunday night was disclosed by a member of Canada's Parliament, but the government gave no confirmation. K. S. Roy, Independent M. P., who reported the incident in the House of Commons yesterday, said he had learned a 14-vessel convoy was attacked by enemy U-boats off Cape Chat, and that three ships had been torpedoed and sunk. Prime Minister Mackenzie King criticized Roy's premature report, saying "any statement will have to be made by the (navy) minister."

Moscow (Saturday), July 11. German troops have driven into Rossosh, 150 miles east of the industrial city of Kharkov, and cut the main railway linking the central and southern Red armies.

A communique early today announced the Russian withdrawal from Rossosh before a German wedge thrust parallel to the steel arm now plucking at Voronezh, 100 miles to the north.

"For two days our men have conducted fierce fighting in the vicinity of Rossosh," the communique announced in a brief description of the heavy fighting in that area. "The enemy hurled into battle large numbers of tanks and motorized infantry. Under the pressure of enemy attacks our units retreated to new defense positions."

Rossosh iself is 20 miles short of the Don River which already had been crossed by the Germans striking at Voronezh, but it also is a point on the Moscow-Rostov railway.

Fierce Fighting at Voronezh

The Russians still were fighting fiercely "west of Voronezh," the communique said, but by evacuating Rossosh the Red Army acknowledged that the Nazis in their second year of war stood halfway across European Russia to the Ural Mountains from the old Polish demarkation line. Moreover, the Nazis were some 70 miles east of a Hobbleskirts Coming Back!

Don't Get Scared, Junior; It's Only Mama in New Fall Outfit

By the Associated Press

New York, July 10.—Gentlemen, brace yourselves! Your wivest next fall are going to wear the most cockeyed clothes since the hobbleskirt of World War I fame.

Around the dinner table in New York these nights, husbands are hearing the most outlandish tales—relayed straight from the tea party, bridge game and the fashion front.

Here are some of the stories that have sent men's eyebrows up in surprise, and their jowls down in a frown:

A war of windmills is being waged between designers of hats on the theory of "maximums" and "minimums."

The establishment of John Frederics has the ladies doing loops over their big, floppy, high-crowned "wind-catchers." Some women still refer to this type as "picture hats." They're called "maximums," but colossal might be a better word.

Then there's Walter Florell, a hat designer, who has just come out with "a darling little thing," so the women infer, which clings close to the head and looks a little like the top off a hallowe'en pumpkin.

These are called "minimums," but you can coin your own word for them.

It takes the dress designers to make something that will catch a woman's eye, and probably bop her husband's orbits.

Charles Armour, a fashionable designer, made it all quite clear when he told a group of women at his style show:

"I don't think these clothes are in good taste—but they will sell, and every storekeeper is after some of that 'new money' from the war plants."

"STOVEPIPE" — This high-crowned felt hat was among the fall chapeaux for milady displayed yesterday in New York. (Other pictures, Page 24)

His dresses, and those of other stylists, feature the trim, modest silhouette demanded by the War Production Board last spring.

The dresses, friend sufferer, will be hung with fringes, wide gold braid, beads, sequins and anything else the clever designers can think up to catch a woman—and our pocketbooks—in a trance.

And just to send your weekend thoughts reeling, the hobble skirt is coming back!

District Fast Making Wartime Transition, Gas Sign-up Shows

By Roland Nicholson
Post Staff Writer

Washington is rapidly adjusting itself, it appeared yesterday, to the demands of an increasingly less strange economy in which goods are bought with coupons as well as money.

New evidence that the District is ready to dispense with frenzied excitement, confusion and tumultuous demands, and to proceed with the transition from a peacetime to wartime style of living in an orderly manner, came in the current registration for new ration books under the permanent gasoline program which goes into effect July 22.

On Thursday, first day of the three-day registration in 28 District schools, exactly 49,503 ration books were issued, this was 10 per cent more than rationing officials had anticipated, and only 234 less than were issued on the first day of the last registration in mid-May, but even so it was accomplished without crowding of registration points, without long lines of waiting applicants, and without the sound and fury which made the last signup such a frantic affair that most people would rather forget it.

As though to demonstrate that Thursday wasn't a fluke, yesterday's registrants were behaving in the same manner. They came through-

Nimitz Escaped Death in Air Crash

Arctic Battle

Nazi Claims In Sea Fray Called False

By International News Service

London, July 10.—A great air and sea battle in the Arctic Ocean north of Russia, in which the Nazi warships Tirpitz, Scheer, Hipper and Luetzow tried to join, was fought by British and American warships protecting a convoy of American and Russian merchantmen, it was declared tonight.

This is the battle in which the Germans claimed to have sunk 35 out of 38 merchant ships in the convoy, along with a heavy American cruiser.

"The German claims regarding the convoy losses are exaggerated," an informed source commented tonight.

It is believed that the first attack was made on the convoy last Saturday, well north and east of Bear Island in the Barents Sea, it was stated authoritatively.

Unofficial Comment

The comment, while unofficial, was the first British statement about a convoy battle in the Far North. The German propaganda machine has been talking of little else for the past ten days.

The first German claims stated that 28 ships and the American cruiser had been sunk. The following day the total was raised to 32, and today the German figure was put at 35.

The German superdreadnaught Tirpitz and her accompanying heavy cruisers and destroyers withdrew from the battle, it was believed, when a Russian submarine penetrated the screen around the huge battleship to score direct hits on the Tirpitz with two torpedoes.

Nothing Further Revealed

Nothing further has been learned in London about this Soviet report.

It was reported, however, that the convoy battle resulted in large-scale Russian aerial attacks on German air bases in northern Finland and Norway, where 57 German planes were destroyed or damaged.

German bombers, using these far northern bases and aided by the 24 hours of daylight now prevalent in the Arctic, have been hammering at the United Nations supply line to Russia.

The German radio today quoted statements of three alleged survivors who were aboard Nazi bombers which crashed into the American heavy cruiser in "suicide dives."

According to their supposed statements, the ship was torn apart by a terrific explosion and hundreds of American sailors were drowned.

The German radio did not explain how the "survivors" lived through the "suicide dives."

Admiral Slightly Hurt In Accident on Coast, Navy Reveals

By International News Service

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, who directed America's sea triumph over the Japanese at Midway Island, narrowly escaped death, it was revealed yesterday, when his plane crashed on the West Coast after a secret flying trip from his Hawaiian headquarters.

No details of the crash were given by the Navy, but its seriousness was underscored by the disclosure that Copilot Lieut. Thomas Roscoe of Oakland, Calif., had been killed.

Admiral Nimitz, one of the Navy's few "flying admirals" and a pioneer in developing a powerful air arm of the fleet, miraculously escaped with "minor injuries" that permitted him to continue the trip to an unannounced destination.

Nature of Flight Secret

The Navy merely said the plane crashed while attempting to land on a West Coast field and that besides the copilot's fatal injuries and hurts sustained by Admiral Nimitz, several other passengers were "shaken up."

Identities of others aboard the plane and the nature of the flight were not disclosed.

The report of the accident, however, came on the heels of another Navy Department announcement, which told of the decoration of Nimitz by Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States fleet.

Nimitz, who is 57 years old and who was named commander in chief of the Pacific fleet on December 17, received the Distinguished Service Medal for his direction of the battles of the Coral Sea and Midway Island and his exceptional service since he took over the Pacific command. The ceremony took place aboard Admiral King's flagship off the West Coast of the United States. The crash injuring Nimitz occurred later.

The citation which accompanied the award indicated that the two battles are regarded as of tremendous importance to the sea campaign of the United States.

Blocked Invasion of Australia

One Navy official said at the time of the report of the Coral Sea battle, that the victory of the United Nations forces had forestalled a then-impending invasion of Australia.

The citation read in part:

"In that position of great responsibility he exercised a sound judgment and decision in his employment and disposition of units in the Pacific fleet during the period immediately following our entry into the war with Japan.

"His conduct of the operations of the Pacific fleet resulting in successful actions against the enemy in the Coral Sea in May, 1942, and off Midway Islands in June, 1942, was characterized by unfailing judgment and sound decision, coupled with skill and vigor.

Nimitz, 'None the Worse,' Is Back in Hawaii

Honolulu, July 10 (INS).—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, was back at his headquarters at Pearl Harbor today "none the worse" for the recent airplane crash on the West Coast in which he received minor injuries, it was announced today.

The Navy authorized the following statement:

"Admiral Chester W. Nimitz at his Pearl Harbor headquarters emphasized that he is 'none the worse.'"

He was accompanied by two members of his staff, Capt. Lynde D. McCormack, Annapolis, Md., and Lieut. Commander Preston V. Mercer of Mercer, Mercer County, Pa., who also suffered minor cuts and bruises. These officers also returned to duty."

concentrated on Axis land lines.

Besides the 400 to 500 vehicles caught in one huge camp the R. A. F. was said to have destroyed 55 other trucks.

The American fliers, using Consolidated (Liberator) bombers, attacked shipping in the Mediterranean in daylight yesterday. The results were not announced.

It was certain that the Germans were moving supplies and reinforcements to their army threatening Alexandria, 70 miles to the east, because for the second time in a week the British told of attacks on Mediterranean convoys.

A British submarine sank two ships of a sea train bound for Libya, an admiralty announcement said. It was probable that the Liberators (Consolidateds), of the United States Army Air Corps assaulted the survivors of the same convoy.

On land, the Germans withdrew part of their already curved-back right wing northward, closer to the sea.

The reforming of the Axis right wing was forced by a clash in the southern sector between stabbing British armored columns and Axis tank forces, recorded by the British command communique. The effect is that Rommel's line now describes a rough arc from the coastal anchor on the left slightly west of El Alamein to the right flank in the southwest.

The German marshal's realignment—only a slight move—was a tactical corrective move to eliminate a sharp angle out of the line taken up several days ago to forestall a British flanking movement on the south, above the Qattara depression. The newest move was a further Axis safeguard against threatened envelopment.

Of the renewed American participation in the attacks on the Axis overseas supply line, the British communique said:

"United States Army heavy bombers operating over the Mediterranean shot down two enemy fighters which attempted to intercept."

It was learned that the U. S. Air Force was intercepted no fewer than three times by German fighters and that the two shot down into the sea were Messerschmitt 109s.

The Admiralty announced in a separate communique that a British submarine stalking an Axis convoy in the Mediterranean had destroyed two enemy ships en route to Libya. First it sank a medium-sized merchant ship out of the convoy, described as strongly protected and carrying supplies to Rommel, and later it sent down a naval auxiliary vessel of medium size.

There was no mention of the size of the convoy but apparently the rest of it and the supplies it carried will have to be dealt with by the continuing aerial attacks on ports of entry and ammunition trains crawling across the desert to Rommel's forces.

(The Italian claimed in a communique that an Italian torpedo plane had sunk a 5000-ton merchant ship out of a convoy in the eastern Mediterranean carrying armored cars and other vehicles to the British; and that Axis fighters shot down two British planes over North Africa and six over Malta at the cost of one Italian plane in the Malta engagement.)

In the immediate battle area, some 70 miles west of Alexandria, where the Axis forces have been deadlocked for a week after their long sprint across the desert, British fighter-bombers kept up the attack on the corraled enemy transport. The communique reported more than 50 vehicles were destroyed in current operations.

line drawn directly south of Moscow, and had virtually cleared the last Russian armed forces from the fertile farm lands of the Ukraine.

The Russians also disclosed increased enemy action nearer Rostov, southern gateway to the Caucasus. The communique reported the Germans had gone on the offensive in the locality of Lisichansk, on the Donets River about 140 miles northwest of Rostov.

The Russians also said fighting continued in the neighborhood of Kantemirovka.

Kantemirovka is just south of Rossosh and the Russian dispatches indicated the center of the fighting in the Rossosh area now was in that locality. It was the first time Kantemirovka has been mentioned in the Russian reports.

The two long steel arms of the enemy were reaching out to envelop a 100-mile stretch of the central waterway and its vital adjacent railway which links Moscow and the central armies with the rich Caucasus and the Red forces in the south.

(In Berlin the official German wireless said that despite Russian claims to the contrary the key railroad town of Voronezh already is in German hands.)

The German strategy was clearly aimed at wrapping the Red army forces west of the Don in a great sac and to drive on to the Volga, isolating the entire Caucasus.

Reds Counterattack Desperately

Marshal Timoshenko, realizing the peril, was reported counterattacking vigorously on the German flanks. He was pictured as determined to sell the rich earth and its industrial establishments only at the most exacting price in German lives and materiel.

The situation admittedly was serious. Red Sttar, the official army newspaper, called for a stand to the death and said the conditions near Voronezh were growing "more complicated" and near Rossosn "very difficult." Rossosh is but 235 miles from industrial Stalingrad, a key to the Caucasus.

Rossosh, on a tributary 20 miles from the big bend of the Don, is on the Moscow-Voronezh-Rostov railway, last remaining north-south railway still held by the Russians. The city and district now has become a battlefield. At the closest point, the Don flows within 45 miles of the Volga.

Russians Retreat, Nazis Say

(The German high command said that "the retreating enemy" is being pursued on a broad front in the south and that local resistance was broken. Russian attacks with tanks northeast of Voronezh were said to have collapsed with heavy casualties. Red attacks north and northwest of Orel with strong infantry and tank forces were "repulsed in violent fighting" and "local breaches were sealed off and mopped up in counterattacks." Encircled Russians southwest of Rzhev, nearest sector to Moscow, were said to have failed to break out. The Germans claimed 390 tanks were destroyed.)

Continued heavy fighting in the Kalinin sector northwest of Moscow foreshadowed another violent new offensive. The Germans gained a superiority in numbers there and increased their pressure with heavy attacks in several areas. The high command said that 4000 Germans were killed and 27 tanks destroyed near Kalinin in three days and that guerillas wrecked 9 German trains, blew up 12 bridges and killed 600 more of the foe.

Most assaults around Kalinin were reported repulsed, but dispatches said the Germans employed tanks, planes, infantry and cavalry to advance at some places. A column of 80 tanks progressed several miles along a road until counterattacks isolated the machines from supporting infantry and threw them on the defensive.

Whether the Germans were trying to make a major break-through there or merely straightening their lines was not clear. But the Red army artillery was reported blasting broad gaps in enemy concentrations.

The upper Don crossing was forced at two main bridgeheads at tremendous costs, the Russians said, but the main force of 250,000 men, 1000 tanks and an equal number of planes was decleared still at bay on the west bank.

The German command used five infantry, four tank and two motorized divisions to start the offensive from Kursk on June 28 and since then at least one more German infantry division, the first Hungarian infantry corps, several Hungarian cavalry squadrons and smaller numbers of Rumanian and Slovak mercenaries have been poured into the battle to replace the appalling casualties, front line dispatches said.

Red Star told of hard-hitting Russian counterattacks that "may have a serious influence over the position near Voronezh." The locale was not specified, but well could be in the Orel sector, 165 miles to the northwest, where German accounts have spoken for days of a Russian offensive.

Nazi Tank Army Poised

Marshal Ewald von Kleist, German commander before Voronezh, was pictured as poised with his fourth tank army on the west bank of the upper Don waiting to spring across it and when the eastern footholds were widened and secured.

The original crossings of the 500-700-foot-wide Don were covered by heavy artillery fire and mass air raids. German planes intensely bombed both the front lines and cities in the rear with formations of 20 to 25 craft. The Red air force stayed in the fight, downing 10 German planes in a single day of duels over the Don. The Russians also bombed enemy pontoon bridges and barges and hammered mightily at motor and mechanized columns.

Several German units which crossed the Don west of Voronezh penetrated the Russian line and were engaged in severe combat. The Red army's antitank artillery sprung into action taking a heavy toll. Dispatches said the Germans drove wedges in several sectors but that efforts to broaden the field of operations were repulsed.

The battle, however, moved perilously closer to Voronezh which lies 10 miles east of the Don on the west bank of the Voronezh River, a tributary.

Russian tanks in one counter-attack on the upper Don were reported to have rolled back the Nazis and seized several points.

The Russian retreats appeared to have been in good order, for even the German communiques failed to make their customary claims of vast numbers of prisoners and booty.

The German casualties were so severe that the Russians said officially that Hitler was forced to "withdraw considerable forces from France and dispatch them to the East."

Allied Planes Blast Japs At Nanchang

By the Associated Press

Chungking (Saturday), July 11. Allied bombers have delivered a second smashing blow to Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province, sinking one transport in the river and destroying 10 Japanese planes on the ground, Chinese dispatches reported today.

Allied planes heavily bombed this Japanese base last week. During that raid two, or possibly three, Japanese hangars were struck down by direct hits and three Japanese planes were hit on one runway.

All the Allied planes returned safely from the second attack on Nanchang, the dispatches said. The term Allied planes is generally taken to mean United States machines belonging to the regular Air Force in China.

Meanwhile Chinese forces in Kiangsi were reported pushing the Japanese back at several places.

The Chinese high command announced yesterday the recapture of Chungshu, 45 miles southwest of Nanchang, in a sharp setback of the invaders' latest push along the Kiangsi rail line to Hunan Province. The Chinese also announced the recapture of Tsungjen, 70 miles south of Nanchang.

The official communique confirmed Chinese reports Thursday that a Japanese force of 30,000 had been ambushed and beaten back in heavy fighting in Kiangsi.

Fighting has flared up anew in Chekiang Province, the high command said, after the Japanese, with 10,000 reinforcements, struck south three days ago from Lishui, 125 miles south of Hankchow.

(The Japanese reported yesterday that they had captured Tsingtien, 30 miles southwest of Lishui, and were approaching the seaport of Wenchow.)

R. A. F. Blasts Jap Ships; Indian Thrust Hinted

New Delhi, July 10 (AP).—Announcing widespread air attacks on barges and other river craft far in the interior of Burma, the R. A. F. disclosed today that the Japanese were moving up reinforcements for what was believed to be an offensive against India.

Although the communique did not mention a possible attack on India, its references to attacks on barges in the upper reaches of the Chindwin River indicated the Japanese were moving troops and materials toward the Indian frontier.

Bombing and machinegun attacks were made on river craft in three different areas, the communique said, indicating extensive Japanese movements. These areas included the lower Chindwin between Mingen and Kani, the upper Chindwin at Masein and Mawlik, and the upper Irrawady at Myitkyina.

At the latter point the communique said barges were attacked from low level and "many casualties were reported among the enemy's forces." This was interpreted as meaning the barges were being used to transport troops.

The communique also announced that the Mandalay-Myitkyina railway had been bombed and that direct hits were scored on locomotives.

Argentina Speeds Moves Against Axis

By the United Press

Buenos Aires, July 10.—Argentina took its second step in less than 24 hours to speed up the action of anti-Axis resolutions ratified at the Rio de Janeiro foreign ministers' conference when President Ramon S. Castillo tonight appointed a three-man commission to plans new measures designed to safeguard continental security.

The first step was a government move toward severing communications with the Axis and Axis-dominated territories to comply with resolution No. 40 of the Rio de Janeiro conference.

The commission, to include Undersecretary of the Interior Dr. Jose C. Castells, Under Secretary of Finance Dr. Alonso Irigoyen and Director of the Economic Division of the Foreign Office Dr. Carlos L. Torriani, was charged by Castillo with "suggesting new measures to the President and applying the necessary penalties against proved infractions of government decrees."

In the move to sever communications the ministry of interior ordered the director of posts and telegraphs to comply with resolution No. 40.

The ministry's order, instructing that all radio-telephonic communications with the Axis powers be severed immediately, affects direct radio-telephone and telegraphic circuits at present functioning between Buenos Aires and Berlin, Rome and Tokyo.

(Argentina and Chile are the only American nations maintaining diplomatic and economic relations with the Axis powers. There was no indication that, if Argentina severs communications, disruption of diplomatic relations would follow.)

Norway Seeks U. S. Ship Aid

By Eric Hawkins.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 10.—An early agreement between the free Norwegian government in London and the United States for the replacement of some of the 300 merchant ships Norway has lost in the war is expected by Johan Nygaardsvold, Norwegian prime minister, who has just returned from a ten-week visit to America.

In an interview today in which he summarized the results of his trip, Nygaardsvold said shipping was one of the vital questions he went to Washington to discuss. "When the Norwegian government in London took over our merchant fleet there were more than 1000 vessels aggregating about five million tons with crews numbering between 25,000 and 30,000.

We have lost 300 of those ships by enemy action and it is our urgent task to replace them. We have an agreement with the British government for a share of new British-built ships and we hope soon to reach a similar agreement with the United States."

The premier said "ships are being turned out with amazing speed" on the West Coast.

"I was also struck by all other war activities everywhere in the United States and Canada," he added. "I can testify to the depth of America's sympathy for Norway and the other Nazi-trampled countries."

41 Survivors Of U. S. Ship Reach Africa

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, July 10.—Forty-one survivors of an American freighter torpedoed and sunk in the Mozambique Channel, off Madagascar, have arrived at Inhambane, in lower Portuguese East Africa, it was announced today.

The dispatch from Lourenco Marques, the connecting point for the exchange of Japanese and American nationals who are expected there shortly, also said that Axis submarine attacks on allied shipping in the channel were continuing.

Forty survivors of a Greek freighter arrived at Memba and 40 others from an unidentified steamer arrived at Ponta Caldeira. All these ports are hundreds of miles apart.

The Mozambique Channel is between Portuguese East Africa and the French island of Madagascar, which is being occupied by British troops. It is a vital waterway for Allied convoys to India and the Middle East.

Japanese submarines were reported to have attacked at least nine Allied and neutral ships in that area within the past few days.

In an effort to combat the Axis submarine warfare, the British announced yesterday they had landed and occupied another small French island, Mayotte, at the top of the channel, on July 2. There were no casualties.

Navy Announces 5 More Sinkings

sociated Press tally of Allied and neutral ship losses in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor swelled to 354.

The other U-boat victims announced yesterday were two medium-sized British ships, a small United States merchantman and a medium-sized Belgian cargo ship. No members of the crew of the Honduran ship, shelled off the north coast of Cuba, were lost.

Two torpedoes and shells from the submarine's large deck gun, blasted one of the British merchantmen to the bottom of the South Atlantic June 1, killing three crewmen on duty in the engine room. Among the vessel's 78 survivors was Quartermaster B. G. Cook of London, who described the raider as being the largest submarine he had ever seen, and "big enough to carry a plane."

Cook and 22 others were adrift 11 days before being rescued by another British ship. Two lifeboats with the remaining survivors were reported to have been landed at a West Indian island.

A 30-year-old submarine commander, speaking perfect English, pointed out the shortest route to land to 86 survivors of the second British cargo vessel—wishing them good luck and expressing hopes of meeting them again.

The lone fatality was a British Indian, who was blown to pieces by the torpedo. Two hours after continuous shelling, the merchantman sank. The marauder signaled another submarine as it cruised away.

Torpedoed May 4

The United States vessel was torpedoed May 4 off the coast of South America. Eleven of the merchantman's 29 crew members were killed when the torpedo exploded.

The explosion of another vessel plying the Carribbean placed crewmen aboard the Belgian cargo ship on the alert and accounted for the loss of but one of her 48 seamen when an Axis submarine attacked and sank her minutes later. Survivors said an Allied warship speeding to their rescue dropped a barrage of depth bombs in the immediate area, but without apparent results. The merchantman's second officer, Eric Van Meerbeek, said that after hearing the explosion of the other ship Capt. Jan Van Der Bossche maneuvered his vessel to avoid two torpedoes fired by the submarine a mile away.

"We could see the third torpedo coming toward us from about half a mile away," said Van Meerbeek, "but it was too late to escape it." Crew members said they did not know what had happened to the second vessel and her crew.

Mystery Sub Passenger

A Gulf Coast Port, July 10 (AP).—Belief that an unidentified middle-aged man who stood apart on the deck of a submarine that sank their ship might have been a friendly naval officer held hostage was expressed by British seamen who returned here today after losing their ship to a pair of U-boats working together.

Survivors reported that the unidentified man was dressed in a grayish-blue uniform which no one recognized.

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The German government was reported yesterday to be kidnaping boys of 15 from Belgium for front line military service to relieve a critical man power shortage which threatens Hitler's offensive.

The Office of War Information yesterday revealed foreign broadcasts and press reports have told of indignant protests from Belgian parents whose young sons have been literally stolen for Reich armed duty. Other reports, OWI stated, disclosed Hitler is drafting 16-year-old boys in Yugoslavia for military service.

At the same time the OWI reported increasing revolt against Hitler's oppressive tactics in Nazi-held countries of Europe—particularly his recruiting of children for war labor work in Germany.

Yugoslavian boys are being drafted into the German army without medical examination or other formalities because of the Fuehrer's pressing need for additional strength, OWI explained, predicting that similar measures will be undertaken shortly in other occupied areas.

Nazi Youth Leader Slain

The leader of the Nazi Youth League at Koenigsberg was recently assassinated by Hans Schultz, a student at Koenigsberg University, in protest against the 15-year-olds being sent to the front.

More than 3000 children from the Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia are now said to be working in German factories. Berlin broadcasts admit children are being gathered from other occupied countries for labor in the Reich. A recent broadcast disclosed Belgian girls are being sent to Germany for labor service.

Non-German children, while working in Reich forests, plants and factories, will be taught the German language and will be subjected to a special course of Nazi propaganda, OWI declared.

Meanwhile, increasing violence in the struggle of Norwegians against German occupation authorities and the puppet Quisling government was reported from various radio and newspaper sources in Europe.

Armed warfare between guerillas and German troops, and strikes of workers in Norway against forced recruiting of labor for Germany were said to be more prevalent and gaining momentum daily.

Several Strikes Reported

Norwegian guerillas, who have harassed Nazi authorities ever since the invasion of Norway, were said to have clashed with German units in the Province of Finnmarken.

Several strikes, including one in a munitions plant at Trondheim, were reported to have been inspired by undercover patriotic newspapers in protest against the Quisling agreement to send 50,000 workers from Norway to the Reich.

The clergy, persecuted and hounded by Quislings, refused to return to the church despite a violent propaganda campaign while approximately 2000 school teachers are reported to be in Nazi concentration camps for declining to join a Quisling teachers' union to teach a pro-Nazi doctrine.

and the other attempting unsuccessfully to reinforce Tobruk.

Maydon said that the bombers set fire to an Italian cruiser and that the two battleships disappeared behind a haze of smoke. Later he brought his craft into attacking position.

"We fired a salvo of torpedoes and got a hit on a Littoria class battleship," he said. "While our torpedoes were going off, the situation was confused further by another bombing attack.

"I don't think the Italians knew what hit them. We heard a series of explosions as the torpedo tore into the battleship. We had fired all our torpedo tubes when we spotted a burning cruiser escorted by another cruiser and destroyer. We reloaded swiftly and came to within 5500 yards. We noticed then that the cruiser was of the Trento class and had stopped. Smoke and flames were pouring from the foremost funnel and two destroyers were circling the ship, throwing out a smoke screen.

"We closed in slowly to avoid causing unnecessary noise. Then we fired and hit the cruiser with two torpedoes. I didn't see her sink, but we saw the destroyer picking up survivors. We heard that the cruiser sank within three minutes.

"She left a hell of a cloud of smoke."

Serb High Command Returns Home to Plan Offensive

London, July 10 (AP).—The Yugoslav military cabinet announced today that its high command has been transferred back from Cairo to Yugoslavia and that the field commander of the 200,000 to 300,000 fighting patriots, Gen Draja Mihailovic, had been named chief of staff. He already is minister of war.

"It is a sign that the zero hour is approaching and that the high command is preparing the people of Yugoslavia to rise against the common enemy," the cabinet announcement said. The shift was ordered by King Peter, who is in Canada on a tour.

Despite the acute shortage of all materiel, the Yugoslav army under its almost legendary leader has been increasing its devastating raids against Italian, German and Balkan occupying forces.

The duel position of General Mihailovic gives him full military and administrative power as well as command of the entire Yugoslav territory. The government said the appointment was unique because it probably is the first time in history that a war minister and high command were authorized to organize a campaign in occupied territory.

Rubber Exports Curbed

Guayaquil, Ecuador, July 10 (AP).—The Ecuadorean government issued a decree today setting up export controls limiting shipments of rubber to "certain countries"—which was understood to mean the United States only.

Unlucky Thirteen?

Moscow, July 10 (INS).—Thirteen million German troops have been put in action on the Russian front, a pamphlet issued by the Soviet army declared today. Of this number, 27 per cent, or 3,510,000, were said to be casualties.

Worker Held For Carrying Air Base Plans

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., July 10.—R. G. Danner, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office here, announced today the arrest of a man listed as Walter D. Gustafson, 24, of Minneapolis, on a charge of attempting to bring into the United States a confidential blueprint of a Caribbean Army air base.

Danner said a blueprint was found concealed on Gustafson's person by customs agents at the Pan American Airport here July 7.

Gustafson, Danner said, had been employed by the construction company which was building the base. He was en route home at the time of the arrest.

At a commissioner's hearing Gustafson pleaded innocence. Bond was set at $5000 pending another hearing later this month.

Spy Charge Against Bahr Calls for Death

Newark, N. J., July 10 (AP).—Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, accused of going to Germany as an exchange student and returning as a Nazi spy, faced the death penalty as a Federal grand jury prepared today to consider charges against him.

Attorney General Francis Biddle said in Washington the jury would be asked to indict Bahr on a charge of violating the espionage law, which provides the death penalty or imprisonment up to 30 years for violations committed during war time.

Bahr, arraigned today before Judge William F. Smith in United States District Court, was held without bail and ordered kept in Hudson County Jail, Jersey City, until the grand jury could consider charges of conspiracy to violate the espionage law and use of a mutilated passport.

Monroney Attacks Secrecy of Trial

Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma yesterday blasted at the secret proceedings under which the Army is trying eight Nazi saboteurs in a statement in which he charged that the procedure violates "the democratic principles for which America is fighting."

While it is true that some phases of the proceedings should not be made public for reasons of the national security, Mr. Monroney said, "the stiff and inadequate Army communiques that suppress all news under the guise of withholding military information strain our credulity."

Mr. Monroney said the trial presented no problem "that a capable publicist cannot handle under normal censorship."

Plane Tire Blowout Kills 3 at Navy Field

San Diego, July 10 (AP).—A plane thrown out of control by a tire blowout killed three men at the Naval Air Station today as they were observing the landing. The pilot was uninjured.

The dead: Robert L. Loudermilk, Comanche, Tex.; William Gorman Clark, El Monte, Calif., and Ralph D. Bentley, San Diego.

Confessions Of 8 Spies Put Before Board

the commission permitted the United States Army Signal Corps to make photographs and silent motion pictures of the trial scene.

Most of the day was taken up by the testimony of an FBI agent and by the reading of documents.

Counsel for both sides stated to the commission that the great volume of evidence to be introduced was expected to prolong the trial.

The commission will sit on Saturday.

General McCoy's statement, like those he gave out after the Wednesday and Thursday sessions, was merely a naked caption for the stark drama being enacted in the makeshift courtroom on the fifth floor of the Department of Justice Building.

The general has told nothing about the prisoners except that they are before the commission. They are taken to the hearing in the darkness of prison vans, with two husky soldiers on each side of every spy. Nobody but their lawyers and their guards has seen them since they were locked up in the District Jail a week ago.

One of the guards said the eight Germans come out of the hearing, shackled and sullen, like men without hope as they are without rights, except the short thrift granted to spies by the laws of war.

Only one man, said the guard, seems free of the entire despair which has engulfed his fellows. This is George John Dasch, 39, who clings to a hope that he will be spared for a prison cell when his former comrades are consigned to the gallows or the firing squad.

The eight spies made statements after they were captured, in which they evidently made disclosures about themselves and their enterprise.

All eight had come to the United States in years past. They found work, homes and education. Two became citizens; several married. They went back to Germany, back to Hitler's Reich, and became soldiers, carefully picked to learn the arts of spying and sabotage. Then they came again to America, with weapons and dynamite, forged credentials and $170,000 for bribes and expenses.

Dasch led one party of four, which crept off a U-boat at Amagansett Beach, Long Island, and are reported to have tried to bribe a Coast Guardsman who stumbled upon them while they were hiding their clothing and their equipment. Four big boxes were found buried in the sand there, crammed with tools and explosives. With Dasch were Ernest Peter Burger, a dark-haired, slender man of 36 with flat ears and a small mouth; Heinrich Harm Heinck, a 35-year-old machinist with high forehead and a sharp chin; and Robert Quirin, 34, whose wavy hair is streaked with gray and whose wide eyes have small gleaming pupils.

Edward John Kerling, square-jawed, even featured and 33, was the chief of the four who landed off another submarine near Jacksonville, Fla. With him were Werner Thiel, a round-faced tool maker of 34 who used the alias of John Thomas; Herman O. Neubauer, a 32-year-old seaman with a Hitler-esque mustache; and Herbert H. Haupt, a 22-year-old youth who looks more like a collar ad in a college paper than a member of a crew of enemy killers.

Haupt was brought up in Chicago, where the link was found between the eight Germans and other espionage operations previously uncovered in the United States. Waiting to testify about these is Mrs. Agnes Jordan, whose home is close to Chicago's Haus Vaterland, where Dr. Otto Willumeit had his headquarters when he was the Midwest fuehrer of the Deutscher-Amerikaner Bund.

Dr. Willumeit pleaded guilty three weeks ago to an indictment of conspiracy to provide Japan and Germany with American military secrets. Mrs. Jordan's son, Larry, was a sergeant at Bataan, where he was wounded. He has been missing since Bataan fell.

The Germans confessed in specific detail their campaign of terror and destruction against America's war production.

Their objectives were as audacious as their invasion was fantastic. Here are some of the things they were sent to destroy:

The hydroelectric plants at Niagara Falls.

The plants of the Aluminum Co. of America at Alcoa, Tenn., East St. Louis, Ill., and Massena, N. Y.

The Hellgate Bridge over the East River at New York.

The Ohio River Canal and locks at Cincinnati and the canal and locks along the Mississippi at St. Louis.

Military Still Rules News, Says Davis

OWI to Give True, Complete Picture Of War's Events, Declares New Chief

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Elmer Davis, whom President Roosevelt picked to take charge of the job of telling America about the war, yesterday conceded that the story of fighting still will be told largely at the will of the Army and Navy.

Within the limits of military security, however, he promised that the new Office of War Information, which he left a $50,000-a-year radio job to head, will make every effort to give the American people a "clear accurate and complete picture" of their greatest of all wars.

The promise was made at a press conference at which Davis simultaneously announced the appointment of Gardner Cowles, jr., newspaper and magazine publisher, to take charge of all domestic operations of OWI, and made public a general order to all Federal agencies covering the manner in which war information is to be handled, effective Monday.

"Military Security"

Twenty-four hours after a showdown conference at the White House over direction of war information, Davis indicated that the Army and Navy still will determine when and how much the Nation is to be told about battle progress. Disclosing that the services have agreed to keep him in constant touch with developments and to permit him to make suggestions when he feels not enough information is being made available, Davis said questions of military security still will be decided by the generals and admirals.

Since coming to Washington, Davis stated, he has learned that questions of military security cover a lot more ground than people on the outside are apt to think."

No one in OWI will be permitted to discuss military information for publication, he added. Comment and background on military developments will continue to come from the services, along with battle communiques.

Davis went to see President Roosevelt with War Secretary Stimson Thursday specifically to break the secrecy surrounding the trial of eight Nazi saboteurs before a military commission. He succeeded to the extent of obtaining formal admission from the military that the Nazis were being tried and a few meager details about their trial.

Far From Satisfied

Davis yesterday made no secret of the fact that he is far from satisfied with the results of his conference. He said he was in favor of trial publicity "except when the National security may be impaired by contact with the evidence."

Indicating that the rule of secrecy surrounding the trial had been applied to him nearly as rigidly as it has been applied to reporters, Davis said he did not nokw enough about the trial evidence to know whether full silence is justified or whether the Army is right in holding that evidence of value to the enemy cannot be separated from other evidence.

While Americans universally appear to believe that the Nazi trial procedure is proper, "it would have been helpful to public sentiment if there had been some reporting," Davis said.

Referring to the problem of eliminating conflicts and inconsistencies in Army and Navy communiques, Davis stated he could "conceive of irreconcilable conflicts that may have to be taken to a higher authority," meaning the President.

"I should say that this office (OWI) could only offer its services (to the Army and Navy) hoping that we may be able to harmonize them—perhaps," he said.

"No Intention of Resigning"

Davis volunteered this comment on reports that he would resign in view of the "brush-off" treatment he has received from the services:

"In my opinion, as far as I can tell, the story is incorrect. I have no intention of resigning."

Insofar as he has been able to observe, Davis stated, he has been unable to find "any mood in the services to hold back bad news just because it is bad."

"This office (OWI) will never stand for that," he declared, while in a letter to all Federal department and agency heads he asserted:

"This is a people's war, and to win it the people should know as much about it as they can. This office will do its best to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, both at home and abroad. Military information that would aid the enemy must be withheld, but within that limitation we shall try to give the people a clear, complete and accurate picture."

To Take Them as They Come

Davis was reminded of a classic example of official inconsistency—President Roosevelt's recent optimistic statement about auto tires in the face of the gloomiest of reports from subordinates. He was asked what he would do if such a situation should occur again. He said:

"I am going to deal with these problems as they arise."

Although President Roosevelt's order authorizes Davis to issue "binding" information directives to Federal agencies, Davis told nearly 300 reporters during an hour-long press conference that, for the present, he would not fully exercise his powers with the armed services "because I am not a military man."

Emphatically, Davis declared that he would in no manner function as a news censor. Reporters, he said, would continue to get information from regular sources under operation of an "open door" policy promulgated in his letter to Federal agency chiefs.

Sherwood Heads Overseas Branch

In his information "Regulation No. 1" Davis instructed agency heads to discontinue all nonessential phases of their information programs.

Cowles, president of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, Look Magazine and the Iowa Broadcasting Co., and vice president of the Minneapolis Star Journal, will be one of Davis' three assistant directors. Robert Sherwood, the playwright, will be in charge of the office's overseas branch, and Archibald MacLeish, the Congressional Librarian, will be responsible for adjustment of interdepartmental policy differences.

Robert Horton, former information director for the Office of Emergency Management, will have charge of a central news bureau under Cowles. Lowell Mellett will head a motion pictures bureau, while his Information Center will be taken over by a Public Inquiries Bureau under Katherine C. Blackburn. At the same time reduced appropriations for Mellett's Office of Government Reports is forcing the closing of 29 of his 60 OGR field offices.

out the day in steady streams that indicated the total two-day signup might reach close to 100,000, although a definite count on yesterday's issuance of A books will not be available until this morning.

Thursday's heaviest turnout was at Woodrow Wilson High School where registrars issued 5129 books. Runner-up was Coolidge, with 3901 books, and Western High School was in third place with 3657.

Both Wilson and Western reported yesterday that registration was equalling that of the previous day while Coolidge reported its turnout was slightly heavier than Thursday's. And all three schools reported that applicants were coming not in erratic droves but in a steady stream.

Partially responsible, of course, for the lack of confusion was the fact that only A books were being issued, but registrars and registration officials were most heartened by the steady, orderly flow of applicants.

N To Z Groups Today

Yesterday's registration was supposed to take care of applicants whose last names began with letters from F through M, although this is not a fast rule, and it was estimated, in advance, that approximately 36 per cent of the 125,000 motorists expected to get books here would be accommodated on Friday.

Registration today will be for those in the N to Z groups, which it is believed will account for 35 per cent of the total. The registration centers will be open only from 7 to 1 p. m. today, but all of the approximately 2500 registrars will be on duty as contrasted with the two preceding days when they divided forces and came to work in two shifts.

For the benefit of those who came in late:

Auto tax stamps are not demanded as a requisite for securing the ration books.

Persons may register at any school most convenient to them, but they are urged to go to the same school at which they registered last time so as to equalize the load on the registrars, who are distributed in accordance with the registration loads developed last May.

They must take their auto registration cards with them.

Two-Month Time Limit

The A books contain 48 coupons, distributed eight to a page in the six-page leaflet. Each coupon is good for 4 gallons of gas. The books must last a year, with each page of coupons having a two-month time limit. Coupons may be used at any time during their two-month life, but any left over after this period expires are void.

Motorists who believe themselves entitled to supplemental rations may secure application blanks for additional allowances when they register, but the four-page form must be filled out at home and filed with the local rationing boards, not with the schools. The rationing boards, incidentally, have been urged to be tough with supplemental applications and to decide them strictly on their merits.

The current, temporary ration cards will be no good on or after July 22, even though the supplies to which they entitle the holder have not been exhausted. The Office of Price Administration said yesterday it had no regulations forbidding motorists to fill up their tanks and extra cans on July 21, if their ration cards entitle them to that much gas, but warned they must find a filling station dealer willing to sell them the gas and, in addition, must comply with strict local laws which limit the movement and storage of inflammables in cans.

Commercial Books

Meantime, L. P. Steuart, chairman of the District rationing board, said local boards here had received 761 applications for Class A commercial operators. Motorists in this class must go to the boards, not to the schools, for their books.

The schools at which motorists may secure their ration books today are listed below:

3 Businessmen Held in Navy Contract Case

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., July 10.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced today the arrest of three Norfolk businessmen, charged with irregularities in the performance of contracts to supply provisions to the Navy.

C. E. Hennrich, FBI special agent in charge of the Norfolk office, identified the three as C. A. Roberts, owner of a seafood concern; Thomas Spicuzza, owner of a fruit company, and Marvin Lee Brangan, vice president of a produce company.

Roberts was charged with violation of title 18, section 80, of the U. S. Code; Spicuzza with offering a bribe for influencing decision of Government officials in connection with foodstuff supplies for the Navy, and Brangan with offering bribes in an effort to obtain additional business with the Government for his company.

All pleaded innocent this afternoon before United States Commissioner Harry Brinkley, who continued the hearing to July 24 and fixed bond at $2500 each.

Contracts involved in the FBI's investigation amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars, Hennrich said.

Washingtonians Sued For $10,000 in Crash

E. Newton Steely, jr., through his father, E. Newton Steely, of University Park, Md., has filed suit in the Circuit Court at Rockville against Cyril L. Coombs and Everet L. Hewins, both of Washington, for $10,000 for injuries it is alleged he sustained in an automobile accident near Brandywine, Md., May 10, 1940.

According to the declaration, the plaintiff was hurt when an automobile in which he was riding, owned by Coombs, and one owned by Hewins and in charge of his agent, O. H. Kearns, collided.

The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Thomas M. Anderson of Rockville.

Mid-Air Crash Fatal To Baton Rouge Pilot

New York, July 10 (INS).—Two Army planes collided in air 6500 feet above Islip Terrace, Long Island, today and one of the pilots was killed when his single-seater crashed after the collision, Army authorities reported. The second pilot managed to glide his plane 27 miles to Mitchel Field, where he landed safely.

The victim was identified as Lieut. Lyman F. Rhodes, 23, of Baton Rouge, La. The pilot who landed safely was Capt. Philip T. Turkey of Camp Elizabeth, Me.

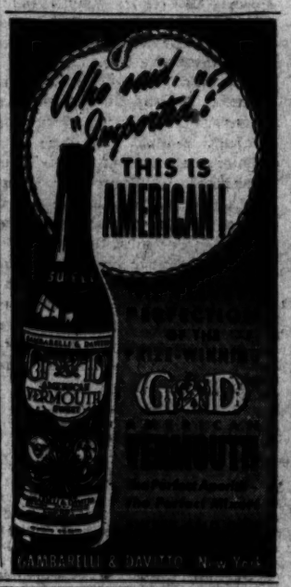
Baltimore, July 10 (AP).—Andrew Henry, 34, Negro, was hanged today at 12:01 a. m. at the Maryland penitentiaryy for a slaying in Dorchester County. He was convicted May 7.



Midwestern Publisher Davis' Aide

An imaginative, squash-playing journalist, co-czar of the Middle West's most powerful and far-flung public information empire, is Elmer Davis' choice for his right-hand man in the new Office of War Information.

He is 39-year-old Gardner (Mike) Cowles, jr., who with his older brother, John, holds sway over the Nation's second largest picture magazine in point of circulation, two newspapers, including Iowa's dominant daily, and four radio stations.

"Mike" Cowles is president of Look Magazine, vice president and associate publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, president of the Iowa and South Dakota Broadcasting Companies, and vice president of the Minneapolis Star Journal.

Alter ego of the brothers Cowles (pronounced Coles) is their 81-year-old father, Gardner Cowles, sr., who founded the empire which the sons now rule with his counsel. Twenty-nine years ago he bought the Des Moines Register and Leader, now the Register (morning) and Tribune (afternoon), of which he is still nominally president, publisher and treasurer.

Practically brought up in the offices of his father's paper, "Mike" Cowles took over the city editorship in 1925 after graduation from Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard University, where he was editor of the Crimson, undergraduate daily newspaper.

The following year he became news editor, the next year associate managing editor and then managing editor. Made executive editor in 1931, he has been associate publisher since 1939.

Member of a traditionally Republican clan, "Mike" Cowles was one of Wendell Willkie's early supporters for the party's nomination for President in 1940.

Popular, somewhat breezy, he was once an enthusiastic airplane pilot but let his license lapse for lack of time. He introduced squash racquets to Des Moines, helped to build the first courts and was twice city champion.

Besides his journalistic connections, he is a director of the Bankers Life Co. and the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank & Trust Co., president of the Gardner Cowles Foundation, treasurer of the Des Moines Public Welfare Bureau, a trustee of Drake University and a member of the Harvard Fund Council.

He is also a member of the board of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, a former director of the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce, member of the Greater Des Moines committee and treasurer of the Harvard class of 1925.

Richard L. Wilson, Washington correspondent of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, said he understood Cowles planned to keep all of his private jobs while serving as assistant director of the OWI.

Cowles is expected to arrive in about 10 days to take over the new post. He is now negotiating for a hotel room, as he plans to leave his wife and three small children in Des Moines for the present.

Nelson Lauds Production by Auto Industry

By David J. Wilkie.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, July 10.—The factories of the United States will turn out war goods to a value of 45 billion dollars in the current year, WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson told members of the Automotive Council for War Production here tonight.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the council, organized by the automotive industry to expedite war production, Nelson said that next year he expected the figure will rise to "70 or 75 billions at current prices."

"I do not believe," Nelson said, "that it ever can rise much above that figure because I think that is just about the limit that our economy can stand. The materials which would be needed to get production substantially higher than that simply are not available, and as far as we can see now they can not be made available. But in any case, getting up to the 45 billion dollar level this year will be a splendid achievement and raising the level to 75 billions next year will be nothing less than magnificent."

Gets Major Role

"In this great program," Nelson continued, "a major role has been assigned to the automotive industry. When peak rates of production are reached, this industry will be producing war goods at a rate of approximately 12 billion dollars a year. This is three times as large as the industry's estimated 1941 sales of four billions; it will represent approximately one-sixth of the entire war production effort of the whole United States."

Reviewing part of the industry's accomplishments thus far, Nelson said:

"During May, this industry turned out 63 million dollars worth of aircraft engines and 24 million dollars worth of tanks. That is cause for honest pride, of course. Yet the bulk of production of those two important items came from new plants started prior to Pearl Harbor. Furthermore, by the time this year ends we have got to raise airplane engine production to a rate of better than 150 million dollars a month and tank production must increase more than fourfold. In addition, while it is true that during April—the last month for which complete figures are available—more than 80 per cent of this industry's total output consisted of war goods, it is also true that total production by the industry during April had not yet reached half the level of peak monthly production in 1941. In other words, the hard part of this job has barely started.

Asks "Two for One"

Nelson warned that the job ahead is a tremendous one. "We have got to find every possible way," he said, "of making one hour's work do the work of two—of making 1 pound of vital material do what formerly took 2 pounds. I am going to ask this industry to take the lead in bringing this about.

"Military needs, foreign needs, domestic needs—these must be most carefully adjusted, and I believe that our recently aligned War Production Board gives us the machinery by which those adjustments can be made . . .

"It looks as if we would have a rather long war. If that unhappily turns out to be the case, we are going to be tried very hard in every conceivable way. Yet we can face those trials without flinching because I think we have learned some things about ourselves in these last few months. . . .

"We have in America the one great common aim which all free men must have—to protect our freedom, to guard it fiercely because we know its worth and to make it mean real freedom for all of us in all ways. We are united now to realize that aim. When the war has been won, we can bring the great American ideal a long step closer to reality for all men."

Arlington Weighs Police Annex

The Arlington County (Va.) Board yesterday referred to County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan a proposal for construction of a $4000 temporary building behind the courthouse to relieve congestion of the police department quarters.

Hanrahan was instructed to study the problem after several board members remarked that other departments were equally crowded.

OPA, OCD Salaries Face Curb

when its rolls included a battery of recreation coordinators.

Amends Price Control Act

One effect of the McKellar plan would be to amend the Price Control Act, which left power of appointing OPA personnel to Henderson, so long as he followed the civil service regulations.

Among those who would come up for review under the McKellar plan would be the directors of all the eight regional OPA offices and all 51 State offices. Lowest salary of the State directors is fixed at $5600. In addition, the head of all major divisions in a typical State office—inspection, consumer, price, rationing, legal and administrative—would be subject to Senate review.

Of the 34,500 employes now at work for the OPA, it was estimated that about 1500 were drawing salaries of $4500 or more.

The Appropriations Committee action on Henderson's funds struck a new total for the amount necessary to conduct his price fixing, rent control, and rationing programs through the next year. Henderson first wanted 210 million dollars for the job; the Budget Bureau approved 161 millions; a House subcommittee set the figure at 95 millions while the House followed the recommendation of its full Appropriations Committee in giving OPA 75 millions.

Henderson Puts Up a Fight

Henderson, it was learned, had put in a last-minute bid to the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee for 140 millions. This group, and the full Senate Appropriations Committee agreed on the 120-million-dollar figure.

Senator McKellar said that most of the reductions below Henderson's last "rock bottom" estimate had been made in the provisions for lawyers, inspectors and the requirements for travel and printing and binding.

He said that he would seek Senate action Monday on the bill, which also carries funds for the war work of 17 other Federal agencies, totaling about $1,853,000,000. The agencies include the War Production Board, War Shipping Administration, Board of Economic Warfare and others.

While Senate action on the 120-million-dollar OPA fund was a question, Chairman Cannon, of the House Appropriations Committee, said that the House might be disposed to raise its original amount, and he suggested that the 95-millions first suggested by a House subcommittee might be a likely compromise figure.

Besides the provision for Senate review of OPA personnel, the committee approved these amendments:

1. An outright ban on use of OPA funds for paying subsidies. Administration officials, in and out of the OPA, have been advancing the subsidy plan as a necessary accompaniment to price fixing, to help carry firms which are squeezed by price control and to prevent a general crackup in price ceilings.

2. Prohibition against using OPA funds to enforce price ceilings on farm products or commodities manufactured in whole or in part from agricultural products until the Secretary of Agriculture had determined that the ceilings would give the farmer a return not less than the highest of the following: (a) 110 per cent of parity, (b) the market price on October 1, 1941, (c) the market price on December 15, 1941, of (d) the average price between July 1, 1919, and June 30, 1929.

3. A ban on using OPA funds to enforce a price increase to cover transportation costs for any area where the actual transportation costs have not risen.

Russell Protests Gas Boost

The latter proposal was indorsed by the committee after Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia had protested that the recent 2½-cent-a-gallon increase in gasoline prices in the Eastern Seaboard States was unfair to residents of his State and other nearby areas, since gas for Georgia was still coming through pipeline facilities for which the cost had not changed.

Senator McKellar said that the 120 million dollars for OPA would at least permit the agency to keep all the employes now on the rolls. It was estimated that 120 millions would provide close to 50,000 employes, against the 66,000 which would have been authorized by the Budget Bureau's 161 million figure.

Other major items, which committee members said were virtually unchanged from the House totals, included $1,100,000,000 for the War Shipping Administration; 150 millions for the smaller war plants corporation; 100 millions for the Presidents Emergency Fund; $68,546,300 for the War Production Board, and $36,677,450 for Civilian Pilot Training.

Also carried in the bill are these approximate amounts: 73 millions for the Office of Scientific Research and Development; 70 millions for the War Relocation Authority; $28,638,000 for the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs; $26,500,000 for the Office of Censorship, and five million dollars for flight strips.

Finland Reports Russia's Attempt On Island Nipped

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, July 10.—The Finnish high command said today that a Russian attempt to conquer Somerinsaart Island, midway between Leningrad and Helsinki in the Gulf of Finland, had been repulsed and that 16 Soviet patrol and motor torpedo boats and a gunboat of the Moscow class were sunk.

"Units of the German naval force had a predominant share in the struggles," which lasted two days, the communique said.

The Russians were reported repulsed by combined naval, air and coastal defenses. The communique claimed 128 Russians were killed and 1143 captured and that several hundred drowned.

An enemy submarine and another vessel were declared damaged. The Finns said they suffered no naval losses.

31 Denied Draft Reclassification

Pleas of 7 Granted, 6 Cases Sent Back To Local Boards

The District Selective Service Board of Appeal announced yesterday that it had turned down 31 of 45 appeals for reclassification by registrants heard last week.

Seven of the registrants were reclassified as requested, among them a metropolitan policeman who sought occupational deferment, while the cases of six were returned to their local boards for additional information and the case of one conscientious objector was turned over to the United States attorney for investigation.

Forty-four of those appealing had been classified by their local boards as 1-A (available for general service), the forty-fifth as 1-B (available only for limited service because of slight physical defects.)

Referred to the Federal prosecutor, who will make recommendations to the appeal board after investigation, was the case of Martin A. Ackerman, a conscientious objector. The board rejected the appeal of Joseph M. Catchings, Bureau of Mines employe, for reclassification as a conscientious objector.

Other Appeals Rejected

Other appeals rejected included those of the following, who sought reclassification to 3-A (deferred because of dependents):

John H. Early, William L. Franklin, John W. Cooper, James C. Heath, Isaac N. Fox, Thomas E. Landon, Walton T. White, George James Chaconas, Robert E. Marx, Wilbur E. Johnson, Ernest A. McPherson, Vittorio O. Risi, Charles F. Butler, John Louis Norris, Orrin Belvin Kimball (the sole 1-B registrant), Clifford M. Atkinson, Judson M. Carter, Elliott E. Thomas, Donald O. Tucker, Clerc Ben Sabul, Arthur Goodman and Carl Catlin. Cooper, White, Marx and Johnson were granted 60-day stays of induction.

Those whose appeals for reclassification to either 2-A (deferred because his civilian occupation is essential to the national interest, safety or health) or 3-A were rejected: William B. Burleigh, Office of Price Administration employe; George H. Gerver, restaurant employe; Alexander Adler, wood pattern making student at Central High School, and Frederick M. Fitzgerald, radio news reporter.

The following registrants' appeals for reclassification to 2-A were rejected: Morton P. Schwartz, student instructor at an Air Corps technical school in Illinois; William M. Kloss, Western Union employe (granted a 60-day stay of induction); Sigmund Sichel, Board of Economic Warfare employe, and Omar Lee Bridges, Capital Transit Co. employe (granted 60-day stay).

Granted Reclassification

Granted reclassification to 2-A were Thomas F. Walker, member of the Metropolitan Police Force; Rowland Cowger, Bureau of Standards employe, and Walter Masincup, Social Security Board occupational analyst.

Grated reclassification to 3-A were Harold E. Russell, Edward Savage, jr., and Peter J. Grogan.

Granted reclassification to 2-B (deferred because his civilian occupation is essential to the war effort) was Carl F. Feit, accounting clerk of the Panama Canal Commission.

Cases of the following were returned to their local boards for additional information: E. Gordon Hubbel, Wallace F. Peterson, James Colbert, Anthony P. Barrett, Herbert G. Foerster and Jerome Thomasses.

District Selective Service Headquarters meanwhile announced that the following were scheduled to leave yesterday and today for reception centers, having completed 14-day leaves after induction: Lynn A. Weiland, Isaac Sharon, Willard B. Upright, Bernard Povich and William M. O'Neil.

Flying Quartet

4 From D. C. Made Naval Air Cadets

RICHARDSON POWERS

GALES THOMPSON

Four District residents, Richard E. Gales, William J. Powers, jr., Laurence E. Richardson, jr., and Darrow M. Thompson, have been appointed naval aviation cadets and now are at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., for flight training.

Gales, son of Timothy W. Gales, 4832 Sixteenth Street Northwest, attended the University of Maryland, where he was a member of the varsity track team.

Powers, son of Mrs. Irene N. Powers, 403 Concord Avenue Northwest, attended George Washington University before he received his appointment as a flying cadet.

Richardson received his degree as bachelor of laws at Southeastern University here after attending Benjamin Franklin University.

Thompson, son of Mrs. Elsie Thompson, 4318 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, received his bachelor of science degree from Oregon State College in Corvallis, Oreg.

After they have completed an intensive seven-month course at Pensacola, they will receive ratings as Naval aviators and commissions either as ensigns in the Naval Reserve or as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Limited Vacation Driving Backed

The American Automobile Association said yesterday that limited use of the automobile for a vacation is not unpatriotic and laid down a 10-point policy for vacationists which, it stated, is consistent with policies of the Office of Defense Transportation.

The AAA suggested that limited use of the automobile for vacations —provided other social or pleasure driving is curtailed—is not inconsistent with conservation. Motorists, it said, should avoid aimless and useless driving. Vacations should be planned to a minimum use of transportation facilities. Vacation driving at moderate speeds and car sharing with relatives and friends was urged.

Air Line Passenger Mileage Increased

United Air Lines yesterday reported a 7 per cent increase in revenue passenger miles for the first half of 1942 as compared with the same period of 1941, and announced also a "large increase in air mail and cargo, most of it linked with the war program, carried on passenger planes."

The line attributed much of its increase in passenger traffic to the war, and said it had been accomplished even though a substantial number of planes had been turned over to the Army.

"By elimination of sleeper planes, adding stops to reduce gasoline loads and by altering some schedules to give quicker turn-around of ships, United was able to increase the number of seats per plane," it was stated.

Thieves Net Loot Of $550 in Jewels

Burglars ransacked the home of Comdr. Humphrey C. Bevan at 2901 Woodland Drive Northwest, early yesterday and escaped with jewelry worth $550 and two service passes.

The intruder, police said, entered the home by jimmying a rear window. The stolen articles were taken from a second-floor bedroom and included a string of cultured pearls, a $300 diamond brooch, a gold watch and cigarette case. A British staff mission pass and a New Zealand Legation pass were taken also, the commander said.

Nelson Announces Membership Of Smaller War Plants Board

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson yesterday appointed Lou E. Holland, Kansas City, Mo., manufacturer, a deputy director of the War Production Board and included him among five directors chosen for the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

Holland will be charged with general supervision over subcontracting and the smaller war plant program. It was expected that he would be made chairman of the Smaller War Plants Corporation, new agency granted 150 million dollars by Congress for use in bringing smaller factories and shops into war production.

Other members of the board are: James T. Howington, district manager of the WPB field office in Louisville and former vice president of the Girdler Corp. of Louisville, manufacturers of forged steel filings for welded pipe.

Three Other Members

William S. Shipley, board chairman of the York (Pa.) Ice Machinery Corp. and a leader in the "York plan," one of the pioneer war-work pools.

Albert M. Carter, director of the First National Bank of Murphysboro, Ill., and head of a company which mines kaolin near Anna, Ill.

Samuel Abbot Smith of Boston, president of the Thomas Strahan Co. of Chelsea, Mass., which manufactures wall paper. He is vice president of the Smaller Businessmen's Association of New England.

Nelson said he expected "excellent results" from the corporation, but that it was not a relief agency and "it is unfortunately very likely that the number of small business firms which we can help in this war will be smaller than the number we cannot help."

In general, the idea is that the corporation will take on war contracts and then arrange for small manufacturing concerns to make the items or parts for them.

No Cure-All

Nelson emphasized that the corporation was not "a panacea" which would solve all the problems of small businessmen.

"We are fighting a war, and the War Production Board is a war agency," he said. "As far as the placement of war orders is concerned, the controling factor must be the ability of the manufacturer to deliver what the Army and Navy want, at the time when the Army and Navy want it, and according to the services' specifications.

"If it should unfortunately develop that outright relief measures for small business are necessary, it must be realized that a mechanism other than the Smaller War Plants Corporation must be found for extending such relief."

Outdoor Rites Are Scheduled By Cathedral

Highlighted by the launching of outdoor services at the Washington Cathedral, special summer religious programs will hold the spotlight in the Washington area tomorrow.

In a move to broaden its ministries to the war workers and the increasing populations of the city, the cathedral has announced that services will be held on the north porch on Sundays at 7:30 p. m. for the summer. There will be congregational singing, prayers and a sermon, and musical accompanin.ent by a brass quartet.

Regular services will continue at the cathedral at 7:30, 9:30 and 11 a.m. and 4 p. m., and on week days at 7:30 a. m., 12 noon and 4 p. m. The cathedral is open on Tuesday and Thursday evenings during July for visitors unable to come during the daytime.

Brookland Methodist Church will sponsor vespers tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in Bunker Hill Park, Fourteenth and Perry Streets Northeast. The Rev. Daniel W. Justice, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, will speak.

The Rev. William Nesbit Vincent, pastor of Eastern Presbyterian Church, will address services tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Lincoln Park, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and 23 participating churches.

The Universalist National Memorial, All Souls' Unitarian and Mount Pleasant Congregational Churches will unite in community services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the first named church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest. Dr. Seth R. Brooks will speak on "The 'Something More' of Life."

The Foundry Methodist Church Choir, directed by Justin Lawrie, will sing at the outdoor sacred concert tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the Little Church of Fort Lincoln, Bladensburg Road at the District Line. James B. Smiley of the Columbia Network will be at the organ, and Chester J. Sparks will preside. City buses stop at the entrance to Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

The Washington Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin Park tomorrow from 3 to 5 p. m. will be under the direction of Francis Thronton. Speakers and their subjects will be Clemens Poiesz, "Indifference;" C. G. Klimowicz, "Original Sin," and Charles E. Ferry, "The Mass."

Students from the Marist House of Studies in Brookland will present the following program in Lincoln Park Sunday from 2 to 4 p. m. and again in Franklin Park from 7:30 to 9:30. The chairman will be Francis Hannigan; speakers: John McQuade, "The Bible and Tradition;" Leonard Moran, "Marks of the Church;" John Moore, "Our Lady," and John McDonald, "The Incarnation."

This afternoon in Logan Circle, there will be a meeting under the direction of the Rev. Leander Troy. He will present Roger Troy, who will talk on "The Church;" Donald O'Callaghan, "Marks of the Church;" Alphonsus Croake, "The Authenticity of the Gospels," and the Rev. Gerard Benson, "The Bible."

The public is invited to attend these meetings and to question the speakers.

The Community Vespers of Takoma Park will welcome to their service tomorrow at 7 p. m. William R. Schmucker, song leader of Hamline Methodist Church.

J. Franklin Sidell of the Disciples' Church, a member of town council, will preside.

The Rev. Wilbur E. La Rue of the Takoma Park Baptist Church will bring the evening message. L. R. Johnson of the Lutheran Church will render the evening prayer.

Ira F. Krider of Emory Methodist Church will be guest soloist.

These services to be held on the lawn of the town building, 6 Columbia Avenue, in the event of rain, will be held inside.

The Rev. J. Lloyd Black, director of the Washington Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church Council, will address vespers tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. on the lawn of the Washington Grove (Md.) Methodist Church. The services are sponsored on summer Sunday nights by the Grove Christian Fellowship. The Rev. H. K. Pasma, pastor of the Rockville Presbyterian Church, will speak on July 19.

Four Mount Rainier churches will join in vespers tomorrow at 6 p. m. on the lawn of Mount Rainier Christian Church, Thirty-third Street and Bunker Hill Road Northeast. They will include the host church; Mount Rainier Baptist, Mount Rainier Methodist and St. John's Episcopal. The Rev. George Hixson, pastor of the Mount Rainier Baptist Church, will speak on "My Bible."

Mrs. P. L. Palmore, missionary from Japan, will address community vespers on the lawn of Central Methodist Church, Stafford Street and Fairfax Drive, Arlington, tomorrow at 7 p. m. The Rev. Harry W. Craver is pastor.

Chevy Chase Protestant churches will meet tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase Circle. The Rev. Dr. Clifford Homer Richmond, pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church, will speak.

Navy Chaplain Back to Greet Congregation

The congregation of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, tomorrow will greet its rector, the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, on active duty as chaplain in the Navy "for the duration." He will preach at the 11 o'clock service of morning prayer.

Lt. Col. Glenn

It will mark his first trip home since leaving a short time ago to become chaplain of the Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School on the U. S. S. Prairie State, New York City. He served in the Navy during the First World War.

Chaplain Glenn conducts a service for 1500 midshipmen every Sunday night at New York City's Riverside Church, 500 of the men coming from the Prairie State ship and others from "dorms" at Columbia University.

Other services for tomorrow at St. John's will include Holy Communion at 8 and 9:30 a. m.; service in French at 4 p. m., conducted by the Rev. Andre P. Liotard, and 8 p. m., evening prayer, with Mr. Calvin Elliott of the Virginia Theological Seminary in charge.

Patriotic, Religious Service Combined

An American and a Christian Flag will be dedicated at John Wesley A. E. M. Zion Church, Fourteenth and Corcoran Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. Music will be furnished by the chorus choir, and Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood, minister, will preach on the "Flag of the Free." At 8 o'clock the Cathedral Choir, directed by Dr. W. Scott Mayo, will render the dramatic cantata, "Jephtha's Daughter."

Pinkerton, Roberts To Exchange Pulpits

The Rev. Dr. William H. Pinkerton, interim pastor of National City Christian Church, and the Rev. Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, will exchange pulpits tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The congregation of National City Church will tender a reception to Dr. Pinkerton and his daughter, Mrs. Eugene Pugh, on July 19, from 4 to 6:30 p. m., in the Vermont Avenue Annex. It will be in appreciation of the acting pastor's services.

St. Stephen's Pastor Reformation Guest

The Rev. George K. Bowers, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church on Brentwood Road Northeast, will be guest speaker tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street. His subject will be "When Life Says 'No' to Us." Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Reformation's pastor, will be speaking at the opening of the Maryland Synod Summer School at Hood College, Frederick, Md.

Sewing Groups Meet

Red Cross and Welfare sewing groups will meet in the parish house of the Universalist National Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets Northwest, on Monday and Friday, from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Bible Classes Get Together

Many Groups Holding Social Hours Along With Meetings

The ladies' and men's Bible class of Park View Christian Church will hold a business meeting and social hour on July 17 at 8 p. m., in the church hall, 627 Park Road Northwest.

Class Vice President John Klein will be host to the men's class of St. Paul's Methodist Church on July 15 at 8 p. m.

The men's Bible class of Lewis Memorial Methodist Church has scheduled a meeting for Monday at 8 p. m. at the church, Third and Hamilton Streets Northwest.

Mark D. Miller will teach the lesson before the Vaughn Class of Calvary Baptist Church tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. Nelson M. Blake will read the Scripture and Calvin S. Connelly will offer a prayer. Class President Crawford J. Smith will preside.

Interfaith Group to Sponsor Film

"The World We Want to Live In," a film produced with the cooperation of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will be shown throughout the Washington area during July and August, it was announced yesterday. It is one reel long, and about 10 minutes showing length.

The schedule follows:

Metropolitan Theater, July 10-17, and the following theaters in August:

Uptown, 1, 2, 3; Tivoli, 2, 3, 4; Calvert and Penn, 5, 6, 7; Sherwood, 9, 10, 11; Avalon and Silver Spring, 12, 13, 14; Kennedy, 19, 20, 21; Colony, 23, 24, 25; Takoma, 23, 24; Colony, 23, 24, 25, and York, 30, 31.

Christmas in July Theme of Calvary Church Service

The temperature may soar to midsummer heights and the sun may beat down on a Washington sweltering in its July heat—but Christmas carols and anthems will reecho from out Calvary Baptist Church at Eighth and H Streets Northwest tomorrow morning.

They'll set the atmosphere for Dr. Clarence W. Cranford's 11 o'clock sermon topic, "Christmas Presents in July." The choir will furnish the anthems, but the congregation will join in singing the familiar carols of the winter holiday season.

Dr. Cranford will turn the calendar back to July and normal again when he speaks at 8 p. m. on "What Do You Bring to Church?"

The Mary Carr Evening Circle will hold its annual picnic this afternoon at the home of the Misses Josephine and Anna May Stambaugh in Falls Church, Va. Newcomers in Washington are invited to join "The Gleaners," a recently organized Sunday school class for girls 18 to 25. Mrs. Kathryn Cranford teaches the class.

Lesson on "Sacrament"

"Sacrament" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." (Matthew xvi 16:25.)

Sound Film Booked

A sound film, "Beyond Our Horizon," will be shown at vespers tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Rev. Wagner to Speak

The Rev. Glenn W. Wagner, president of the Washington City Bible Institute, will fill the pulpit of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Dr. Shepherd, Friend to Chiang, To Speak Here

A personal friend and adviser of Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, Dr. George W. Shepherd will speak at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Dr. Shepherd

Dr. Shepherd, a missionary of the American Board of Commissioners, has chosen for his topic, "Chiang Kai-shek: Man of Faith." In 1923 Dr. Shepherd went into the mountains of northwest China, where for 10 years he carried on his work among the rural people.

He escaped from Communist troops in 1933 and entered into the Kiangsi rural reconstruction work. It was then that he made the acquaintance of the generalissimo and his wife. The next year he became the adviser of the New Life Movement sponsored by the leaders of China.

Morgenthau LaudsDr. Tippy For Drive Aid

Dr. Worth M. Tippy, retiring acting executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, has been cited by the Treasury Department for promotion of the war savings drive.

The citation, signed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, commends Dr. Tippy "for distinguished service rendered in behalf of the national war savings program."

Dr. Tippy, interim federation secretary from October, 1941, until July 1, has been encouraging the Protestant Church press throughout the country to get behind the war savings program, through editorials and other channels.

Dr. Tippy emphasized yesterday that he has been pushing the war savings drive as a private citizen, and not representing any particular denomination or other religious body.

Grace Lutheran Honors Service Men

The congregation of Grace Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and Varnum Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 8:45 a. m. will begin a series of Sunday services honoring men in the armed forces and their families, especially those of the community near the church.

Prayers will be offered for our country, its leaders and its defenders. The special music will include the prayer-hymn of the Lutheran Church for "the absent and those in peril." Miss Margaret Simons, soprano, will be guest soloist tomorrow, and Margaret Wambsganss, organist. Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski will preach on "The Helpfulness of Our Prayers." He will also speak at 11 a. m.

Reformation Church to Fete Service Men and Newcomers

The congregation of Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol Street, today will sponsor another of its programs for service men and newcomers. It will be one of many such programs throughout the city this weekend.

The programs, which began six weeks ago with the cooperation of the Reformation of the Young People's League and the Sunday School, include a recreation period at 4:30 p. m.; supper at 6:30 p. m., and then more recreation.

According to Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, the fact that the church is close to Union Station means that its programs draw many men from the U. S. O. lounge there. A poster publicizing the Reformation program has been placed in the U. S. O. lounge. Fifty service men attended last weekend.

A group of marines from Quantico will be taken on a tour of the city today at 2:45 p. m., through the cooperation of the Federation of Churches Defense Commission, headed by Grover L. Hartman. The marines will be led by Chaplain Charles Beatty of Quantico, and will visit Arlington, the Washington Airport, Washington Cathedral and other spots. They will be entertained later at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest.

Special Mass Honors Bishop

For the repose of the soul of the late Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, whose death occurred June 9, a month's mind requiem mass will be said in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University today at 10 a. m.

The celebrant will be the Right Rev. Msgr. P. J. McCormick, who became acting pastor of the Catholic University upon the death of Bishop Corrigan, who had been serving his sixth year as rector of the institution. The assisting officers of the mass will include the Rev. Dr. William J. Lallou, associate professor of sacred liturgy, as deacon; the Rev. Dr. George W. Johnson, associate professor of education, as subdeacon, and the Rev. Walter Schmitz, S. S., lecturer of religious education, as master-of-ceremonies.

The choir will be composed of Carmelite seminarians from White Friars Hall, with Dr. Leo Behrendt, director of the university choir, in charge.

Chinese Congregation To Hear Choir Leader

Mrs. Ross Gleeson, director of the Chinese Community Church choir, will address that congregation's services tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Her subject will be "Musical Church Members." A party will be held at 5 p. m. at the church house, 1011 L Street Northwest, honoring the choir.

Methodist Institute Opens Monday

The annual senior high institute of the Methodist Church, Baltimore Conference, will open on Monday at Western Maryland College, Westminster, with delegates from Maryland and the District attending.

In announcing the institute, officials declared:

"Many courses will have as their goal the focusing of the student's attention upon attitudes of mind and ways of living in the crises of a war and post-war world. The students of a war-torn today will be the teachers, the workers, the men and women who will control or be controlled by a peaceful tomorrow. The courses offered in the senior high institute of 1942 will help the student in a time of war to prepare for a day of peace."

L. Barrett Rice will be dean of the institute. Other personnel follow:

B. I. Barnes, dean of young men; Mrs. Asbury Smith, dean of young women; Miss Helen W. Watkins, registrar; T. Burgess Hamilton, manager; Wallace Brooks, assistant manager; Mrs. L. Barrett Rice, secretary, and Gordon Pratt Baker, Paul Bohi, Mrs. Paul Bohi, Raymond Brown, Mrs. Raymond Brown, G. Custer Cromwell, F. Paul Harris, G. Allison Long, James McLain, G. Rogers Merritt, Robert H. Parker, A. B. Potorf, Lewis Ransom, Mrs. Lewis Ransom, W. A. Roberts, Margaret Wallace and W. W. Delaplain.

Memorial Services For Henry Thomas

Memorial services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church for Henry G. Thomas, long-time official and member of the congregation, who died last June 12.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, has returned after a week's attendance at the Ministers' Conference at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. Grover L. Hartman, Defense Commission director of the Federation of Churches, will address the junior church at 11 a. m.

"FAITH OF OUR FATHERS"
- - - FREDERICK W. FABER - - -
Faith of our fathers, living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword.
O, how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word!
Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
The writer of this impressive hymn was himself a descendant of the French Huguenots. Each vivid line shows that he must have been inspired by the hardships and persecutions that his ancestors had suffered, so that we might have freedom to worship God as we will.

D. C. French To Celebrate Bastille Day

Bastille Day, national day of France, will be marked here on Tuesday with two religious services for Frenchmen of all political viewpoints and their friends.

MR. LIOTARD

The Washington French Congregation will sponsor services at 10 a. m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, with the Rev. Andre Liotard preaching. There will be a mass at 11 a. m. at St. Matthew's Cathedral.

In announcing his congregation's service, Rev. Mr. Liotard said:

"This will be a service of spiritual union and of communion with the people of France in their sufferings and hopes, with prayers of intercession for the nation and people and for the restoration of their independence. All French people and friends of France are cordially invited. The services will close in time for those who wish to attend other celebrations to do so."

Mr. Liotard will speak tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. on "L'Ideal Triomphant."

Four Counties Merged Into One Health District

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., July 10.—Stafford and Prince William Counties, formerly one public health unit, have been grouped with Fairfax and Loudoun Counties in a single district because of the shortage of public health physicians.

Dr. C. E. Waller of Leesburg, will serve as health officer of the newly formed district and Dr. E. W. Langs of Fairfax will be his assistant.

On Summer Schedule

The Rev. E. A. Lambert, new pastor of Eldbrooke Methodist Church, yesterday announced the launching of a special summer service on Sundays at 7 a. m., for the convenience of the people unable to attend the 11 o'clock service. "The Test of Worship" will be the sermon theme for the earlier service.

Virginia Population Seen Hitting 3,193,057

Richmond, Va., July 10 ((AP)).—Virginia will have a population of 3,193,057 in 1950, compared with the 2,677,773 enumerated in the 1940 census if the war continues, Dr. Lorin A. Thompson, director of the State Planning Board's population study, estimated yesterday.

Thompson said that if the war effort concentration is broken up, the 1950 population will be around 2,972,420. The present population is estimated at 2,817,520 on the basis of the sugar rationing registration.

Guess Heads Legion Post

Fredericksburg, Va., July 10.—Fred M. Guess was elected commander of the Bowen-Franklin-Knox Post of American Legion for the ensuing year yesterday. He succeeds Al Hadrup. Other new officers named were C. E. Harper, of Dahlgren, first vice commander; H. F. McCurdy, second vice commander; George Reiss, adjutant, and Eddie Baker, sergeant at arms.

48 Teachers Named

Berryville, Va., July 10 (AP).—Superintendent Archie F. Robertson of Clarke County schools said the board has closed contracts with 48 teachers, eight of them Negroes, for the session beginning in September.

U. S. Takes Over Norfolk Ferry

By the Associated Press

War Shipping Administration officials said yesterday the Pennsylvania Railroad ferry, Virginia Lee, operating between Cape Charles and Norfolk, Va., had been requisitioned "for war purposes."

The President Warfield and the Yorktown, of the Baltimore Steam Packet line operating between Baltimore and Norfolk, also had been taken over, they said.

Officials declined to disclose any details of the purposes to which the vessels would be put.

War Diet Calls For More Milk

Dr. William DeKleine, former medical director of the American Red Cross, yesterday urged people to drink more milk for protection of their health.

"Hospitals are crowded to the hilt in all our war centers and to make matters worse doctors are being withdrawn into military service so rapidly that a majority under 45, it is now estimated, will in time join the armed forces," he said.

"This will become increasingly critical for civilians. This makes our widespread lack of milk increasingly serious, the more because it is a treacherous hidden hunger of which those afflicted are seldom fully aware."

He recommended greater use of powdered milk.

The Gallup Poll

Church Support for All-Out War Efforts Urged by Majority of U. S. Clergymen

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 10.—The role of the church in wartime is a controversial issue which has stirred up heated debate among protestant pastors and church conferences in many denominations.

The Methodists, the Congregationalists, the Presbyterians, the Northern Baptists, the Friends—all have found some division of sentiment in their ranks. At a recent Congregationalist conference, 409 delegates voted to support the war effort at whatever sacrifice, while 135 remained "convinced of the futility of war."

Church Is Militant

In order to discover what attitude the members of the clergy throughout the whole country are taking, the Institute has conducted a special survey among a cross-section of protestant ministers in all the main denominations and of catholic priests.

They were asked the open question:

"In general, what attitude do you think the church should take toward the war?"

The replies fall into half a dozen main categories. The great majority of clergymen interviewed, about six in every ten, took the position that the church should support the war and give full cooperation to the government in the war effort.

Most of the ministers and priests taking this point of view explained that whereas the church opposes war it feels justified in supporting an all-out war effort because this is a "religious conflict," a war to preserve religious freedom.

"We must support the war," says an Indianapolis pastor reflecting the general viewpoint, because if we don't there will not be any church or religion or free way of thinking if the Axis wins."

Declared a Sanctuary

A second large group of clergymen takes the attitude that the church can aid the war effort in a somewhat more indirect fashion—that is, by giving spiritual strength to the people and maintaining morale.

The essence of this idea is that the church need not, in fact should not, be a militant force in the war effort, but rather a spiritual sanctuary and the provider of spiritual strength to the people.

This attitude is well summarized by a Baptist preacher in Los Angeles who points out:

"We have a spiritual mission more necessary than ever. But we do not intend to make the church a recruiting station or a bond mart."

The next main facet of opinion among the clergymen interviewed from Maine to California is that the church should be the crucible, as it were, in which is forged a just and lasting peace. Those who hold this view believe the clergyman's main effort at this time should be to pave the way for a Christian peace, to guard against the development of hate and revenge complexes in his congregation.

Would Relieve Suffering

Closely akin is the view which a few take that the role of the church is to "keep the Christian spirit alive" in these time of international slaughter and brutality. Some think the best way to accomplish this is by giving practical aid to the relief of suffering.

Finally, a small number, about one in every 50, say that the church should be loyal to the Government, but "must oppose war as an evil."

Following are a few individual comments from pastors which reflect and describe the general thinking of the clergy on the war issue.

"I think of the war as a surgeon would think of performing a major operation—it is regrettable but necessary."

"In a time when religious freedom is challenged the church must defend itself."

"I was bitterly opposed at first, but now I find a line drawn sharply between Christianity and paganism. Under these conditions, militarism is a necessary evil."

"I agree with the major-general who said, 'Your business is to make mine impossible.' I am in favor of war because there is no other way."

Blackout Powers

Far-reaching amendments to the District's Blackout Act were passed by the House on Thursday without question. Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee briefly explained the bill; Representative Dirksen, the ranking minority member, gave the measure his blessing; it was read by the clerk and sent to the Senate by unanimous consent. In other words, the House unhesitatingly recognized the imperative necessity of further preparing Washington for possible enemy attack.

It is worthy of note that the bill would confer upon the District Commissioners some very broad powers. So long as the war continues they could take such measures as they might deem "necessary for the adequate protection of persons and property in the District" and make all rules and regulations needed to carry out their orders. They could requisition and use "private property of every kind and nature" which they might regard as necessary for defense purposes. In such cases, of course, the owners of requisitioned property would be reimbursed, and they could sue the District if no satisfactory agreement as to price could be reached. The Commissioners would also be authorized to borrow a second million dollars from the Treasury for the purchase of civilian defense equipment, for the alleviation of suffering, and for the prevention of epidemics.

The necessity of arming the city fathers with power to deal with a possible wartime emergency has rightly been taken for granted. But many citizens will not be willing to let the matter drop there. The fact is that Washington needs a government capable of protecting the lives and promoting the welfare of its citizens every day in the year, whether the country is at war or peace. Yet it is only when the danger of an air raid arises that this need is officially recognized.

Every attempt that has been made in recent years to enlarge the peacetime powers of the local government has been defeated. Yet now Congress seems willing to rely upon the city fathers for performance of a much more difficult task. It is clear beyond challenge that any group of officials who can be trusted with these extensive wartime powers could reasonably be allowed to conduct the routine affairs of the city in peacetime. In passing blackout legislation Congress has recognized that it cannot decide every local issue that arises in connection with civilian defense. Surely it ought also to realize the advantages that would come from the assignment of permanent control over the city's routine business to a body of local citizens.

Dangerous Suggestion

The fact-finding report of the panel in the "Little Steel" case contains a rather cryptic sentence hinting that an increase in wages might be paid in the form of war savings bonds instead of cash. It is a suggestion obviously intended to head off criticism of wage increases as inflationary. If an addition to wages were paid for in bonds, it may be argued that the worker would not use his increased purchasing power to bid up prices of clothing, food, etc. He would, instead, turn over a portion of his earnings to the Government for use in the war effort. This is a dangerously seductive argument, and its fallaciousness should be exposed before it acquires a popular appeal.

If payments to wage earners were made in bonds that could not be converted into cash until the end of the war, the immediate inflationary pressure of the higher wages upon prices would unquestionably be removed. But that is only part of the story. The amount thus compulsorily saved would release other wage income for spending purposes. In other words, the employe would no longer feel the same obligation to reduce his scale of living in order to buy war bonds. He would be in a position to spend as usual and save too. Yet, if this war is to be financed without bringing on an uncontrollable inflation, the people must be prepared to cut into income deeply and lower their customary living standards. That is what the President himself has stated.

There is another aspect to the problem, too, that should not be neglected. If the steel workers' pay were supplemented by bond bonuses, demands would come from other classes of workers for corresponding advances in wages. The bonds with which to make payment could not be conjured out of thin air. They would have to be paid for by employing companies. To the extent that such payments are made, industrial concerns would have that much less cash available for investing in bonds on their own account, or paying taxes to the Treasury. In short, the increase in production costs resulting from raising wages would add to the cost of the war program and simultaneously hamper efforts to finance that war by contributions representing a sacrifice on the part of the people.

Rebuff For Mr. Davis

Secretary Stimson's reaction to his success in the tilt with Information Director Elmer Davis gives the impression that he regards the result as a personal victory. His attitude, we suggest, is thoroughly out of order. The effort of Mr. Davis to have a report taken by his office of the spy trial (subject, of course, to military censorship) was made in the public interest. Whether or not he is "an educated military officer" has nothing at all to do with the dispute. Director Davis was appointed information czar, as the public understood the appointment, in order to coordinate the output of information by all the war agencies. The rebuff he has sustained in his first test over the scope of his mandate means that real coordination still is a will o' th' wisp.

Mr. Davis' activity sprang from his awareness of the intense public excitement over the trial of the eight Nazi saboteurs before the special miiltary commission headed by General McCoy. Mr. Davis was also aware that these men were sent to this country for the specific purpose of wrecking public morale and, incidentally, of destroying innumerable civilian lives. Mr. Davis believed, then, that the public interest in this trial was justified. Thus Mr. Davis, in accordance with the American tradition of open tribunals, requested that representatives of the great news services be permitted to hear those parts of the trial which did not involve any vital military secrets. When this was refused, he asked that a member of his own staff—that is to say, a representative of the Federal Government—be permitted to attend and to prepare a daily report which would, of course, be subject to military censorship. This eminently reasonable proposal was also rejected. Mr. Davis does not have to be "an educated military officer" to appreciate the importance of keeping away from the enemy valuable knowledge of our counterespionage methods. Yet the solitary concession the brass hat brotherhood is willing to make to public interest is a daily communique during the progress of the trial. That service already has started. But, as anyone familiar with the idiom of military communiques could have foretold, the purpose of this service is to conceal facts rather than to disclose them.

The fact that the President has supported Secretary Stimson puts the responsibility for this unsatisfactory state of affairs squarely at the White House door. His backing appears to stultify what was understood to be the intent of the OWI. This agency was created in response to rapidly mounting indignation over the inadequate, confusing, and often contradictory items concerning the war supplied by the myriad Government press agents and "spokesmen." The chief offenders have been the departments of the armed services. The OWI, it was expected, would bring order out of chaos, and the appointment of Mr. Davis to head it was widely hailed by public and press alike as an excellent one. Must the public now be left to understand that the setting up of the new agency was merely for the purpose of stopping this public clamor? Was it never contemplated that Mr. Davis was to be given powers to correct the appalling situation he inherited? It certainly begins to look like it.

That Mr. Davis must believe that his functions have been truncated while his office is still aborning appears to be reflected in the report that he contemplates resignation. It is to be hoped that he resists the temptation, strong though it must be. His job is every whit as important as Secretary Stimson's in a war that, as Mr. Davis reiterates, is a people's war, and he should continue to press his case for the comprehensive powers which seemed to be implicit in the original Presidential order. His case with the public and probably with the President will be improved by the exhibition of Secretary Stimson's spleen. "I have what I had," the Secretary said on leaving the White House. Thus we see the dimensions of the war among the Government departments. If the energy that is devoted to this interdepartmental war were transferred to the war against Japo-Hitlerism, we should be that much more advanced along the road to victory. Only the President can end the "muddle and mismanagement" which is highlighted by the information crisis.

Charge—And Pay

One big loophole in the program of consumer credit control has been the charge account. This has afforded a means of circumventing to some extent the restrictions imposed upon installment purchases. Early in May, therefore, it was announced that charge accounts, with certain important exceptions, would in future have to be paid off by the tenth day of the second month following the month of purchase. Under the regulations, accordingly, charge customers had to settle in full all May accounts by Friday, July 10. Customers in arrears must arrange to meet overdue payments in regular monthly installments. Otherwise no further credits will be extended.

While hailed as a move to curb consumer buying, these new charge account rules will not affect persons who are able to pay their bills with reasonable promptitude. As a matter of fact, the new regulations give retailers an opportunity to "clean up" slow accounts and get rid of some undesirable customers. In the long run the benefits to the merchant of stricter control over charge accounts should outweigh any temporary shrinkage of sales. And the customer who tends to live beyond his income will be protected against his own rashness.

With employment and payrolls at record heights, the time is well chosen to tighten restrictions on consumer purchases on credit, and accustom the public to making a larger percentage of cash purchases. Regulations imposing restrictions upon installment buying and charge accounts are, in fact, reforms that have permanent value. It is hoped that they will survive the war emergency that gave them birth.

Inflated Optimism

Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee must have been suffering from hot-weather hallucinations when he rashly predicted the other day that the war will end "probably in 1942 and unquestionably in 1943." There is nothing in the present trend of battle on any front which gives weight to such glowing optimism. In Russia, Egypt and the Far East the United Nations are still on the defensive. Our best hopes at the moment are that the Nazis can be stopped in the Don Valley and the Egyptian Desert and the Japs held to their present positions until we can launch long, hard offensive drives. For an influential member of Congress to stir up hopes of an easy victory in these circumstances is a grave disservice to the Nation.

We do not know the "military secret" on which Mr. May based his rash prediction. But it is highly doubtful whether any information that he could possess would justify such lulling words to a Nation that is all too reluctant to look reality in the face. No military secret will dispose of the fact that in seven months of war we have won only two battles and lost many. It is both cruel and dangerous to create an impression that by some mysterious means we shall be able to turn the tide of battle against our enemies and polish them off in a few brief months.

The chairman of the Military Affairs Committee may have had no intention of contributing to an attitude of complacency, though his strange prediction was made as part of an argument against the drafting of youths 18 and 19 years of age for military service. But he must know that such a forecast from a legislator in his position is likely to encourage a letdown in the grim all-out effort that is so essential to victory.

Legislators ought to remember, too, that inflated optimism from Capitol Hill blends in dangerously with the Administration's policy of withholding vital information about our losses in battle. If the people were getting a brutally realistic account of war developments on every front, they might be able to discount the wishful thinking that creeps into the casual remarks of legislators and officials. But that is not the case. The public is foolishly shielded from the worst news. Our victories are properly emphasized for all they are worth. That is a desirable means of stimulating well founded confidence in our fighting arms when they go into battle. But our losses are often kept from the public for longer periods than seem to be justified by the necessity of withholding information valuable to the enemy. The inevitable result is to make our outlook for victory appear more rosy than it actually is.

When optimistic forecasts without foundation that can be disclosed to the public are added to this glossing over of war news the dangers of reviving complacency are unmistakable. We must not let ourselves assume that an easy victory is just around the corner. The harsh and blunt truth is that we have a long and grueling ordeal of slaughter ahead of us if freedom and decency are to survive in the world. And the sooner we settle down to fighting on that basis the better will be our chance of shortening the holocaust that now circles the globe.

NO LIGHTLIER PASS

No lightlier pass
tired winds in grass, or embers blown from ancient fires, than the lovely things
the heart desires.

No sooner shed
the white and red from boughs in spring than deathward driven the joyous gifts
by beauty given.

No lightlier pass
tired winds in grass, or ocean mists
through morning's portal, than all things loved and thought immortal.

Scrap New Stock

Immediately following completion of the current scrap rubber campaign, which was extended to July 10, it has been announced that "a greatly intensified Nation-wide salvage program, designed to reach into every home and industrial plant and increase the flow of all vital scrap materials to the country's war plant," will be our next campaign. Vital scrap material! Must we scrap with scrap? Ye gods! What is sinful about an all-out with new material, then, if reduced to it, old stuff can be utilized? Is new material so dear or are manufacturers' fresh stores so sweet as to be held intact at the price of lives and liberty?

Our present regime seems analogous to that of the reigning queen who, when told, "The people are starving, they have no bread," replied, "Give them cake to eat!" Or shall we hoard our beautiful new cakes until we perish?

Phobophobia

"There is nothing to fear but fear." Sayings like this one, have been used in metaphysical textbooks during the past 50 years, only to make mad the average person (and many of them committed suicide) confronted by a problem beyond his or her ability to meet and master—a problem perhaps created by the irresponsibility of modern society or civilization, and thus defying the powers of the individual. Most of such fear (apprehension) confronts individuals, but of late whole communities and nations, yea even groups of nations, are forced to encounter, what we might name as, phobophobia, compelling the human mind to turn to the all-sufficient remedies found only in metaphysics. The way to neutralize the challenge of phobophobia is, first, to shake off "indifference and disbelief," referred to as the cause of many problems, by the late Hon. Newton Baker. Are we equal to the moral task of facing this issue?

So Much! So Soon!

Thanks to Alcoa Aluminum, I have been inspired by a slogan which should replace the "Too little, too late," a negative assertion which has bogged us down for several months.

In an advertisement describing the wonderful increase in United States' war material, Aluminum gives voice to this rallying cry, "So much! So soon!"

Industry is forging ahead at a remarkable pace, labor is united in one great effort; Army, Navy, the Marine Corps and Coast Guard are far ahead of schedule.

Therefore, let's hoist the pennant "So much! So soon!" and toss the rag of pessimism into the scrap heap.

I have read with great interest the editorial, "Everlasting Egypt," published in The Washington Post today, and I want to congratulate the writer on his colorful description of Egypt's historical significance to the world and to civilization.

I should deeply appreciate it if you would convey to him my personal felicitations for his excellent article which is most worthy of your great newspaper.

Attacks On The Courts

Coming events cast their shadows. While we are still in the twilight of constitutional government, we know that it soon will be covered with the black pall of collectivism. Future historians writing about the downfall of constitutionalism in the United States undoubtedly will treat the Court Packing Bill and the appointment of Hague's man, Meaney, to a Federal judgeship as two of the principal attacks that caused the downfall, and in their comment will call attention to the dual parallel, namely, that both were attacks on the judiciary and that both were so indefensible that not a single Senator dared to speak on their behalf.

After months of senatorial debate and after long committee hearings, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted against the Court Packing Bill and submitted a majority report that is a magnificent State document. For pure eloquence and unshakable logic it has never been surpassed. If the report were studied in the schools and colleges it might still save our American system. Some of its conclusions were the following: "It (the bill) would destroy the independence of the judiciary; . . . It points the way to the evasion of the Constitution; . . . It stands now before the country, acknowledged by its proponents as a plan to force judicial interpretation of the Constitution, a proposal that violates every sacred tradition of American democracy; . . . Its ultimate operation would be to make this Government one of men rather than one of law; . . . Under the form of the Constitution it seeks to do that which is unconstitutional."

The minority members of the Judiciary Committee did not submit any counter-report for the very good reason that the charges were unanswerable. No Senator arose in the Senate to defend the President against the findings of the majority report. In fact, at no time during the long months of debate did any Senator even attempt to defend the bill on the merits. The most that any of the President's supporters in the Senate dared to say was, we must vote for the bill because the President wants us to do so.

Fortunately, the bill was defeated because of the aroused opposition of several million of the more intelligent voters who understood the meaning and the effect of the bill. But the trend toward bureaucratic and autocratic government continues. The Meaney appointment was likewise clearly an attack on the courts. The strength of the courts lies primarily in the character of the judges, and Mr. Meaney is known as a tool of Mr. Hague, who, as Wendell Willkie so graphically characterized him, is a "little Hitler." An important feature of Hague's totalitarian scheme of government has been the domination of the courts. When the Meaney appointment came up for confirmation in the Senate, one of the Republicans (Senator Burton) challenged the Meaney supporters to stand up and defend the appointment. Not a single supporter of the appointee dared to accept the challenge. So here again was another blow struck at our democratic constitutional system that was so unpardonable that not a single Senator dared to defend it.

Gas-Wasting Devices

There is much talk about the automobile owner saving his gas, but very little help is received from the traffic authorities toward this object. Instead, their aim seems to be to promote unhappy confusion and delay for the motorist. Why aren't the lights speeded up? Much gas is burned up waiting for the lights to change, with no cross traffic in sight. I have waited on many a corner for the green light, wasting in the aggregate much gas and time, when there wasn't even a pedestrian crossing.

The many "No Left Turn" signs necessitate going blocks and sometimes miles out of one's way to achieve a destination. A few of these may be helpful to keep traffic moving, but most of them could be done away with, especially where the traffic is light. Various streets are one way parkways blocked off completely, for no apparent reason, except to keep the motorist going in one direction for miles, or chasing around a few extra blocks. On F Street at some corners even right turns are prohibited, causing much unnecessary driving. At one corner the lights are arranged so peculiarly that all traffic, including pedestrian, is halted for a space of time. The tricky lights on Constitution Avenue, the double red lights for street cars, the right turn light, the through light, the left turn light, the slow light changing, the stopping at every corner, create frustration and despair in the mind of the motorist, besides wasting precious gas.

Beaches Still Pleasant

I have just returned from a 10-day vacation at Ocean City, Md. Everyone has been asking me since my return about the oil and tar that is rumored to be on the water and along the beach. The ocean is as clear as crystal. No oil is in evidence. On the beach, there is a little tar but not any more than I have seen in previous years after a storm. Occasionally, one steps in it but it is easily removable with kerosene.

The blackout is merely a dimout. People throng the boardwalk every evening. The concessions are open. The only difference between this and former years is that the lighted entrances are obscured by screens and the window shades drawn. The motorists cooperate by driving slowly with only their parking lights and I heard of no accidents during my entire holiday.

I am not a native of Ocean City nor am I in the real-estate business there, but I have been going down practically every summer since I was a year old and I hate to see delightful seashore vacations being missed by people who have been intimidated by malicious propaganda or unfounded rumors.

Disloyal Capitalites

Assuming that allotments for sale of bonds and war savings stamps are fairly and equitably made, the failure of the District of Columbia, with all of its citizens, who are in the main supported by the taxpayers elsewhere, to meet it's quota, does not speak well for the loyalty and disposition of the statesmen (if any), politicians, and their employes and those getting their living from the Government.

It may, in part, explain the attitude of some Congressmen, indicating that political favors and special considerations to influential public men must go on as usual, but all else subordinate to the war effort. Voters recognize no special favors.

The Post Impressionist

Applejack Addle

It was very warm for May, and the doctor who had recommended this mad enterprise in the beginning had cautioned me to "take it easy," anyway . . .

So here I was, pedaling slowly along on my bicycle, approaching 11 o'clock of that morning, in 1926, and the summit of Indian Hill, somewhere in Maryland, as I recall.

Now, riding a bicycle is easy work—if, mayhap, you are a telegraph messenger, let us say, or a six-day bike racer. Otherwise—and you may believe this affiant—no. It breeds a rheumatic twinge in the neck, upper arms, back, hips, calf muscles and Achilles tendons. It may—and did—produce an insidious crop of discomforts called, colloquially, "saddle boils."

I may add, it produces a prodigious thirst. That is what was, at the moment, most troubling me. This also will lead presently to the tale of my terrible error and the applejack addle.

I toiled, sweating, to the top of Indian Hill. An inn, coolly disposed among flanking pines, topped the summit. I wanted water, a long drink. I parked my bike against a porch pillar and sought the inn's host.

We tossed a word or two back and forth, then I broached the subject of my thirst.

"I've got just the right thing for you," quoth the smiling publican. "Come along."

I followed the amiable boniface, twice my age and, in appearance, a sort of "David Grayson" character. He led me to the rear of his establishment, under a pleasant little vine-covered back porch. A miniature well, clammy with moisture, was sunk in its floor. Into this my host let a copper dipper by a chain. From a nearby window ledge he took a clay mug, in size and shape much like a mustache cup. He poured my mug full of this clear, sparkling liquid from the dipper and handed it to me.

"That," he said, hospitality incarnate, "will fix you up."

I drank deeply. The liquid was colorless in the mug. It was cold. It smelled a bit on the sweet side and tasted delightful. I drained my mug and handed it back.

"More?" (all solicitude).

"No. No, thanks. That was good. What was it?"

"Mountain dew," answered this charming fellow. "We call it mountain dew."

Now, I was no sophisticate in those days; yet neither was I entirely without knowledge of the world. Still, "mountain dew," to me, I swear it, meant "spring water." I gave limestone and mineral deposits, through whose veins it must have trickled, credit for that liquid's taste. Its tang was due to its temperature and the height of the hill where I drank it. Of course, I reasoned, this inn could not have plumbing on top of a mountain; he keeps his drinking water in a well, sensibly, in the shade. It is probably supplied from some hidden, piedmontian spring. All very logical.

So, refreshed, I thanked mine host cordially and trundled away on my bicycle down the other side of Indian Hill.

Let me draw your attention to this bicycle a moment. A magazine article, read before my journey started, had attractively diagrammed the substitution of a cast-off automobile steering wheel for the conventional handle bars of a bicycle. "Makes riding easier," it promised, "especially if you contemplate a long trip." I took the promise prima facie. "Just like walking," I thought, "only you go farther with each step;" no tiresome leaning over handle bars, with a steering wheel, set high . . .

Now, gapers along my road, seeing this contraption, had guffawed; certain callow youths, indeed, had followed me a time, as if I were a part of a circus. But there had been nothing funny about it to me. I really found going quite reasonable as a result of my wheel—especially on the pulls.

Yet, strangely, as I coasted along now, away from the inn, I found this circumstance very amusing. I smiled to myself . . . it must look very funny, very funny: an old truck steering wheel on a bicycle. Very funny . . .

So I laughed. Here—here! I almost went off the road that time. Going down these mountains—pretty fast—might lose control. Gotta watch that. Wheel's loose, anyway; oughta be tightened. Ha! ha!—steering wheel on a bicycle!

There was the bottom of the mountain. Hmmm-mm . . . I was pretty tired, for some reason; must be the heat.

An inviting stream meandered to the left, through a little woods. Big, moss-covered rocks lined its course. The water tumbled along susurrantly.

"I've been going along pretty good," I mused. Little rest won't hurt. Li'l rest'll do me a worl' o' good."

I tooled over to the roadside by the stream, lifted my bike over a low fence and pushed it up against a boulder. Very carefully I unlocked my padlock from the seat spring, relocked it on my sprocket. With fingers that never remembered it, I unwrapped my little bundle of necessities from the bike frame and propped it against a flat stone at the streamside.

Very deliberately I took off my shoes and placed them—left by right—against the stone. Then socks, rolled meticulously one inside the other and stuffed into shirt pocket. Then shirt . . . then shirt——

Cold roused me. It was dark, because I could see the stars. But I had lost my feet, both of them. I couldn't feel them. I sat up, startled. Both feet were in the stream, blue and numb. I had been flat on my back on the stone. My skin burned and I had a watermelon for a head. My clothes were draped here and there on bike, bushes and boulders. I had on the bottoms of my pajamas, nothing else.

My wrist watch showed 7:40, according to its gleaming, radium dial.

A friendly druggist in the next town, to whom I applied for sunburn ointment, only laughed at my question.

"Bub," said he, "you're in the best damn applejack county in Maryland!"

Today and Tomorrow

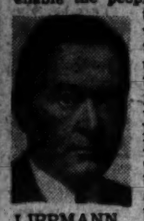
Information for Newspapermen

EVEN IF there were no need for censorship, it would still be an immensely difficult work to enable the people to understand the what and the why and how of the many unusual things that they must do and put up with in wartime. The longer the war lasts, and there is every prospect that this will be a very long war, the more important it will be to see to it that the press and the radio are able to keep the people informed upon matters like rationing, price and wage fixing, the draft, taxes, salvage, priorities and allocations which touch directly the daily lives of everyone. It is in this field of war information that the Government has thus far been least successful. Let us call it for convenience the field of civilian participation.



LIPPMANN

This will enable us to regard the field of military news as distinct. Here, too, there is very much that can and must be improved if the Nation is to have confidence and the capacity to judge and criticize constructively and the conviction of the high seriousness of the war. But military events and the diplomatic actions which are indissolubly bound up with them must be subject to the censor, and therefore they present a quite different problem from the measures which have to do with civilian participation.

THE SAME procedure cannot be used in the military and the civilian field—in the field where censorship must operate and in the field where the purveying of information is a daily need.

Obviously there is a twilight zone between the two fields: they are not clearly and absolutely separated. For example, all the facts about the oil supply of the East Coast include facts about the disposition of tankers and of escorts which must be censored. Nevertheless, as a practical matter, the censored facts are an unimportant part of the information that civilians need to know, and as regards oil the problem of the Government is not how to conceal a few facts but how to explain the whole situation.

MY OWN impression is that in the civilian field, the Government has fixed its attention on spot news to the neglect of the difficult business of enabling the newspapermen who must inform the public to inform themselves. A certain amount of "background" and "off the record" information is, of course, provided. But it is, I believe, so insufficient that the newspaperman who wants to understand the what and the how and the why of a measure—say the system of A, B and X cards—must scramble around for himself using such private, irregular sources of information as he enjoys.

The Government has never realized fully what every working newspaperman knows—that newspapers are not produced by telegraphing official announcements to be set up by printing presses. How news is presented and explained and commented upon depends upon how well the correspondent and his editors understand the whole situation of which the immediate day's news is only a fragment. In fact news in the narrow sense of the term is like the visible part of an iceberg which in fact is nine-tenths under water: a free press as distinguished from a Government bulletin board, cannot do its part unless newspapermen all the way down the line to the home office have a substantial working knowledge of the iceberg under the water.

THUS, when a Government agency starts a novelty, like rationing, it makes up its mind after receiving reports, holding oral conferences and exchanging written memoranda. These are the iceberg under the water. What the Government agencies do not do, what I think they will have to do, is to make available to the responsible newspapermen the substance of this background in some considerable detail. There is no other way in which anyone can hope to understand why one policy, rather than some other one, was decided upon. And if the newspapermen do not understand the policy, they certainly will not be able to make their readers understand it.

Now it is evident that newspapermen cannot be invited to sit in Mr. Henderson's office or given the free use of his letter files. But what can be done is what ought always to be done as a matter of sound and orderly government—Mr. Henderson's announcements of policy should be supported by a comprehensive brief fit to be submitted to a court or a congressional committee, setting forth the data and the reasons on which he is acting.

THE PREPARATION of briefs of this sort is in the field of civilian participation and the vital part of a true information service. The off-the-record and the background conferences are supposed to fill this need. In fact they cannot, as anyone can testify who has attended them. For unless a newspaperman already knows a great deal about a subject, he cannot really know what questions to ask. Ideally, the conference should follow several days after the brief has been offered. The newspapermen could argue with the officials the obscure and controversial points.

This may seem like a lot of trouble. But in the end it would save trouble. For if policies were launched only after they had been presented in a careful brief, the Government agencies themselves would know better than they now do what they are doing. By taking the trouble to put clearly in writing what they are doing and why, the officials would have to clarify their own views, would explain their actions to their own frequently bewildered subordinates, and would obviate many of the contradictions and collisions with other agencies.

THE PROCEDURE I am suggesting is, it seems to me, peculiarly necessary in a time when great measures affecting the daily lives of the people are instituted by administrative action, and not after prolonged legislative debate. It is the lack of that debate which deprives the public of that large body of information which is in normal times available.

The lack can in general be filled if the Government agency would make it the rule in presenting policies not to rely on press releases alone but to back them up with a careful, thoroughly argued brief reporting the whole basis of the policy.

Fair Enough

A. F. L. And The War

YOU HAVE all heard William Green's assurances that the A. F. L. would refrain from retarding war production and construction and strive to prevent such sabotage.

All right, here is the gist of a United Press Dispatch from Rochester, N. Y., followed by other relevant information.

The Rochester item says 30 operating engineers, meaning steam-shovel men and the like, hampered construction at five war plants by refusing to report for work because of "illness." H. Orville Warner, business manager and organizer of their local union, said, however, that the "illness was such that only a pay increase from $1.62 to $1.75 an hour would 'cure' it."

Who is H. Orville Warner?

He is a unioneer who was kicked to a bloody pulp at the 1941 New York State convention of the A. F. L. in Syracuse by Joe Fay, a drunken thug and terrorist with whom William Green frequently associates. Fay is an international vice president of the engineers. Last November 15 Warner wrote me that he was eager to give information about "That rich racketeering thug, Joe Fay, of the operating engineers."

"I WAS a member of one of his (Fay's) locals in Rochester," Warner wrote, "and business representative for four years, in which we were not allowed to have an election. We prospered and as soon as we accumulated a few hundred dollars Fay demanded certain cuts. So I was ousted, brutally beaten so badly that I required hospitalization. I was taken up in Fay's room and given the works. If you desire a statement regarding real shakedown in this city concerning Fay and his stooges I will be glad to give it to you because I expect to be down there in New York in the very near future and try and get some details about the Redwood case."

Redwood was a Jersey unioneer who was shot dead and whose murder was involved with Jersey and union politics and, therefore, naturally, never was solved.

Fay is listed as president of the International Excavating Co., 48 Providence Street, Newark, N. J., and is a wealthy man. The impropriety, to put it nicely, of a man's owning an excavating company who is also president of a labor union of excavating workers need not be emphasized.

On Warner's complaint Fay was indicted on a felony charge, but Warner vanished and, after a brief continuance, the indictment was dismissed on the representation of Fays' lawyers, who were numerous, distinguished and by no means cheap, that his talents were necessary in the war effort.

Thereafter the boys made a deal and Warner was returned to a job in which he now says that the "illness" of 30 malingerers in the war effort is such that a raise of 13 cents an hour would "cure" it.

Fay previously had slugged David Dubinsky, president of the Garment Workers and one of the few men in the A. F. L. leadership with the honor and courage to fight racketeers, because Dubinsky had offered a resolution to kick his kind from union office. Before that, on a night in December, 1938, in Albany, Brian Feeney of New York, an official of the local of the sand-hogs' union, was lured into a dark room with Fay and his mob and beaten up with bottles and fists in a wild melee that wrecked a room. Fay and several others were taken to the police station but were released when George Meany, secretary of the A. F. L., persuaded Feeney that the scandal would be injurious to labor, to say nothing, of course, about the embarrassment to the reign of crooks and racketeers in A. F. L. unions.

AMONG those present before or during the assault on Feeney the victim named Joe Moreschi, president of the great national licensed shakedown racket known as the Common Laborers' Union, who had tried to anschluss Feeney's union of sand hogs first by demanding the books and treasury for one of his appointees and later by trying to narrow the jurisdiction of Feeney's group until there would be no jobs left for them. The New York courts have enjoined him in this. Also present was Tom McGraw, business agent of Fay's Albany local, who recently was indicted in the Federal Court there on a charge of exacting kickbacks from laborers employed on war projects. McGraw also was pinched for beating up Feeney but, like Fay, was released in the interests of "solidarity."

The president of Fay's union is William E. Maloney of Chicago, a long-time social and professional intimate of Mike Carrozzo, who was Moreschi's man in Chicago and died owing the Government $250,000 in income taxes. Maloney like Carrozzo in his time, owns a racing stable and himself was indicted by Thurman Arnold on a charge of excluding ready-mix concrete from paving jobs there. His pal, Carrozzo, has a financial interest in another paving material. The indictment was dismissed on a demurrer based on the infamous doctrine of the carpenters' case as laid down by the U. S. Supreme Court.

In Akron, Ohio, Harry D. Jones, business agent of Fay's local there, a vice president of the Ohio Federation of Labor, and vice president of the local A. F. L. assembly, a life-long loafer and criminal with a record of two convictions for sex offenses against children, was sentenced to prison last year for hiring two men to dynamite a job on which C. I. O. men were employed. One of the dynamiters was killed. None of the union officials of the A. F. L. assisted in the prosecution of Jones.

In New York last winter Green gave a dinner for a noted English laborite from which Dubinsky walked out because who should turn up, among Green's guests, chatting with the guest of honor and Frances Perkins, but Joe Fay?

Criticism of the gorillas in the union racket is, of course, a work of disunity, serving the interests of Hitler and the Japs, so no part of the foregoing is stated in a critical spirit. It is just routine factual matter and by no means the half of it, either.

Restless Denmark

By Joachim Joesten

Third Site For A Western Front

SPECULATION on the opening of a second front in Western Europe has hitherto centered mainly on either of these two possibilities: a cross-Channel invasion of the French-Belgian-Dutch coast; or an invasion of Northern Norway from bases in Scotland and Iceland. That there is a third possibility, and that the German High Command is not overlooking it, has just been highlighted by significant news from Denmark.

A few days ago, the Nazi military authorities in Denmark issued new and stringent regulations by which practically all fishing and shipping along the west coast of Jutland has been provisionally suspended. The precautions taken in this area are very similar to those already in effect along all vital sections of the Norwegian coast. This is particularly significant because only a few years ago it was the practically unanimous opinion of German and Scandinavian military experts that an oversea invasion of Jutland was impossible. Indeed, the west coast of this peninsula has only one good harbor, Esbjerg, which even before the invasion of Denmark was entirely dominated by the ring of German strongholds on the North-Frisian island of Cylt and in Schleswig-Holstein. But it seems that the commando technique and the modern landing methods by means of sea-going tanks and flat-bottomed barges has done away with the idea that the sandy dunes of Western Jutland could not be successfully invaded from Britain. That much can be clearly inferred from the German precautions.

COINCIDENT with the news of German anti-invasion measures in Denmark comes the sensational disclosure of Allied submarine successes in the Baltic sea, Germany's "Mare Nostrum." Evidence that not only Russian, but also British submarines have been operating in Baltic waters ever since breaking of the ice a few months ago, has come from various sources.

One indication could be found in the repeated interruptions—which now seem to have led to a total standstill—of the two principal ferry traffic lines between Germany and Scandinavia: the Warnemunde-Gjedser and the Sassnitz-Trelleborg routes. Another very interesting fact was, perhaps inadvertently, revealed by the Copenhagen daily Dagens Nyheder of May 27. It was an admission, by the Minister of Trade, Halfdan Hendriksen, that the Danish Merchant Fleet had lost 51 ships, totaling 80,000 tons, during the year 1941 alone; losses for 1940 were given as 54 ships. If we take into consideration that in the first quarter of 1940 a number of Danish ships were still sunk by German action, it appears that the tonnage sunk while in Nazi service was even higher in 1941 than the year before.

And now comes from Sweden the news that the shipment of iron ore from Lulea, Gavle and Oxelosund to German Baltic ports has been virtually brought to a halt following the sinking of several ore-laden vessels by submarines or mines. Only one of these sinkings—that of the Swedish 3950-ton freighter Ada Gorthon has been spotlighted in the press here, because it reportedly occurred within Sweden's territorial waters and therefore became the object of a formal Swedish protest in Moscow. But it is freely admitted in informed Scandinavian circles that at least five or six such sinkings have occurred during the last few weeks.

In the same connection it is of interest to point out the greatly increased British air activity over Denmark, which has received little attention here, due to the all-absorbing news of 1000-bomber raids on Germany. It appears from recent issues of Danish and Swedish newspapers that British bombers, in April and May, attacked many strategic objectives in Denmark, especially the big Burmeister & Wain shipbuilding yards outside Copenhagen, and airfields in Jutland. The scope of these bombings may also be inferred from the comparatively heavy toll which the British had to pay for them. According to the Copenhagen press no less than 25 British fliers were buried at Aabenraa during the first two weeks of May.

NOT ALL of the many visits which British planes have paid to Denmark these last two months were concerned with bombing attacks. A Swedish newspaper which has many times before shown itself to be exceptionally well-informed of goings-on in nearby Denmark, the Gothenburg Trade and Shipping Gazette, told on May 16 of "a large number of parachutes that have lately been found in trees, usually three and three together." The paper added that the Germans, in spite of frantic searches, had not yet succeeded in discovering a single one of the parachutists who were supposed to be in hiding in the country.

But even more than by any of these military events, the German forces in Denmark were thrown into an acute fit of invasion jitters by the news of Christmas Moellers' successful escape to Great Britain. It will be remembered that the Danish Conservative leader suddenly turned up in London in the second week of May, by way of Sweden. It was the first time that an outstanding Danish political leader had managed to foil the vigilance of the Gestapo and leave the captive country by underground means.

The Germans must have been very worried indeed by this sensational flight. Important even before the invasion, Christmas Moeller emerged during the two years that have since passed as the unquestioned leader of anti-Nazi resistance. While himself a conservative of old standing, his following now is composed of men of all parties and he enjoys a tremendous popularity in Denmark. No other event could have galvanized the yet weak and scattered forces of the Free Danish movement, as Moeller's arrival in the British capital did. Now at last the Danes outside of Denmark have what they have been looking for all the time: a leader of undisputed authority, integrity and anti-Nazi fervor.

When Christmas Moeller, on April 10, 1940, joined the coalition cabinet the Nazis may have thought, as some others did, that he had turned "collaborationist." Soon, however, they found out that Moeller was using his influence to obstruct rather than foster their designs. On October 3, they forced him to quit the government and on January 10, 1941, to resign his seat in parliament. But even after this forced retirement from public life, Moeller managed to keep in close touch with administrative and military circles. He still has many friends in the cabinet, the army and the navy.

To the British, therefore, the sudden arrival of this man must have been a real godsend. However closely the Germans in Denmark may have been guarding their military secrets, some Danes must have learned them in these two years of involuntary guestship. And if anybody knew what was going on in Denmark, Christmas Moeller did. When he joined hands with the United Nations, the Nazis lost a battle—and they know it.

Is Hitler Slipping?

AP Writer Says Yes

By the Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., July 10.—Louis Lochner, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Berlin for 17 years, said tonight that Hitler was slipping and "some day the crash is bound to come," but not unless "every man, woman and child gets behind Uncle Sam with the greatest effort the world has ever known."

He told the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs that there were "brave souls" in Germany who dared oppose Hitler tyranny, that the Fuehrer was losing his psychic sense for divining the sentiments of the German people and that he was confronted with a number of serious bottlenecks, but that nonetheless "we must be unrelenting in our effort to inflict a smashing blow upon the Hitler regime.

"If there is any one military impression which I have taken here with me as a layman, it is that of the necessity of combatting Hitler with airpower and more airpower, and still more airpower."

While conceding that Hitler was a "tough customer," Lochner declared that from his own observation and experience he was satisfied the Fuehrer was "by no means invulnerable."

In addition to Hitler's psychological mistakes, he cited "bottlenecks" in German transportation and raw materials.

"HE IS BEGINNING to pay dearly for his egotism in neglecting the railways and favoring the Adolf Hitler super-highways which are to carry his fame to the four corners of the globe," Lochner said. "Let our bombers strike at German railway centers and Hitler will have been hit at one of his most vulnerable points."

Before the war, he said, about 24 million German men were engaged in gainful occupations, whereas today only about 11 million were left in civilian life "to work long hours." To make up for the men at the front, Lochner reported, more than nine million women had been pressed into work, augmented by about 1,500,000 prisoners of war, more than 2,000,000 foreign laborers and more recently by "several million children from 10 years upward."

Lochner was chief of the Associated Press bureau in Berlin from 1924 until his interment in December, 1941.

Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's College, declared that the United Nations can and should offer the world unity through federation and offer it now as a working alternative to Hitler's offer of "unity through conquest."

Mrs. Vera Micheles Dean, research director of the Foreign Policy Association, who appeared on the same program, also saw the end of the days of isolation and urged that the United Nations recognize that hope for world stabilization rested in concerted efforts "by all peoples to administer relations between nations on a basis of responsibility for each other's welfare."

CLOSING the day's program devoted to study of the problems that must be faced after the war, Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary of Agriculture, appealed for a closer unity between the United States and Great Britain, in which, he said, lay hope of an orderly solution of some of the problems ahead.

Barr, former professor of history at the University of Virginia, told the institute that the system of national sovereign states, which replaced feudalism, had outlived its usefulness and that two world wars had proven it.

The United Nations should offer world unity in two stages, he said.

"Those peoples which have had long practice in self-government should set up a federal union as speedily as a constitution can be drawn up and submitted for ratification. And it should be made clear that other peoples will be admitted when and if they can ensure self-government and guarantee the freedom of the human individual.

MRS. DEAN said that today we are pooling men, raw materials, munitions and ships to win the war, and tomorrow we must learn to pool our joint resources and our energies to win peace.

Appleby, discussing what the war has done to Great Britain and the need for close collaboration with Britain, said, "here in America there are large areas where one may travel without being particularly aware of physical aspects of the fact of war.

"In Britain war atmosphere and war activity surround one—every minute of every day, everywhere. Barrage balloons dot the sky, men and women in uniform are coming and going, buildings are camouflaged, airplanes throb overhead."

Appleby said that it is of supreme importance that "the American people understand how completely, how sublimely, the British people are giving of themselves to this war. For without the British commonwealth, this war could not be won.

Stable Colombia

By Virginia Prewett

An Effectively Functioning Democracy

THE HISTORY of Colombia (the President-elect of which is now in Washington), is closely bound up with the legend of El Dorado, for it was the report of fabulous stores of gold that led Spain's soldiers of fortune to perform almost incredible feats of daring and endurance to establish themselves there. They found gold and it still flows out of Colombia, but the country today is remarkable for being a different sort of El Dorado. It is one of the world's most effectively functioning democracies. It is a center of Hispanic-American culture with influence all over the Spanish-speaking Americas. Though not so rich in precious metals as the old Indian legend reported, Colombia has a wide range of natural resources. What is more important, her wealth is perhaps more evenly distributed than that of any of the South American nations.

Evidences of all this are visible to the naked eye when you visit Colombia. Whether you come in through the Caribbean seaport Barranquilla or through Cali from the south, you quickly see that the country is prosperous. You do not see the rags and emaciated faces that are common in some of the less fortunate countries of the hemisphere. In these and other Colombian cities row upon row of small, neat homes tell their story. The fact that many of them have open front gardens instead of the usual high protective wall indicates a long-established tradition of public order. Colombians have not in fact had a serious upheaval since 1903. They have gone through a recent period of social reforms without disturbances.

The many "tin" roofs that can be noted as you fly over Colombia's mountain valleys also tell a story. Plated iron sheeting has to be imported. Transportation costs make it expensive to the consumer on Colombia's highlands. That it is used as a common roofing material indicates a wide spread of purchasing power through the rural sections of the nation.

All this is a challenge to the observer who has studied other countries of the hemisphere. Comparison with them reveals that Colombia's happier condition is due in part to the fundamental make-up of the Colombian people. When the Spaniards came there they did not find large numbers of Indians nor meet with a long stubborn resistance from them as they did in other parts of the New World. They came in large numbers and quickly overcame and absorbed the Indian. Thus the Colombian began to be formed before the country won independence from Spain.

With no internal conflict arising out of the clash of the European civilization with the indigeneous American culture and with high mountain walls to protect them from external enemies, Colombia was able to come through the turbulent days that followed independence without developing a traditional rule by military chiefs. Bogota had been a center of humanistic culture during colonial times, as Mexico City, Caracas and Lima were. In Colombia, the tradition was never broken and the pen and the law book figure more largely in her history than the saddle and the sword. They have always been ready to fight for their rights, however, and even tossed out the Great Liberator, Bolivar, when they thought he was encroaching on it.

Basic to their present economic well being was an early break with the Spanish colonial system of great estates and the peonage that goes with it. Colombians have long been able to take up public lands under certain conditions on the pattern of our homesteading. The acreage that they can acquire has been materially increased within the last few years.

Colombia's diversified exports have helped her to ride out recent world economic storms with a minimum of stress. Gold has long been an important item, but coffee has far surpassed it in modern times. Bananas are a major export and Colombia is today Latin America's third most important oil source.

An increasing world demand for her mild coffee helped to tide her through the low gap in the early thirties when Latin American economies, cut off from their export markets, were cracking right and left and governments were toppling. The dip in coffee prices during the middle thirties was partially offset by an increased production of gold. Coffee is grown on small or medium-sized plantations and a substantial part of gold production is owned by Colombian capital. Both of these factors insure a wide spread of returns through Colombia's economy.

Colombia's most serious recent problems arise out of the banana blight and war loss of European markets and sources of supply. To cushion the latter, she increased purchases from us and from Latin American nations that sell manufactured goods abroad. The Inter-American Coffee Agreement bolstered coffee prices and helped meet the problem of shrunken foreign exchange. Colombians point out, however, that the increase in price is not absolute to the individual planter, since coffee exports are taxed to provide funds to buy up an unexportable surplus. This insures the widest benefit from the price rise.

An important factor in Colombia's economic stability during the last six years has been the growth of light industry, particularly textiles, processed foods and building materials. This has decreased her dependence on imports and has stimulated economic activity all down the line from producer to consumer. When I was in Bogota early this year, the Minister of Finance and other economists told me that their immediate concern was to find means to keep the war from strangling this development. Ship shortage and our greater conversion to war production has since made any expansion along this line out of the question. Effects are again cushioned somewhat since Colombia's existing industries could and have increased their production. Increased sale of agricultural products to the Canal Zone is also helping their economic situation.

Colombia's first problem now is the same as that faced by all the other nations of the hemisphere—to hold on through the grave war emergency as steadily as possible.

Roosevelt Signs Measure Authorizing 7-Ocean Navy

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed legislation yesterday authorizing the construction of 1,900,000 tons of additional combat ships and 1,200,000 tons of auxiliary vessels for the Navy.

The new combat ship tonnage, raising to 5,649,480 the authorized strength of the Navy, is expected to be in service by the end of 1946.

"It will give us the largest Navy in the world," commented Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee. "It provides not only for a two-ocean Navy, but for a seven-ocean Navy, one that will win the war and keep it won."

Included in the new fighting ship tonnage, for which Congress has appropriated $8,550,000,000, are 500,000 tons of aircraft carriers, 500,000 tons of cruisers and 900,000 tons of destroyers and destroyer escort ships.

Congress previously had authorized the construction of 3,749,480 tons of fighting ships, of which, Vinson said 1,009,245 tons now are in service and 2,646,606 tons are under construction. The Navy estimated that the last keel under the expanded program would be laid by December 31, 1944.

Vinson said right-of-way would be given to construction of the aircraft carriers, with the cruiser and destroyer program being started early next year.

The 1,200,000 tons of auxiliary vessels, such as tenders and service ships, brings to 2,550,000 the authorized auxiliary tonnage, the cost of which was not estimated.

Colombia's President Pledges All Aid To U. S. War Effort

By the Associated Press

President-elect Alfonso Lopez of Colombia pledged the complete and enthusiastic cooperation of his country with the United States war effort in an address yesterday before the governing board of the Pan American Union.

The Colombian leader, in the United States on a state visit as the guest of President Roosevelt, gave high praise to the Administration's "good neighbor" policy and declared that he would give support at all times to Secretary Hull's efforts to further Pan American solidarity.

He also praised Hull's reciprocal trade agreement program.

The President-elect spoke to the diplomatic representatives of the other 20 republics who comprise the Pan American Union's governing board and Secretary Hull, board chairman.

A few minutes before he had heard Secretary Hull laud Colombia's effective work in furthering the collaboration of the American republics.

"It was a very impressive group we have had here," Secretary Hull commented after the meeting.

Later, the diplomats, led by Secretary Hull and the President-elect, walked into the Hall of Flags for the luncheon given by the board in Dr. Lopez' honor.

The Colombian President-elect, in his address to the governing board, had stressed his great pleasure and satisfaction in working with Secretary Hull at the Pan-American conferences in Montevideo in 1933 and at Buenos Aires in 1936.

He stressed that Colombia was always ready to cooperate in the Pan-American family of nations.

Dr. Lopez, who previously had served a term as President of Colombia, between 1934 and 1938, will be inaugurated in August.

During his second term, he said yesterday, he hoped to participate in strengthening inter-American collaboration and making this solidarity of the American republics more productive.

Women Workers On Railways, Buses May Get Overtime

District women who have taken over men's jobs with railroads and bus lines here would be permitted to earn overtime pay from now on under a bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee.

The bill exempts the women, many of whom have replaced men in such posts as ticket sellers, from the provisions of the local minimum hour law for the duration. The present law specifically prohibits female workers from staying on the job longer than eight hours.

In other States the women railroaders have been able to earn overtime pay as they are subject to the Federal Railway Labor Act, which takes legal precedence over State minimum hour law. Legislation was found necessary to solve the problem in the District, however, since both the Federal and local law were enacted by the Congress.

Carter Glass 3d Wins Air Corps Promotion

Carter Glass 3d, grandson of Senator Glass of Virginia, has been promoted to a first lieutenancy in the Army Air Corps, the War Department announced yesterday.

Glass became an aviation cadet last October and received his wings at Scott Field, Ill. He was commissioned a second lieutenant January 22 and assigned to a bombardment squadron. His home is at Lynchburg, Va.

'Harmonious Conference' Closes Session With Gala Party at Pan American Union

Inter-American Economic Delegates Pronounce Conference 'Complete Success'

By Carolyn Bell

"A complete success . . . there never was a more harmonious conference." These are the phrases one heard at the cocktail party following the final session of the Inter-American Economic Conference yesterday. But getting down to brass tacks was something else again. The actual success (i. e. just what was accomplished) seemed snowed under a gush of superlatives. But all agreed the conference was unified, which bodes well for the Americas and ill for the Axis.

Stepping into the serene atmosphere of the Pan American Building where the flags of the 21 Americas flew proudly, it was difficult to realize that for the past week, and yesterday in particular, the Union has been in a complete dither of Pan Americanism. Speeches and the pounding gavel have resounded throughout this marble edifice almost constantly for the past week.

Being congratulated on all sides was Edward Foley, genial General Counsel for the Treasury, who closed the meeting with what was termed "a darned good speech." Mrs. Foley, perched on the balcony overlooking the patio, was asked how she liked her husband's speech. "Oh, I heard him open the conference" (he having been elected president of the group), and she continued, "I was petrified then, because it was the first speech I had ever heard him make—but now I am used to it." Asked to comment on the outcome of the conference, Mr. Foley raised his glass and said, "A complete success."

Group Held Many Meetings

Gala was the word for yesterday's gathering. For although the delegates—there were 51 in all—were tired they were obviously happy and pleased with the outcome of the conference. They were hosts at the party which took place in the Gallery of Heroes (or Hall of Flags, if you prefer) to repay the many courtesies offered them during their stay here.

Having arrived in the Capital on July 1, the delegates have been in and out of sessions for the past few weeks. As one gentleman explained it yesterday "the purpose of these conferences has been to throw a really effective blockade around the aggressor nations—or any nation associated with them." By getting together the various countries have been able to swap methods, systems and information on how to curtail Axis activities within their own borders—as well as without.

Edwardo Villasenor, who is director general of the Bank of Mexico, was in deep conversation with a group of diplomats when glimpsed yesterday. And not far away was another Mexican delegate to the conference, Antonio Carrillo. The two men from Ecuador chatted over their highballs. They are Eduardo Icaza, president of the Central Bank of Ecuador, and Alberto Alcival. Up from Uruguay were Roberto MacEachen and Carlos M. Fernandez Goyechea. Chile was well represented by Pedro Enrique Alfonso and Ramos Rojas Castro.

Senor Garrondona Is Congratulated

Another gentleman who came in for his share of congratulations was Jose J. Gonzalez Garrondona, who spoke in behalf of the Latin Americans at the close of the meeting. Being introduced around by the Nicaraguan Minister, Henri De Bayle, was the delegate from Nicaragua, Rafael Huezo, Who posseses an excellent sense of humor. Minister De Bayle reports that his young daughter, Leana, is having her first fling at an American camp and will leave today for a spot in Virginia.

Chatting together were Mrs. Edward Miller, wife of one of the advisers at the conference, and Mrs. Donald Hiss, who wore a splashy red and white print. Mrs. Miller was smartly gowned in a pale blue frock with a matching flower tucked in her dark hair.

Lovely to look at was Senora de Oreamuno, wife of the delegate from Costa Rica, who reports that she and her husband will linger on a bit in Washington before returning to their homeland. Her husband is vice chairman of another inter-American conference being held here shortly. Yesterday she wore a fluffy white hat to offset her chic black frock.

Senora de Rodriguez, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, was there yesterday as was Senora de Campbell, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy. The latter was accompanied by her daughter, Senora de Gacitua, who will leave soon to join her husband in New Orleans. The Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, was there as were many, many others.

Wennerbergs to Be Honoredat Luncheon

The Charge d'Affaires of Chile, Gen. Arturo Espinosa and Senora de Espinosa, will entertain at a luncheon today honoring the retiring Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg. Members of the Chilean staff will be on hand for the party, which is to be given at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. Wennerberg has been appointed Charge d'Affaires of Sweden in Chile and with Mme. Wennerberg will leave Washington tomorrow. They plan to go to Miami and from there will fly to Chile.

Chilean Writer Feted at Luncheon

A distinguished Chilean writer, Raul Silva Castro, was feted at a luncheon yesterday given at the Cosmos Club by Charles A. Thomson, chief of the cultural relations division of the State Department.

Ensign Struble Off to Station

Ensign Arthur D. Struble, U. S. Navy, who has been visiting his parents, Capt. A. D. Struble U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Struble, has left to report to his new station.

Captain and Mrs. Struble, who have been stationed in Washington before, returned to the Capital for a new tour of duty only last month. They spent most of the time before June 19, however, at the Naval Academy, from which their son graduated on that date. Having taken the home of Miss Mary Beard at 3816 Forty-ninth Street, they are busy getting settled for the summer. With them here is their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Struble.

Another recent house guest of Captain and Mrs. Struble was Miss Mary Ann Callaghan, who has returned to her home in Baltimore after a several days' visit.

French Envoy to Receive Colony On Bastille Day

On the occasion of National Day, the French Ambassador will receive the French colony of Washington and the friends of France, July 14, at noon at the French Embassy, 2221 Kalorama Road.

Religious services for the memory of the soldiers who lost their lives during the war will be held at 10 o'clock at St. John's Church by the Rev. Liotard and at 11 o'clock at the Catholic Cathedral of St. Matthew by the Rev. Father Baisnee.

The French colony and all the friends of France are cordially invited to attend in a common spirit of union.

Buffet Supper Planned By United Nations Club

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, will attend the weekly United Nations Club buffet supper tomorrow at Dumbarton Oaks.

Others planning to be there are Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Chu Shih Ming, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Schley, Miss Sue Rosenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pell, Miss Meredith Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Kent jr., and Mrs. Benjamin Rogers.

Two Argentinians In Capital as Government Guests

Two well known Argentinians, Dr. Teodora Becu and Dr. Sebastian Soler, have arrived here on the invitation of the State Department. Dr. Becu is a well known man of letters and adviser to the Lozada publishing firm. Dr. Soler is professor of law at the University of Cordoba and judge of the Court of Appeals of Rasario.

Dr. Becu has represented his country as official delegate to the International Aeronautical Congress in Rome in 1922 and to the World Monetary and Economic Congress in London in 1933. He is an active member of the Society of Argentine Bibliophiles and past editor of the Juridical and Social Science Review of Buenos Aires. He has published two books and several monographs on banking.

Dr. Soler is well known as a penalist and is an outstanding authority on juvenile delinquency. While in this country he will give special attention to juvenile courts and reform schools.

Lieut. and Mrs. J. M. Robinson Return From Wedding Trip

Recently returned from their wedding trip are Lieut. and Mrs. John Mentzer Robinson who are making their home at 2126 Suitland Terrace, Fairfax Village, this city.

Before their recent marriage the bride was Miss Dorothea Ada McCorkle and for several years has been secretary of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation to which post she plans to return in the near future. The bridegroom is stationed with the inspection administration of the Navy Department.

Their marriage took place on Saturday, June 27, in the Church of the Reformation with the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder officiating. In lieu of the traditional bridal white, the bride was gowned in blush tinted satin made with a fitted bodice of bluish Chantilly lace and full satin skirt. She wore matching veil of illusion caught with an heirloom coronet of rosepoint lace and carried a white Bible with a shower of white orchids.

Miss Anna Robinson was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Russell C. Payne, Mrs. Edgar J. Dull and Miss Elizabeth Usinger. All wore pastel shades of organza with tiaras of garden flowers matching their bouquets. Ernest F. McCorkle, brother of the bride, served as best man and ushers were Dr. Russell C. Payne, Edgar J. Dull and Ensign Clarence D. Shelburne, U.S.N.R. Catherine Blackburn carried the rings for the double ring ceremony.

Immediately following the service a reception was held in the Garden House of the Dodge Hotel. The bride is a graduate of Ursinus College in Collegeville, Pa., and Lieut. Robinson received his degree from Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa.

Jean Baube Is Honored by Mrs. Sherrod

The pleasantly informal 6 to 8 o'clock cocktail party at which Mrs. Robert Sherrod was hostess yesterday was in the nature of a "welcome back" fete for Jean Baube, former head of the French News Agency here and now a member of the Free French Staff in London.

Mr. Baube who resigned his post here after the fall of France, has been in London for some time and arrived in Washington to join Mrs. Baube about two weeks ago. He plans to remain another month or so and the twenty or more guests at yesterday's party were for the most part friends of the popular Free Frenchman.

Among those who dropped in at the Sherrod home during the late afternoon were the Chinese Military Attache and Mme. Chu Shih-ming, the Commercial Secretary at the British Embassy and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, Mrs. Richard K. Sutherland, wife of General Sutherland, aide to General MacArthur; Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Henle, Charles Edmundson of the staff of Fortune Magazine and Mrs. Edmundson and several members of the editorial staffs of Life and Time magazines in Washington. Mr. Sherrod, husband of the hostess, is at present in Australia as correspondent for Time Magazine.

Joseph Davies Fetes Belgian Prime Minister

Hubert Pierlot, Prime Minister of the Belgian government in exile, was the guest in whose honor Joseph Davies, former United States Ambassador to Belgium, entertained at luncheon yesterday.

M. Pierlot, who is staying at the Belgian Embassy, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given there on Monday evening. He will leave here next week to continue his trip to the Belgian Congo. Before coming to Washington he spent two days in New York, having arrived there early this week by plane from London.

Mrs. A. S. Henning Returns From South

Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning has returned home from Fort Bliss, Texas, after a visit of several weeks with her son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. T. Courtenay O'Connell. Accompanying her on the motor trip up here, the O'Connells stopped en route to visit Major and Mrs. N. Landon Head, the former Elizabeth Henning of Fort Benning, Ga.

They also visited Lieutenant O'Connell's parents, Col. and Mrs. George O'Connell, at Fort McClellan, Ala. After a few days' visit here with the Hennings, Lieutenant and Mrs. O'Connell will motor to their new post at Camp Edwards, Mass.

Alben B. Blagg And Bride at Home In Washington

Mr. and Mrs. Alben Barkley Blagg, whose wedding took place recently in Clovis, N. Mex., are now in Washington to make their home. The bride is the former Miss Nelda Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Wilkinson of Clovis, and the ceremony took place Monday, June 29, at the First Methodist Church in that city.

The Rev. W. G. Bailey officiated, and the bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in Chantilly lace over ivory slipper satin, styled with a fitted bodice, leg-o'-mutton sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. The full skirt was softly draped into a court train, and the costume was set off with a full-length veil of illusion, falling from a tiara of ivory and pearls. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias and stephanotis.

Miss Patricia Smith of Follett, Tex., was maid of honor, and bridesmaids included Miss Margaret Young of Phoenix, Ariz., and Miss Jean Bickley and Miss Madalyn Trahey of Clovis.

Langdon Skarda of Clovis was best man, and ushers were James Burns, Richard Jones and Dan Trahey, also of Clovis.

Following the wedding, there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, and the couple left later on their wedding trip. The former Miss Wilkinson was graduated from National Park Junior College early this month. Mr. Blagg attended George Washington University and Columbia Technical Institute. He is now associated with the A. Hamilton Wilson firm of this city.

Velasquez, and the Minister of Nicaragua, Senor Dr. Don Leon De Bayle.

Inter-American Delegates Attend

Still others attending were the Minister of Honduras, Senor Dr. Julian R. Caceres; the Minister of Costa Rica, Senor Dr. Luis Fernandez; the Minister of Haiti, Fernand Dennis; the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Dr. J. M. Troncoso; the Charge d'Affaires of Brazil, Fernando Lobo; the Charge d'Affaires of Chile, Gen. Arturo Espinosa, and the Charge d'Affaires of El Salvador, Dr. Carlos Adalberto Alfaro; the United States Ambassador to Colombia, Arthur Bliss Lane; the Secretary of the Colombian Embassy, Alberto Vargas Narino; the delegates of Colombia to the Inter-American Conference on Systems of Economic and Financial Control; Dr. Alberto Bayon, chief of the Office of Exchange and Import Control; Dr. Antonio Puerto, member of the governing board of the Bank of the Republic; the Military Aide to the President-elect, Lieut. Col. Arthur L. Richmond; the Naval Aide to the President-elect, Capt. Frank Lottin; the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe; Mr. John H. Morgan, of the Department of State; the Counselor, Dr. William Manger, and Senor Enrique Coronado of the Pan American Union.

Vice President Attends Dinner

At the dinner given by Ambassador Turbay for his country's President-elect, ranking guest was Vice President Henry A. Wallace. Heading the guest list were the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador Felipe Espil; the Turkish Ambassador Mehmut Ertegun; the Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera; the Ecuadorean Ambassador Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Chinese Ambassador Dr. Hu Shih; the Venezuelan Ambassador Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Russian Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff; the Panamanian Ambassador Ernesto Jaen Guardia; the Bolivian Ambassador Fernando Guachalla; Attorney General Francis Biddle; the newly appointed United States Ambassador to Colombia Arthur Bliss Lane; Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

Other guests included Senator Tom Connally, Senator Claude Pepper, Dr. Alfonso Araujo; Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt; the Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson; Dr. Jorge Soto del Corral; Vice Admiral Alfred Johnson; Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle; Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long and Dr. Alberto Jaramillo Sanchez.

Still others included Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Admiral T. S. Wilkinson, John Russell Young, Laurence Duggan, Admiral Emory S. Land, Gen. Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, John W. Studebaker, Nelson Rockefeller, Lieut. Col. Arthur L. Richmond, Warren Lee Pierson and Stanley Woodward.

Also Philip W. Bonsal, Col. Jorge Esguerra Lopez, Capt. Frank Loftin, Manuel Mejia, Bernardo Cock, Alberto Vargas, Philip Young, Walter Walmsley, Col. Ernesto Buenaventura, R. W. Hebbard and Juan Jose Turbay.

Also Col. James W. Foy, Alberto Bayon, Raymond Dodson, John Morgan, Eduardo Gamba-Escallon and Fernando Gaitan.

Mrs. Souby Gives Tea

It was a "come at 4:30" party yesterday afternoon but most of the guests lingered on until well into the evening, at Mrs. James M. Souby's. Assisting the hostess were her mother, Mrs. John H. Berry, and her daughter, Miss Marjorie Souby.

Generally assisting were Miss Yvette Bailleau, Miss Rowena Butler, Miss Bhagwati Bajpai, Miss Louise McNutt and Miss Anita Cajigas.

Among the guests who dropped in for a cup of tea and a bit of a chat were Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador; Lady Dixon, wife of the new Australian Minister; Mrs. Harold Butler, wife of the new Minister of Great Britain; Lady Bajpai, wife of the Indian Agent General; Lady Bailleau, Mme. Yu, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Miss Minnie Mae Fleming.

Also Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. William A. Disque, Mrs. O. E. Colvin, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Miss Christine Sadler and Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson.

Miss Riordon and Fiance to Be Feted Tonight

The cocktail fete which Mr. and Mrs. J. Maxon Cunningham will give tonight in honor of Miss Cecile Riordon and their son Ensign J. Maxon Cunningham, jr., United States Coast Guard Reserve, will be high light of a full schedule of prenuptial events for the couple whose marriage will take place July 16. The party will be held in the East Room at The Mayflower instead of in the Pan American Room as announced in the invitations.

Around a hundred guests have been invited to the 5 to 7:30 party, among them being friends of the parents of the couple and members of the young set as well as a number of out of town guests who are here for the festivities preceding the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Tinsley Halter of West Palm Beach, who will arrive a few hours before the event, will be in attendance as well as Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Cunningham, who are from Southern Maryland. Members of the bridal party to be there are Miss Mary Ellen Brown, who will be Miss Riordon's maid of honor, the bridesmaids, Mrs. John K. Smith and Mrs. Andrew H. Wahl, the best man Charles R. Shelton, 3d, and the ushers Lieut. Lucian B. Clarke, Capt. Lowell K. Bradford, Ensign David T. Kirby and Frank Kridel.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Riordon of this city. Ensign Cunningham arrived late this week from his post on Staten Island, N. Y., and plans are complete for the wedding on next Thursday at the Church of the Nativity.

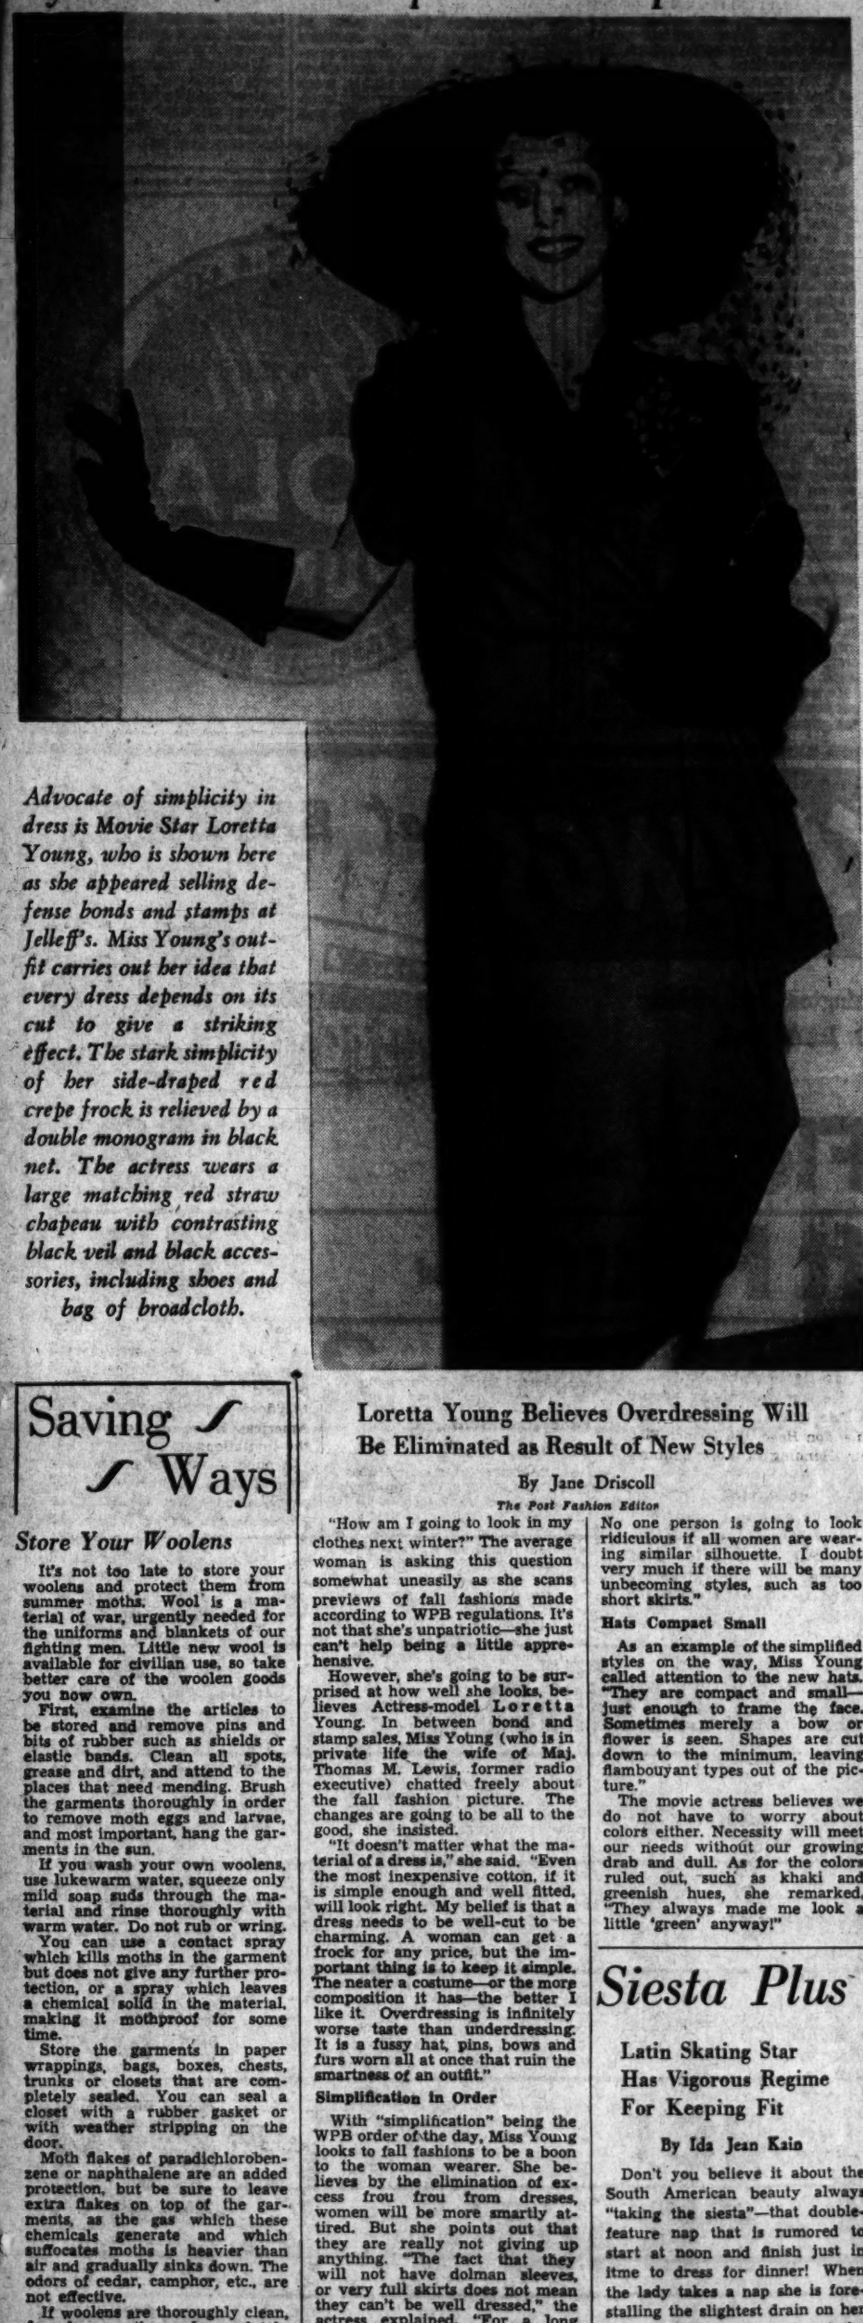
WPB 'Cuts' of Fall Clothes Aid to Feminine Chic, Says Actress, Who Is Exponent of Simple Lines



Advocate of simplicity in dress is Movie Star Loretta Young, who is shown here as she appeared selling defense bonds and stamps at Jelleff's. Miss Young's outfit carries out her idea that every dress depends on its cut to give a striking effect. The stark simplicity of her side-draped red crepe frock is relieved by a double monogram in black net. The actress wears a large matching red straw chapeau with contrasting black veil and black accessories, including shoes and bag of broadcloth.

Saving Ways

Store Your Woolens

It's not too late to store your woolens and protect them from summer moths. Wool is a material of war, urgently needed for the uniforms and blankets of our fighting men. Little new wool is available for civilian use, so take better care of the woolen goods you now own.

First, examine the articles to be stored and remove pins and bits of rubber such as shields or elastic bands. Clean all spots, grease and dirt, and attend to the places that need mending. Brush the garments thoroughly in order to remove moth eggs and larvae, and most important, hang the garments in the sun.

If you wash your own woolens, use lukewarm water, squeeze only mild soap suds through the material and rinse thoroughly with warm water. Do not rub or wring.

You can use a contact spray which kills moths in the garment but does not give any further protection, or a spray which leaves a chemical solid in the material, making it mothproof for some time.

Store the garments in paper wrappings, bags, boxes, chests, trunks or closets that are completely sealed. You can seal a closet with a rubber gasket or with weather stripping on the door.

Moth flakes of paradichlorobenzene or naphthalene are an added protection, but be sure to leave extra flakes on top of the garments, as the gas which these chemicals generate and which suffocates moths is heavier than air and gradually sinks down. The odors of cedar, camphor, etc., are not effective.

If woolens are thoroughly clean, free from moths, and completely sealed, they will be safe until you want to use them again.

Everlasting Beauty Palm Is Awarded To Ann Sheridan

Hollywood, Calif.—If you can compare in figure and facial contour to Ann Sheridan, you have beauty that "will hold up through the years."

According to Gloria Bristol, the famous beautician and figure expert, Ann will be just as beautiful and vibrant 10 years from now.

In selecting the star as representative among actresses of "everlasting beauty," Miss Bristol said that the star's well-formed features and her shapely figure were of the firm quality and contour that will last.

"And that isn't all," said Miss Bristol, "Ann has an inner quality, a joie de vivre, that will do more toward keeping her young and attractive than all the beauty treatments in the world."

Miss Bristol was summoned to Europe in 1936 to attend and advise Princess Juliana of The Netherlands on matters of beauty and exercise. She also lists among her clients the Duchess of Windsor and many movie stars.

Miss Bristol selected Marlene Dietrich as the Hollywood star with the most perfect complexion, and she named Miss Sheridan, Lana Turner and Paulette Goddard as possessors of the best figures in motion pictures.

Loretta Young Believes Overdressing Will Be Eliminated as Result of New Styles

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

"How am I going to look in my clothes next winter?" The average woman is asking this question somewhat uneasily as she scans previews of fall fashions made according to WPB regulations. It's not that she's unpatriotic—she just can't help being a little apprehensive.

However, she's going to be surprised at how well she looks, believes Actress-model Loretta Young. In between bond and stamp sales, Miss Young (who is in private life the wife of Maj. Thomas M. Lewis, former radio executive) chatted freely about the fall fashion picture. The changes are going to be all to the good, she insisted.

"It doesn't matter what the material of a dress is," she said. "Even the most inexpensive cotton, if it is simple enough and well fitted, will look right. My belief is that a dress needs to be well-cut to be charming. A woman can get a frock for any price, but the important thing is to keep it simple. The neater a costume—or the more composition it has—the better I like it. Overdressing is infinitely worse taste than underdressing. It is a fussy hat, pins, bows and furs worn all at once that ruin the smartness of an outfit."

Simplification In Order

With "simplification" being the WPB order of the day, Miss Young looks to fall fashions to be a boon to the woman wearer. She believes by the elimination of excess frou frou from dresses, women will be more smartly attired. But she points out that they are really not giving up anything. "The fact that they will not have dolman sleeves, or very full skirts does not mean they can't be well dressed," the actress explained. "For a long time we did not have these adjuncts."

"The English woman has got along," she continued. "Style comes of necessity—which is still the mother of invention. Most women dress competitively.

No one person is going to look ridiculous if all women are wearing similar silhouette. I doubt very much if there will be many unbecoming styles, such as too short skirts."

Hats Compact Small

As an example of the simplified styles on the way, Miss Young called attention to the new hats. "They are compact and small—just enough to frame the face. Sometimes merely a bow or flower is seen. Shapes are cut down to the minimum, leaving flamboyant types out of the picture."

The movie actress believes we do not have to worry about colors either. Necessity will meet our needs without our growing drab and dull. As for the colors ruled out, such as khaki and greenish hues, she remarked, "They always made me look a little 'green' anyway!"

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Acted on Soldier's Suggestion to Write His 'Teen-Age Sister, Girl Finds Herself Caught Up in Tiresome Exchange; How Break It Off?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I met a young man in the service who has been my friend for a year. In fact, we are very good friends, and I suppose we would have been sweethearts by now, if he hadn't been sent overseas some time ago,—which put everything on ice for the time being. While he was in the United States he wrote me every day and I answered promptly. In one of his letters he asked me to write to his sister, who is younger than I,—she being in her teens, and I just in the twenties.

I have never met any of his family, and while I didn't exactly approve of his requesting me to write to his sister (since we hadn't met) I surmised that he just wanted us to exchange a friendly "hello." So I wrote to her, and now the correspondence seems to go on and on,—and to me, it has no point. Her letters are so commonplace and really tiresome that I do not care to keep up the correspondence. Moreover, her sentences begin and end on a "dear" and "honey" note, which I disapprove, since I myself don't write letters of that sort to her.

I have been wondering how I could terminate the correspondence without violating Emily Post rules and regulations. I have delayed answering her for two weeks, but in the meantime I continue to receive more commonplace letters; and, frankly, it's getting so I haven't time to read them. Would it be too arbitrary just to stop writing entirely, no matter how many letters I get from her? Your early advice will be appreciated.

BETH B.

Older Girl's Attitude Is Soul-Constricting

DEAR BETH B.: You are not much of a prize, as friend or sweetheart for any man, if you lack the kindness of heart, the generosity, the human sympathy and understanding, to maintain a friendly correspondence with a lonely (probably socially isolated) youngster,—who manifestly cherishes your notice as "something special."

I wonder if the girl lives in the country,—rather cut off from neighbors and contemporary-age associates? I wonder if she is a bit of an "ugly duckling?"—who hasn't "made the grade" with "the crowd" her age at school? I wonder if perhaps her brother realizes, with some concern, that she needs more friends than she has; and hoped that letters from you would provide a lifeline to tide her through his absence,—which she may feel more keenly because having so few affectional alliances with young people?

If her letters are commonplace and really tiresome, it may be for lack of environmental stimuli. But from your superior vantage point, in this fascinating capital of the allied nations,—and with your social knowledgeability and wider range of interests,—you should be able, in a quite offhand way, over a period of time, to work a great change in the substance of her thinking and manner of expression.

If you really are the better rounded, more articulate personality you believe yourself to be, it should be no chore at all to toss off a typewritten letter to her once a week (in 15 minutes or less), giving a chatty, serial account of life in Washington as you see it today. You might call her attention, in passing, to new books, magazine articles, your favorite political columnist's views on national or world events, etc.,—mentioning that such-and-such struck you as interesting, unbelievable or what-have-you, and suggesting that she dip into the subject and give her reaction. You might touch on movies you've seen, or music you've heard,—favoring or vetoing, as you choose, and briefly explaining why.

There is soul-constricting selfishness implict in your attitude of sizing up this fumbling youngster and brushing her off as having nothing (of socially negotiable value) to offer you. It has been written, "Freely give, and freely ye shall receive." As you hope for beneficent consideration from persons more advantageously placed than yourself—persons enjoying more abundant blessings of every sort—it behooves you to invoke the workings of spiritual law on your own behalf, by giving freely of friendship to this wistful child, who is eagerly looking to you for the gift.

However, if you cannot oblige the girl's hopes with easy good humor; if you find yourself in antagonistic mood every time you receive an additional letter from her, or when you sit down to pen a perfunctory acknowledgment of several,—break off the correspondence with a gentle "white lie:" justifiable in order to spare her feelings. You might, for instance, make her a gift of a subscription to a magazine,—the New Yorker, Time, Mademoiselle,—and send her a note, announcing the gift.

In this note, you might say, in effect, that it has been pleasant to "meet" her through letters; but wartime Washington,—the long working hours, the transportation problem, the shopping problem, the need of every minute of rest one can get,—there just seems to be less and less time for "visiting" of any sort; that you scarce find time to write letters home; and that you are trying to put yourself on an efficiency schedule. Tell her you have such a guilty conscience about neglecting her letters that you have decided the only thing to do is to "throw in the sponge" and say goodby to her,—for the duration, at least.

Then say, "As a token of friendship, I am sending you a subscription to Mademoiselle (or whatever);—and when you get it and read it, think of it as a letter from me. It will certainly come more regularly and be better written! And if you don't hear from me again, you will know why. With all good wishes, etc." That ought to end the correspondence, and still give the youngster a figurative "contact" with you to pridefully cherish.

M. H.

Siesta Plus Exercise Provides Energy

Latin Skating Star Has Vigorous Regime For Keeping Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

Don't you believe it about the South American beauty always "taking the siesta"—that double-feature nap that is rumored to start at noon and finish just in time to dress for dinner! When the lady takes a nap she is forestalling the slightest drain on her reserve energy. And, I suspect, the "siesta" is the reason everyone I've met from the tropics displays more energy than a hot tamale.

The Latins seem to think it's impolite to tell us we're wrong in thinking everyone below the equator goes around in a lovely, dreamy daze. Petite Mayita Montez, Argentine ice-skating star who has lived all over that part of the map, told me seriously that the women down there "can't exercise as much as they can in this country because it's so hot they would knock themselves out."

South of Equator

Miss Montez then trudged up to the blazing room of the Center Theater Building in Radio City and, smiling steadfastly under the stark rays of the July sun, proceeded to go through a set of calisthenics that would leave nine out of ten women exhausted even in an air-conditioned gym. She had picked the exercises up south of the equator!

And her coach, Carlos Vasconcellos, Brazilian swim champion for 1941, who had come along to supervise, was caught up in the spirit of things and the first thing anybody knew he was bending over and touching his elbows to the floor. Never tell me again how you can bend over and touch your fingers to your toes!

Mr. Vasconcellos found out that swimmers need exercises — anybody who does the same kind of exercise day after day needs a change. So he worked out a set that will keep the muscles of swimmers smooth and supple.

Mayita Montez, Argentine ice-skating star, is an example of the vivacious Latin type of beauty. Noted for her perpetual energy, she ascribes this in part to her vigorous exercises, which have also given her a perfect figure. She weighs 107 pounds for her height of 5 feet 2½ inches and is drinking milk to gain

They turned out to be just what Miss Montez needed—and no doubt they will serve you very well.

Knee Flexing

The warming-up exercise consists of simply standing erect, hands on hips, and flexing alternate knees high up toward chest. As you get into better condition you should be able to flex the knees higher and faster.

To slim the waist, do a side bend. Stand erect with feet about 18 inches apart, one arm arched overhead, and bend in the opposite direction without budging the hips. Then relax and bend to the other side.

And do this one: Stand with arms straight out in front, shoulder level, and pull up through the midriff. Keep your hips to the front and fling your arms and shoulders around to the side.

Those are just a few samples of the exercises Mayita does every morning. As a result her measurements are lovely—bust, 34 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 34 inches. She weighs 107 pounds for her height of 5 feet 2½ inches and is drinking milk to gain.

Free French Here to Observe Bastille Day Tuesday With Requiem Mass and Party

COME JULY 14—Frenchmen, wherever they may be, will observe Bastille Day. In occupied France, no doubt the only observance will be a silent prayer for a return of the country's independence. Here in Washington, members of the France Forever and the Free French Movement in America will observe France's original independence day with a requiem mass for the French war victims and a party later in the evening.

The requiem mass will be held Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, at St. Matthew's Church, with the Rev. Father Bainee of the Catholic University officiating. To this the public is invited. But admission to the party that night at 8 o'clock, 1701 Connecticut Avenue, is by invitation only.

This celebration also marks the 150th anniversary of the "Marseillaise." Topping the invitations to the event are these words: "Liberte . . . Egalite . . . Fraternity," words that once echoed throughout the world.

On the entertainment side of the party are a musical program, dancing and buffet supper. Invitations clearly state that the building is air-conditioned . . . so the heat won't be an excuse for absence.

Fred G. Hoffeerr, vice president of France Forever (New York City headquarters) is coming to Washington especially for the event. Also expected to be present is Jean Delattre-Leguy, president of the Washington Chapter, France Forever.

From the Free French delegation will be Adrienn Tixier, Jacques Paris, Charles Leroux and Mme. de Gramonte.

Representatives of Washington Chapter, France Forever, will be: Mrs. Adele Worthington, Mme. Marguerite Voge, Madame Blanche Onagnost, Madame Cesar Delean, Madame Lucie Chaconas and scads of others.

Just as a memory refresher—July 14 is to France what July 4 is to the United States . . . Independence Day.

Kappa Gamma Party Tomorrow

MEMBERS of Kappa Gamma, national educational sorority, will apartying go tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, honorary member of the sorority, is entertaining the local group with a reception and musicale at 8 p. m. at her home, 2949 Macomb Street Northwest.

Mrs. Helen Dowling McChesney, national president of the sorority, will receive Mrs. Irman Floyd Niland, executive vice president; Mrs. Mercedes Hurt, another vice president, and Mrs. Joe Orr Davies, national secretary.

Presidents of the seven local chapters also will be on hand. Among the presidents and representatives of the chapters will be Mrs. "Monty" Zinbinden, Alpha; Miss Emeline French, Gamma; Miss Margaret Nelson, Delta; Miss Catherine Stiffler, Epsilon; Mrs. Ella Reed, Zeta, and Miss Nancy Sullivan, vice president of Theta chapter.

Music will be provided by Kappa Gamma chorus, composed of 50 voices. Director of the chorus is Mrs. Dorothy Hutcheson.

Honor guests will include Senator Hattie Carraway and Mrs. John Kee, honorary members of the sorority.

Other invited guests include: Representative Jennings Randolph and Mrs. Randolph, Representative Harry Sheppard and Mrs. Sheppard, Representative John Kee, Representative Luther Patrick and Mrs. Patrick.

Jewish Juniors Party

THERE will be music, tennis, volleyball and square dancing. That's only a few of the things the Washington section, National Council of Jewish Juniors, offers in entertainment at its roundup party, starting at 3 o'clock this afternoon and ending some time around midnight.

Supper comes between 5:30 and 7:45 p. m. Cowboy ballads by "Arkansas Slim" Embry is the high light of the program. Place of meeting is Palisades Park.

Did You Know . . . ?

THAT: Mrs. Maurice L. Bernstein, president of the Washington Ladies' Auxiliary, Jewish Consumptive Relief Society, has just returned from the annual convention in Denver? She reports that 11 Washingtonians are recuperating at the sanitarium in Denver.

Others returning from the convention include: Mrs. Martin Mendelshom, Mrs. Melvyn Meyers, Miss Adeline Rivkind.

THAT: WASHINGTON VENTURE CLUB has closed shop for the summer. Activities will be resumed in early fall. At the last club meeting held recently, Miss Isabel MacDonald and Miss Jean Meara, delegates to the national convention of Venture Clubs in Cleveland, gave vivid reports of their trip.

THAT: A woman's pulling power averages about two-thirds the pulling power of a man? But if all the women of the country pull together, the drive for man power will pull this country right across the Victory line.

Auxiliary Of Legion To Convene

CALL FOR the seventeenth annual convention of the American Legion Auxiliary, department of the District of Columbia, was issued by the department president, Mrs. Margaret E. Carroll, this week.

The convention will be held at the American Legion Club, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, August 7 and 8. It is for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year, amending the department constitution, electing delegates to the national convention, which will be held in Kansas City, Mo., in September.

Call For Delegates' Names

Each unit is requested to send the names of its delegates and alternates in to the headquarters at once and indicate the chairman of the delegation, and the member to serve on the convention committees and a convention page.

Miss Mabel F. Staub has been named secretary of the convention and Mrs. Eula Hollis the assistant.

The preconvention banquet will be Thursday, August 6, at the American Legion Home. Mrs. Dorothy Redfield is chairman and Mrs. Jerry Love vice chairman, with Mrs. Gladys White, Mrs. Evelyn Copeland, Mrs. Pearl Heagerity and Mrs. Matie Glaves on the committee.

Mrs. Geotting Page Chairman

Mrs. Lee Geotting is chairman of pages, with Mrs. Ann Dickerson, vice chairman; Miss M. Edna McIntosh, general chairman of the convention; Miss Helen Bintz, chairman of music; Mrs. Anna Gramling, chairman of badges, with Mrs. Blanche Brown, vice chairman; Mrs. Lucille Cuney, chairman of placards, her committee including Mrs. Martha E. Campbell, Mrs. Dorothy Hess, Mrs. Nettie Peters and Mrs. Ethel Clark.

Mrs. Ann Crump is in charge of the programs with Mrs. Kathleen Abreo, Miss Grace Steok and Mrs. Marie Gardiner assisting. Miss McIntosh is also distinguished guest chairman, with Mrs. Leon Arnold vice chairman, and all past department presidents, including Mrs. Roberta Fawcett, Mrs. Mary Corwin, Mrs. Edythe O'Connor, Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, Miss Minnie May Hardy, Mrs. Mary B. McMillin and Mrs. Helen M. McCabe on her committee.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

"We spent many years in China," writes Mrs. G. M. G. "and so our home is furnished with Chinese ornaments, rugs and fabrics. These we use with a collection of American furniture, but we need some help in pulling things together. The living room has a rug in brown and wood rose with scatter rugs in bamboo design in beige and brown. The wall paper is dusty rose, and our pictures are Chinese water colors and scrolls. A love seat upholstered in beige and rose faces the fireplace—I enclose a picture of it—it has a spool or turned frame and I'd like to know what style it is and whether to refinish the old frame which is of spruce and almost black in finish. Would you paint in the color of the hardwood floor? I have a lyre-back Sheraton style chair in light olive green finish—the rest of the furniture is mahogany."

The love seat in your photograph appears to be a descendant of the Jacobean turned styles—specifically of Cromwellian era. This type of English furniture was widely copied in America in the early days of our country and has come down continuously since as a favored style. About the finish of this piece—the nicest thing would be to take all the paint off and then, stain, shellac and wax the natural wood. However, I believe this would be a very difficult job to achieve on spruce and so I am inclined to say it should have a dull finish in enamel. I don't believe the floor color would be too good. I would like a light beige, the same shade as the upholstery background. To be in period, the wood of course should be dark and if the piece has not had many coats of shiny dark varnish, it might be better to leave it just as it is.

Serious Fuel Oil Shortage Faced by East

Harold Ickes' Office of Petroleum Coordinator for War is preparing tentative plans to prevent the development of a serious East Coast shortage of fuel oil for heating purposes this winter, it was learned yesterday.

That the situation may become critical is admitted by Ickes' aides, who point out that it is more profitable to ship gasoline in by railroad tank cars—principal method of transportation now available—than it is to ship fuel oil.

Under plans which are now only in a formative state, gasoline shippers would be required to ship a certain amount of fuel oil into the Eastern area with each tank car of gasoline. At the same time, all shippers would be required to use a transportation pool which has operated for the past six months to bear the increased cost of petroleum transportation by rail tank car. An order from the War Production Board would be needed to put the plans into effect.

Deficit Being Reduced

Until recently, this pool underwrote a total loss of 38 million dollars. Recently, however, Price Administrator Leon Henderson increased the price of gasoline to the Eastern area 2½ cents a gallon and the price of fuel oil 2 cents to meet the additional cost of transportation. Members of the pool have been contributing the increase to a central fund which is expected to wipe out the deficit within five months.

Meanwhile, the price increase has tempted shippers from outside of the pool to send gasoline into the rationed Eastern area without contributing the extra money to the pool. This situation threatens to break up the pool, creating possibly destructive competition among shippers, which might make it even more difficult for some Eastern areas to get fuel.

Unpublished figures on the present state of our fuel oil reserves in Eatsern terminal centers show that available supplies are about 50 per cent of the level last year, it was learned. Last year, at this time, a total of 11 million barrels of oil was stored in Eastern terminals.

An entirely different picture exists in Oregon and Washington, where restrictions on the delivery of fuel oil as well as gasoline have been in effect. Because of increased shipments of fuel oil into those two States, the War Production Board yesterday removed restrictions on fuel oil deliveries on the West Coast "to allow consumers to fill their own storage tanks while an ample supply of fuel oil is available."

Gas Deliveries Curtailed

Deliveries of gasoline to filling stations in those States remained under the April 16 curtailment order, which cut them by one-third. A 50 per cent cut in deliveries of fuel oil for use in heating and cooling equipment had been in effect since May 15.

Meanwhile, Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia wrote letters to members of the Georgia congressional delegation demanding an investigation of the price increase on the ground that "certain oil interests" were responsible for the higher prices.

Talmadge wrote the Congressmen he considered the price increase "an effort to raise a slush fund for lobbying purposes by certain oil interests before legislative bodies, and also to elect candidates for their own interests."

In a Senate speech, Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia stated that confining the increase to the rationed Eastern States amounted to placing an unfair tax against motorists in one section of the country.

Agriculture Stop-Gap Fund Extension Seen

Possibility of another temporary extension of Agriculture Department funds, before any decisive break in the congressional deadlock on Government grain policies, developed last night.

House and Senate conferees called a meeting today, in the first attempt at settlement since the President's demand for action, but members differed on the prospects for a compromise.

Although departmental funds have been extended until July 31, Congress plans to recess after House passage of the tax bill next week. Unless the farm deadlock is broken in the next seven days, it may be forced over until after the recess and another temporary extension of funds may be needed.

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee was optimistic on the prospects of a compromise, but there was no intimation from the Senate conferees that they would yield an inch from the President's "minimum" dmands. These include the right to market 125 million bushels of surplus wheat at 85 per cent of the corn parity price and to provide feed to swell meat and dairy supplies. The President in his statement Thursday opposed any "compromise."

Ranking House conferees were equally adamant against submitting the issue once more to the House for a vote in advance of a full conference settlement. Advocates of the President's position had expressed the view that the House would yield to below-panity grain marketing if the question were again presented.

"The House has already voted on the question four times," said Cannon. "There is no point in holding another conference if that kind of proposition is put up to us."

Adm. James Heads Bermuda Defenses

Hamilton, Bermuda, July 10 (U.P.).—The fact that United States Rear Admiral Jules James is in charge of defenses in Bermuda was made public for the first time in an address delivered before Parliament by the Governor of Bermuda, Viscount Knollys.

The Governor told Parliament how the island has been transformed from a holiday resort to a formidable fortress. He praised the legislature for passing "legislation necessary to provide . . . considerable areas of land needed to facilitate vital work by the United States forces who are making this island an important outpost in the defense of the Atlantic and of the American continent."

Hurt in Crackup

Folks Await R.A.F. Son's Broadcast

Even though the Washington parents of Pilot Officer Walter P. Gray, jr., received a cable last Sunday saying their R. A. F. son was "feeling swell," they were still uneasy. Less than three weeks ago they had been notified he was in serious condition after a crackup.

GRAY

Yesterday, when Walter P. Gray, sr., was informed by The Post that the 22-year-old graduate of Central High School was fit enough to take part in a transatlantic broadcast that will be heard here tomorrow night, the father was overjoyed.

Announced yesterday in New York by Mutual Broadcasting System and relayed to Gray via Station WOL and The Post, the word is that the Washington R. A. F. pilot will greet his parents on the "Stars and Stripes in Britain" program. It will be carried locally by WOL from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray live at 1417 Parkwood Place Northwest. Walter is their only child.

Added Surtax On Incomes Is Approved

income taxes, $2,955,800,000; miscellaneous internal revenue taxes, $800,200,000; total gross revenue, $6,047,000,000.

From this total, $876,700,000 of excess profits taxes would be refunded to corporations after the war as a rehabilitation credit, leaving the net revenue effect of the bill at $5,170,300,000.

The special exemption grant to all military and naval personnel gave soldiers and sailors an additional personal exemption of $250 for single men and $300 for married. In effect, this relieved buck privates and apprentice seamen of any taxes at all. At $50 a month, their annual income would reach only $600, whereas the exemption for single service men is $750.

Although the night session was ordered in an effort to complete all committee action on the bill, the job remained unfinished when the committee adjourned. Another meeting was called for this morning to write "finis."

The committee meanwhile overrode warnings by Price Administrator Leon Henderson against a tax break-through in his price ceilings to retain a 5 per cent excess on freight and express, with the single exception of coal.

The committee reaffirmed its percentage levy on freight but subjected coal to a flat tax of only 5 cents a ton, regardless of distances shipped.

Action came in the face of a letter from Henderson serving notice that the freight tax would add to his price control difficulties, discriminate against manufacturers in favor of distributors and in some cases "breach" his price ceilings.

One move to pick up additional revenue, by reviving in modified form the Treasury's plan for mandatory individual joint income tax returns, met with failure.

A compromise was offered permitting separate returns by married couples, but under penalties increasing their combined tax payment. This was rejected, 14 to 11. Likewise defeated, 16 to 6, was another attempt to remove tax advantages of married residents of eight community property States, who can split income in separate returns even if one spouse earns all of it.

An effort to add a 5 per cent retail sales tax to the bill, to raise an additional 2½ billion dollars, meanwhile was abandoned by Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia.

Mr. Robertson disclosed that his poll of House members on the retail sales levy was running heavily against the tax and there was evidenty more than a House majority against the tax at the present time. President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau have consistently opposed any general consumers levy.

"I'm licked," Mr. Robertson told reporters.

The unsuccessful effort to compromise the mandatory joint return issue was made by Representative Boehne (Democrat) of Indiana. As later explained by committeemen it would have permitted separate returns by working husbands and wives only if their pooled income was split and returns made by each spouse on half their total earnings.

Two Boys Killed By Hit-Run Auto

have been made by an automobile was reported near the scene of the accident by Dr. Briscoe, but no broken glass was evident, he said. Fowler was dragging the Keefe boy, then still alive, off the highway, when the fishing party arrived and called the Marlboro rescue squad.

Young Fowler, who was born in Washington and attended Dent School, is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Fowler. He also has a brother, Clarence.

The Davis boy, Dr. Briscoe said, died of internal bleeding, having received a crushed hip and abdomen and a compound fracture of a leg. He was the son of Mrs. Florence E. Davis. His father was drowned last June while swimming in the Potomac River at the Yacht Club. Davis attended Cranch School. About two months ago he started to work with a telegraph company as a messenger boy, but had worked only a few days when an automobile struck him. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was kept two weeks for a face injury.

He had been unable to get work since, but told his family that he was sure he could get a job after August 26, when he would have been 16 years old. He leaves a brother, John Edward, 17, and a sister, Florence, 14, also of Washington.

Keefe suffered a crushed chest, Dr. Briscoe reported. Both his parents are dead and he lived with a sister, Mrs. Dorothy Sloan, on Bates Street. Surviving are another sister, Mrs. Gloria Watts, and two brothers, Joseph and Earl, all of Washington.

Funeral services for the Keefe and Davis boys will be held separately Monday morning. Chamber's Funeral Home, 517 Eleventh Street Southeast, is making arrangements for both. A Catholic service for the Keefe boy will be held at 9 a. m. with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery. The Davis funeral, with an Episcopal service, is set for 11 a. m., from the Chambers Home. He also will be buried at Cedar Hill.

WLB Divided Three Ways On Steel Raise

no increase of any kind should be allowed because of the President's seven-point program to control inflation.

The public members who were thus precipitated into the balance of power have shrewdly refused to commit themselves on the wage question. However, it was learned that they are prepared to grant some wage increase—although one that will probably fail to suit either the labor or industry members. This situation leaves considerable room for "horse trading" among the board members before a final decision is reached. Definite action is now expected any time within the next four days, probably Monday or Tuesday.

Certified Last February

The "Little Steel" case was certified to WLB last February after the four steel companies involved—Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown, and Inland—and the United Steel Workers of America, C. I. O., failed to reached agreement on the union's demand for the wage increase, union security in the form of union shop and checkoff, and a daily minimum wage guarantee.

Any wage boost ordered here is expected to go also to 450,000 workers in "Big Steel"—United States Steel Corporation. The adamant position of both the employer and labor groups is also an indication that they regard the case as an important precedent which will guide the course of other wage adjusments for the duration of the war. It is particularly important with respect to the demands of 500,000 workers for General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler for similar wage increases.

Also in the background is the threat to labor peace in the steel industry represented by the present feud between Philip Murray, president of both the C. I. O. and the Steel Workers, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, founder and former leader of the C. I. O.

May Bolt to Lewis

Individual members of the board are known to recognize the possibility that a decision unfavorable to the steel workers might send thousands of them into Lewis' camp, creating intraunion trouble which could only hamper steel production.

The present Lewis-Murray row is an outgrowth of Murray's refusal to back Lewis in his opposition to President Roosevelt at the 1940 election and in his prewar isolation. In the event the steel workers fail to secure a substantial wage boost, Lewis adherents are expected to contend that Murray was "sold out" by the Administration and thus got his fingers burned by playing along with Roosevelt in the first place, instead of following Lewis' advice.

The Lewis-Murray situation is already very explosive in many Pennsylvania steel towns. Mine workers and steel workers frequently live side by side, constantly reminding each other of the rift between their leaders. During the course of prolonged hearings on the steel case, many of the mills were harassed by wildcat strikes, partly a result of restlessness due to this situation.

Another factor which the board must consider is that it will have to follow up its decision in steel with a decision on the dispute between General Motors and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers. A three-man panel is now preparing its final report on the G. M. case.

The G. M. case bears an unusual relationship to the steel case because the old National Defense Mediation Board, peacetime predecessor to WLB, specifically recognized the existence of a relatively fixed relationship between steel wages and G. M. wages. In May last year, an NIMB panel headed by William H. Davis, now chairman of WLB, recommended a 10 cents an hour increase for GM workers, partly on the gronnd that steel workers received a 10 cents an hour boost the month before.

The union security issue in the steel case is expected to be settled by a board order of a maintenance of membership plan probably combined with a dues check-off. Employer members are understood to be opposing any grant of union maintenance in this case, although they are expected to be overruled by a combined vote of public and labor members.

WLB was recessed yesterday, ostensibly because the members wanted a chance to put their thoughts on the steel case down on paper.

Divided into Four Sections

Actually, the public members have divided the case into four sections and each prepared to write a tentative draft of a final decision on a different section. These drafts are slated to be presented to the full board today, preparatory to final action.

Should both sides remain adamant after the public members reveal their positions, a period of "horse-trading" is expected to follow in an effort to reach a unanimous or near unanimous decision. Whether public members would have sufficient authority to promulgate a final decision by themselves in the event neither employers or labor receded was undetermined last night.

The decision was divided up as follows by the public members:

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman—wages.

Dr. Frank P. Graham—union security.

Chairman Davis—the overall picture.

Some speculation centered on the possibility that the public members would split among themselves, but this was regarded as unlikely in view of the extreme positions taken by the employers and labor members.

Eklund Flees; 'Sniper' Jury Still Deadlocked

2109 F Street Northwest.

Advised of her son's escape, she made the following plea through his attorney, Harry T. Whelan:

"Eugene: Please surrender yourself to the police or to Mr. Whelan, your attorney. The jury last night plainly indicated utter disagreement as to their verdict but I'm confident you will be acquited. I know that the strain of this long trial and your long days in jail have made you feel desperate for freedom. I feel that your full freedom will not be far away, so please return."

Coast Guard Helps

Police asked the assistance of the United States Coast Guard in patrolling the river and advised all police patrol boats to be on the alert. It was pointed out that Eklund owned a boat and was an excellent operator. Authorities urged police to be on the lookout for motorcyclists, as Eklund, they said, knew how to ride one.

Capt. Robert Barrett, assistant chief of detectives, said that more than 100 policemen were taking part in the manhunt and that others would be called.

Eklund, who was reported to have made two previous attempts to escape at the District Jail, was described on the police broadcast last night as follows:

Five feet nine inches tall, 150 pounds, pug nose, black hair, no hat, black shoes, handcuffed and wearing a gray suit.

It was recalled last night that two men recently escaped from police headquarters. One mysteriously disappeared from the prisoners' bullpen while the other fled from an officer, who shot him in the legs during a chase down the street.

At 9:10 p. m. the jury weighing Eklund's fate was advised by Justice James W. Morris to reconsider the case after they reported themselves unable to reach a verdict. The jurors were returned to their hotel for a "good night's rest" before resuming deliberations at 10:15 a. m. today.

The case went to the jury at 4:40 p. m. yesterday. When notified of the jury's deadlock, Justice Morris proceeded to the courtroom from his home, reaching there about 10 p. m. In asking that they reconsider the case, the court said:

"I want it clearly understood that this is not intended to indicate that you should surrender any conviction that you have or to join in a verdict in which you are not in concientious agreement.

"Although the verdict must be the verdict of each, and not mere acquiescence to the opinions of others on the jury, you must submit your opinions candidly to each other.

"There should be a comparison of views and some arguments among the jurors. It cannot be that you should go to the jury room and close your ears to the opinions of the other members of the jury who are equally intelligent."

Pointing out that the trial had taken a considerable length of time, Justice Morris told the jurors if they felt "it would be tedious to deliberate longer tonight, then you will be returned to your hotel to resume your deliberations tomorrow."

This was done after William L. Wheeler, a painter, of 125 Sixth Street Southeast, and a member of the jury, remarked that he was tired and had not been well recently. Previously, at the request of another juror, the court had painstakingly clarified the three verdicts which he told them they could return. The possible verdicts:

1. To return a verdict of guilty of first degree murder as charged, which would make the death penalty mandatory.

2. To find the defendant guilty of second degree murder.

3. To acquit him.

Indicted specifically for the slaying of Hyland G. McClaine, 17, one of four Negroes killed during 1940 in a series of shootings, Eklund heard the final day of his trial open with a two-hour summary by Defense Attorney Harry T. Whelan. Whelan argued that Mildred Washington Sims, companion of McClaine when he was shot, had failed to identify Eklund as the gunman and that the prosecution's star witness, Richard Marvin Harlow, Eklund's former jailmate, had testified merely to obtain leniency for himself in the disposition of charges against him.

In a brief rebuttal, Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly denied he had tried to inject an element of sympathy into the case by bringing out that the victim wore a white rosary around his neck. That was part of the identification, he said.

Perjury Proved

It was the second time Eklund had been on trial for the slaying. On June 6, 1940, he heard a jury bring in a verdict which led, 17 days later, to his being sentenced to death.

He won several stays of execution and finally, on March 25 of this year, was granted a new trial when it was discovered that Herbert Ray, one of the Government's witnesses, had perjured himself.

His second trial opened June 24 and for six days thereafter the proceedings were devoted entirely to the selection of a jury. More than 200 prospective jurors, most of whom had formed prior opinions about the case or had business commitments which would not allow them to be locked up nights, were examined before a jury of seven men and five women finally was chosen.

McClaine was shot early on the morning of October 15, 1940, as he walked along Rock Creek Parkway near the K Street viaduct with Mrs. Simms, who at that time was unmarried.

He was shot, as were the other three Negroes that year, through the back of the head and at close range. In addition, a bullet also was fired through his back.

All of the shootings at that time were attributed to a mysterious "sniper" and it is, no doubt, as the "sniper slayings" that they will be remembered by Washingtonians in the years to come.

Address Unknown . . .

A man with an auto registration card went to a District school last night for his gas book. On his application blank he put the name appearing on the registration card and then signed his own at the bottom, as agent. He told the registrar the address of the car's owner was incorrect. "Why doesn't he change it?" the registrar asked. "He can't," came the reply, "he's dead." He got no book.

Plan for D. C. Delegate Gets New Support

Various Groups Back Proposal; Indorsements Sent To Rep. Paddock

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

Expressions of opinion from the Washington populace on the pending bill to give the District an elected delegate in Congress began to pile up on Capitol Hill yesterday, and the more than a score of letters received to date reflected almost unanimous approval of the proposal.

Indorsements of the plan have been sent to Representative Paddock (Republican) of Illinois, who wrote the bill, from civic groups, labor unions, religious organizations and individual citizens.

Support was offered both by the Washington Industrial Union Council and the Washington Central Labor Union, affiliated with the C. I. O. and A. F. of L., respectively.

"While your bill would allow only a voteless delegate to Congress for the District of Columbia," the Industrial Council wrote, "we feel that this is a step in the right direction toward complete suffrage for the District, and as such we are in support of your bill.

"In addition, granting suffrage to the District now would bring home more forcibly to the residents the democratic aims for which our country is fighting."

Mileham in Support

The Federation of Citizens' Associations, National Federation of Post Office Clerks, American Bible Society, and representatives of the Bloomingdale Civic Association, Chevy Chase Citizens' Association and Bradbury Heights Citizens Association were among those who urged approval of the bill.

William J. Mileham, head of the Federation of Business Men's Associations and chief air raid warden for the city, wrote:

"I firmly believe that the idea of having a District delegate would be a step in the right direction. You may be assured of my complete support for this plan of yours with the idea that we will secure additional representation in the near future."

The Rev. Stephen G. Spottswood of the John Wesley A. M. E. Church and the Rev. Ulysses Creecy of the Lily Memorial Baptist Church were among the clergymen who indorsed the plan.

Edward F. Colladay, attorney and Republican National Committeeman from the District, and C. J. Mack, manager of the Mayflower Hotel, were included in the list of citizens who expressed their approval.

Minor Changes Suggested

Several minor changes—including a suggestion that voters be required to reside in the city for two years instead of the one specified by the bill—were proposed in the letters, but only one expressed flat opposition to the idea.

Charles H. Tompkins, president of a construction engineering firm, declared himself "unalterably opposed." He asserted that the present system of municipal government "is so superior to anything else we could have that I think it would be a tragedy to change it."

Despite the approval which the proposal has earned both in civic and Congressional circles, it appeared likely that the bill would not see action until next fall. It is reported that the Judiciary Committee docket and the early likelihood of a summer recess will preclude hearings on the bill until then.

The Allure for Tonight's Victory Revue

Service men and their "dates" will be guests at the show, sponsored by the District Recreational Department

Recreation Group Agrees To Dorm Site

Acquiesces to Use Of West Potomac Links After Pledge Of Polo Ground Aid

Upon the assurance by Public Buildings Administrator W. E. Reynolds that funds were being asked to reconvert the old East Potomac Park polo grounds into recreational space, the District Recreation Committee agreed last night to the use of the West Potomac Park golf course as a dormitory site.

Reynolds said that the War Department had agreed to relinquish its half of the polo field, now being used as a parking lot, and that he hoped to get the Navy Department to give up its share also. However, the fact that the Navy had ignored two urgent requests from Reynolds this week was seen by some observers as an indication that the Navy has small intention of returning its parking space to the District.

The polo grounds were taken over by the Army and Navy five months ago, paved and made into parking facilities for the two departments. However the space has not been widely used, only being 10 to 12 per cent filled at any time.

The Federal Works Agency is now negotiating for contracts for the erection of the 13,000-room dormitories, and announced last night that the 12-million-dollar contracts would probably be let within a few days.

Truckers Form D. C. Clearing Unit

Action Is Taken To Assure Carriers Of at Least 75% Freight Capacity

The first hurdle to conserving rubber and gas in freight transportation was cleared for the District last night by the District Trucking Association when it agreed upon the formation of a D. C. Traffic Clearing House to start functioning July 15.

The agreement climaxed discussions among the group since the Office of Defense Transportation declared April 20 that this city must set up a "clearing house" for trucking to see that all trucks clearing Washington do so with at least 75 per cent freight capacity.

This order affects private carriers, contract carriers, common carriers and common carriers of household goods. Possibility of later organization for a separate system for freighters carrying only household goods was mentioned.

By means of this clearing house, a truck which has discharged freight in Washington will be aided in obtaining a load of at least 75 per cent capacity before leaving. Truck owners will be charged a slight amount to help sustain office work. This applies only to trucks operating outside of a radius of 25 miles of the city.

In the event that trucks do not comply with this clearance system and the ODT learns of such noncompliance, the offenders will be penalized by being denied further gas and tire quotas, it was said.

It also was said that if the clearance house idea proves unnecessary after operating about 60 or 90 days it will be abolished or the ODT will take over all such offices, now being established all over the country. Extension of the effective date of the system until August 1 may be asked.

Named to the board of directors of the clearing house were William B. Doster, chairman; S. C. Massey, Lester B. Powell, John Slocombe, W. C. Woodward, Harold Tolbert and Robert Tinnin, none of whom will receive pay for their services. A paid manager of the board will be designated later, it was said.

Debtors Flock To Cashiers To Settle Up

Tributes were paid Washington's debtors yesterday by credit men while thousands swarmed against the cashiers' windows to get right with "Regulation W," the credit control measure requiring accounts to be paid every two months or be budgeted with the stores.

Representative of most of them, Roscoe W. Reichard, credit manager for the Hecht Co., said that "all with accounts seemed taking the regulation to heart and it is very gratifying how they have responded."

Most account patrons yesterday wanted to keep their short-term accounts paid up within the time limit fixed by the regulation. But those desiring to avail themselves of the six monthly installment budget plan may avail themselves of that privilege, it was said on all sides. The stores are not compelled to budget an account.

The crowds at the cashiers' windows yesterday, in the main, paid bills contracted in May or prior to that month, when the control law, drafted by the Federal Reserve Board following an executive order, went into effect. It provided that most goods bought on credit have to be paid for by the tenth day of the second succeeding month. Yesterday was the first deadline under the system.

Thus, as the system operates, purchases made on credit in June must be paid for on or before August 10; purchases made in July must be paid for on or before September 10. Those unable to conform can budget. If two months or more in arrears, the debtor can purchase additional goods on credit by agreeing, in writing, to pay the arrears in six monthly installments.

One large store's credit officer reported that in proportion to the number of accounts, very few asked the six-month budget privilege yesterday. "A steady stream" of account patrons moved through the store all day, it was stated.

Some credit men believed that Monday and Tuesday would witness even larger crowds, come to pay their bills, than did yesterday, the first deadline. It was thought that thousands would, by that time, realize themselves to be in arrears and rush to adjust their accounts.

Excepted under the system are bills for groceries, cosmetics, dairy products, fuel oil, coal, stationery, medical and dental services and educational and religious debts. The control was established as an anti-inflation measure.

Watergate Concert Put Off Until Tonight

The National Symphony Orchestra concert and dancing by Argentinita, Spanish dancer scheduled at the Watergate last night, was postponed because of the weather. The program will be held tonight.

Argentinita, who will appear with the orchestra, will be accompanied by Pilar Lopez and Federico Rey. Their program consists of solos, duos and trios. They will perform Ravel's "Bolero," among other Spanish dances.

A 'Tempo'

U. S. to Erect Building at Friendship

An $860,000 temporary Government office building will be completed within 60 days on the south side of Newark Street between Idaho Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, the south area of the Friendship property, it was announced by the Federal Works Agency yesterday.

The contract was awarded to Skinker & Garrett, contractors, of Washington. The contractor's fee was announced as $39,000. What agency will spill over into this structure, which will contain a gross floor area of 178,552 square feet, was not announced. Employes working there will be expected to live in houses the Defense Homes Corporation will erect on the estate.

The structure will be designated as Temporary Building T-8.

The contract requires completion with the installation of utilities within 60 calendar days, while the boiler room, fuel room and stack are scheduled for completion in 75 calendar days. The building will be two stories high and of wood frame construction. The headhouse will be 527½ feet long and 47½ feet wide. There will be 7 wings, each 176 feet long and 47½ feet wide, 3 of which will have, in addition to the 2 stories, a ground floor 80 feet long and 47½ feet wide.

Specifications call for concrete footings and concrete or masonry foundation walls and concrete stairs with pipe rails. There will be wood floors and gypsum wallboard on interior walls and ceilings. The exterior will be constructed with gypsum sheathing with asbestos board facing and a composition roof. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has approved the building.

District Rubber Salvage Drive Called Success

District salvage officials predicted that final returns on the District scrap rubber drive will show collections to have passed the 2-million-pound mark as the Nation-wide drive ended late yesterday.

Meanwhile, William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the national drive, announced that he was satisfied with the results of the campaign and that he would make a final report to President Roosevelt within a week.

The drive campaign was launched June 15 as a "quickie" drive to find out how much scrap rubber was available throughout the Nation. Originally scheduled to close at the end of June, the drive was extended an additional 10 days by order of President Roosevelt.

The Bureau of Industrial Conservation of the War Production Board will launch a general drive to collect all kinds of scrap, including rubber, rags, paper, fats and oils, and metals on Monday.

Gala Program Arranged for Service Men

Entertainment for service men in Washington this weekend will be heightened by a huge party at the Willard Hotel tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. in celebration of the first anniversary of the National Catholic Community Service Club.

The honor guest at the affair sponsored by the club hostesses, will be World War I flying ace Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, who will speak at 7 p. m.

Besides two orchestras, the party will feature acts from the Capitol and Earle theaters and music from 3:30 to 6:30 p. m. by the United States Navy Band.

Commemoration of the founding of the club will be celebrated tonight at 9 o'clock with a dance at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 918 Tenth Street Northwest. There will be no admission fee for either of the parties.

40,000 Use Lounge

Forty thousand service men last month benefited from the service men's lounge in the Union Station, and between 5000 and 10,000 more were accommodated in the reception room, it was reported by Frances McFeeley, director, to the Joint Committee for Service to Troops in Transit. About 250 volunteer hostesses had assisted the staff during the month of June.

Other recreation over the weekend includes dinners, more dancing, hikes, community singing, sightseeing tours, music and a bowling party.

High on today's agenda is a tour of the city for Marines sponsored by the District Federation of Churches. The tour will start at the concourse of Union Station at 2:45 p. m., and will extend to the Arlington Cemetery, the National Airport and the Washington Cathedral, among other points. It will terminate with supper at 6:15 p. m. at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest.

Nine Men Promoted in Police Dept.

Nine promotions in the Police Department announced by the Commissioners yesterday were to fill vacancies caused by the resignation of officers to join the armed services.

Lieut. Albert I. Bullock was elevated to captain, Detective Elmer F. Lewis to lieutenant and Pvt. Robert J. Tompkins to sergeant.

The temporary appointment of Capt. Walter H. Thomas, Lieut. Herbert G. Wanamaker, Detective Sergt. Bernard D. Cooke and Precinct Detective William McEwen were made permanent.

Pvts. John R. Luskey, George E. Cooper and James E. Armstrong were temporarily assigned to prevention and detection of crime. Lusky is to be stationed in the Detective Bureau at an additional compensation of $600 and Cooper and Armstrong on precinct duty at an additional $240 per annum.

Sylvan Theater Schedules First 'Victory Revue'

A "Victory Revue," first of a series of summer festivals to be held this season at the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument grounds, under sponsorship of the D. C. Recreation Department, will be held at 8:30 p. m. today with service men expected to form a large part of the audience.

The program, with the help of the National Capital Parks and Recreation Services, Inc., was arranged especially for service men and defense workers. Ten vaudeville acts will be featured, including Joe and Erline King, ventriloquists, and Harry Baker, magician. Dances will be staged by Phil Hayden.

The Saturday evening programs will continue until early September. Community sings, with Marine Band accompaniments, will be held on Thursday evenings. Chairs may be rented for a fee.

Probation Given In Assault Case

Justice James W. Morris yesterday placed on probation Joseph J. Sekanic, a soldier of Bedford, Pa., on a charge of assaulting a 34-year-old waitress several weeks ago.

Leniency was shown in the case, Justice Morris said, because of a number of pleas sent to the court by friends of the soldier, including the chaplain of his regiment.

Sekanic is accused of molesting the waitress after following her to the doorway of her home. The soldier, who was indicted two weeks ago, is said to have been drinking at the restaurant where the alleged victim is employed.

Volunteers for Defense Centers Asked to Report at 4 P.M. Today

Volunteers to man the seven civilian defense subcontrol centers last night were asked to meet today at 4 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, Seventeenth and H Streets Northwest, by Herbert A. Friede, newly appointed communications controller.

For each control center, a staff of 59 persons is needed to be on call in three 8-hour shifts. These include 30 telephonists, three "log clerks," three plotting officers, three panel clerks and 10 messengers. Volunteers today will be given explanations of the control setup by Friede and Porter M. Lumkins, assistant controller.

Persons who cannot attend today's session, but who would like to volunteer for this service, can register at the Central Volunteer Bureau, 2324 F Street Northwest, or in the downtown registration booth in Post Square, Friede said.

Deputy controllers for the subcontrol centers were appointed from District Building ranks yesterday. The deputies and their stations are:

1. J. W. Lauderdale, assistant corporation counsel.
2. Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners.
3. L. R. Watson, jr., assistant highway engineer.
4. Donald A. Hopkins, administrative assistant to the building inspector.
5. W. N. Handiboe, assistant chief clerk of the Engineer Department.
6. J. S. Zebley, chief of the inspection services.
7. J. Louis Gelbman, chief of the District Duplication Center.

J. Vincent Marin, senior fire alarm operator was appointed communications officer of the new decentralized control system.

New Courts Move Toward Full Operation

Pending the formulation of rules of procedure for the new Municipal Court of Appeals, the three-man tribunal, sworn in Thursday, announced yesterday the adoption of special regulations governing appeals filed with the court.

Meanwhile, the 10-man Municipal Court for the District of Columbia began operating, although one of the jurists, Aubrey B. Fennell, has not been sworn in because of an illness.

Plans for the reconstituted Municipal Court call for frequent interchanging of judges, so that all will sit in both criminal and civil cases. Under provisions of the act creating the Municipal Court, Chief Judge George P. Barse assumes administrative as well as judicial powers. Monthly reports from each judge to the chief judge will furnish important statistics on the operation of the court.

The emergency rules adopted yesterday by the appellate court were announced by Chief Judge William E. Richardson and Associate Judges Nathan Cayton and Andrew M. Hood and included the form required in filing a notice of appeal.

Also announced was the appointment of C. Newell Atkinson, deputy clerk of the United States Court of Appeals, as acting clerk for the District appellate division.

"The work of preparing permanent rules," the announcement stated, "is now in progress. A preliminary meeting was held several days ago between the judges and a special committee of the Bar Association of the District headed by Mr. Louis M. Denit, which was attended by G. Bowdoin Craighill, chairman of the Bar Association permanent committee on relations with the courts."

Divorce Granted

Judge Stedman Prescott, Montgomery Circuit Court, has signed a decree granting to Mrs. Esther V. Hayward of Chevy Chase, Md., an absolute divorce from Phillips A. Hayward and requiring the defendant to pay her $150 monthly alimony.

County Board Fights Rosslyn Bus Change

Opposition to a proposal to discontinue service of the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. from Rosslyn, Va., to Eleventh and E Streets Northwest was officially registered yesterday by the Arlington County Board and the executive committee of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce.

The plan, which would require some 35,000 commuters to transfer to Capital Transit streetcars at the Rosslyn end of Key Bridge, was drawn up by District Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer as ODT transportation chief for Washington. The object is to conserve gasoline and tires by eliminating duplication of transportation facilities.

Referred to County PUC

The county board, on motion of Leo Loyd, resolved that it was opposed unless the move was absolutely necessary to national defense. The matter was referred to the Arlington Public Utilities Commission for study.

The Chamber of Commerce resolution followed a declaration by D. L. Unsilton, president, that Arlington County authorities should have been consulted on the proposal.

"With no public hearing recommended," he said, "I consider it is high time the citizens of Arlington demanded some consideration before any definite action is taken."

Unsilton said every member of the chamber, as well as Arlington's more than 80,000 residents, were willing to do everything possible to aid the war effort.

Cites Plan's Drawbacks

Drawbacks to the Whitehurst proposal were evident, however he said. He pointed to the amount of time war workers would lose through changing from bus to street car at Rosslyn, the traffic congestion which a terminal there would cause, the increased cost of transportation faced by commuters, who would have to pay fares to both the Capital Transit Co. and the bus line, and the possibility that the Capital Transit Co. would not be able to handle the increased load.

Whitehurst's proposal has been approved in principal by a special transportation coordinating committee named by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Caital Park and Planning Commission.

The Office of Defense Transportation said yesterday that the question of fares and the ability of the Capital Transit Co. to handle the increased passenger load were still under consideration.

Under present fare schedules transportation costs of commuters using the line would be increased by 100 per cent.

Minnesota Society Will Elect Officers

The Minnesota State Society will hold its annual election today at 9:30 p. m. in Stansbury Temple, Georgia Avenue and Concord Street Northwest. Dancing will follow the meeting.

All Minnesotans, particularly members of the armed forces, are invited to attend, whether members of the society or not.

PUC to Hear Public on Cab Rates July 24

Public opinion of the 30-50-70-90 cent cab rates and new map requested by the taxi industry will be heard by the Public Utilities Commission in a hearing set for July 24 at 10 a. m. in the Board Room of the District Building.

Although the drivers had asked Thursday that the PUC act upon their petition as a request for a revision of the rate order and take no time out for a hearing, the commission yesterday ruled that a hearing is necessary.

"If the matter presented was simply an increase in rates based on zones the PUC had determined, the commission could take judicial notice of the increased cost of operation and value of the drivers' time and act accordingly," PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin said. "We could apply the factor of change to the evidence already gathered But since the petition also asked a revised zone map, we would be applying new factors to a new system. Furthermore, the changes in the map affect certain sections of town more than others and the residents should be given a chance to speak."

Army Commission Given to Arlington Resident in Miami

Loren Leeper of 4907 North Washington Boulevard, Arlington, stationed with the United States Air Corps at Miami, Fla., has been promoted to the rank of second lieutenant, it was announced yesterday.

LT. LEEPER

Lieut. Leeper enlisted on June 27. He was formerly employed in the Treasury Department.

A resident of Arlington County for the past seven years, he is married and has one son, Loren, jr., 3.

Miss Sutherlin Installed in New Chevy Chase Post

Miss Carrie Sutherlin, president of Arlington Hall Junior College, until it was taken over by the War Department recently, assumed her duties as president of Chevy Chase Junior College last night at an installation dinner held by the board of trustees at Columbia Country Club.

Trustees who attended were Manning Stiers, chairman; Clyde D. Garrett, James E. Gillis, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, S. Walter Bogley and Theodore T. Scudder, of Fairfield, Conn.

Miss Sutherlin, who received her M. A. degree at Columbia University, is a native of Sutherlin, Va., and has been affiliated with Sullins College, Chatham Hall School and State Teachers College at Farmville, Va.

History, Nature, Bird, Camera Tours Scheduled

The National Capital Parks outdoor program for this weekend, announced yesterday, includes a history-nature tour, a bird walk, a camera stroll and a 5-mile hike.

Randle B. Truett of the NCP staff, will conduct a party through Forts Stevens and DeBussy tomorrow from 3 to 5 p. m. The group will organize at 3 o'clock at Georgia Avenue and Quackenbos Street Northwest.

Naturalist George A. Petrides will lead a bird walk through Montrose and Dumbarton Oaks Parks tomorrow morning. The group will assemble at 7:30 a. m. at the R Street entrance to Montrose Park.

A camera stroll will be led by Donald Edward McHenry, naturalist, through Dumbarton Oaks Park this afternoon. Meeting place is Lovers Lane and R Street Northwest at 3 p. m.

A 5-mile hike from 3 to 5 p. m. today will follow nature trails through Montrose Park, Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, the Zoo, Rock Creek Park and Piney Branch Parkway, starting from the R Street entrance to Montrose Park.

River, costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, with Brian Donlevy, Katharine Stevens, Thurston Hall, Lloyd Corrigan, Etta McDaniel, Frank M. Thomas, William B. Davidson, Mary Treen, Lucien Littlefield and Fred Toones. Produced and directed by William A. Wellman. At the Earle Theater.

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR WILLIAM A. WELLMAN seems to have missed the bus.

In fashioning "The Great Man's Lady," currently on view at the Earle Theater, he evidently had in mind the creation of a monumental saga of the indomitable pioneer empire-builders, but as the film unwinds itself upon the screen the woman in the case is not too much of a "lady" and the man is anything but "great."

A full measure of fault rests with those who prepared the script. Perhaps the story passed through too many hands before it found its way to the cameras. Originally written by Vina Delmar, it was dramatized for the cinema by Adela Rogers St. John and Seena Owen and scenarized by W. L. River. Somewhere along the way its vital qualities were lost and only its comparative inconsequentials were recorded in the visual action.

The aged recluse, who relates the chronicle of a century to a youthful biographer, is disclosed as an idolatrous sort of sacrificial virgin, who afforded her husband great conversational inspiration—the fruits of which are only implied—then disappeared from his life under circumstances that diminish rather than magnify his stature. They are reunited only when he returns to her home, in the prairie city they had dreamed together, to die. The pictured events of the intervening years betray Ethan Hoyt in both character and performance as a weakling, unconscionable ingrate and the potential murderer of his best friend, whom he jealously suspects of a vast treachery, involving the woman to whom he owes everything but his transgressions and his failures. The picture, more appropriately, might have been titled, "The Great Four-Flusher's Unpaid Debt."

The narrative opens with the unveiling of a statue to its founder in Hoyt City in 1941. The tottering centenarian who was "the great man's lady" is being hounded by the press to disclose the actual place she had occupied in the life of Ethan Hoyt. Only to a young girl, who has been struggling for years on a Hoyt biography, will she confide the truth. The events of her life then are unfolded by the flash-back method from her elopement with Hoyt from Philadelphia in 1848, through their marriage on the plains in a torrential rainstorm, to the California gold rush, sudden wealth through a silver strike and the fateful consequences of a platonic friendship with Steely Edwards, the gambler with the gentle and kindly heart. Unfortunately these episodes do not mesh sufficiently well to reflect any credit whatsoever upon Mr. Hoyt. The hero of the piece, by every right of sympathetic understanding and helpful deeds, is its ostensible "villain."

Cast Is Free of Blame

As the title suggests, the picture is dedicated to the role of Hannah Sempler, whose devotion to the "great" man prompted her even to tear up her marriage certificate for the sake of the unseen family he had reared in the long years of their separation when he thought her dead. Barbara Stanwyck brings as much believability to an implausible part as circumstances will permit. Her assumption of more than 100 years of eventful life is effectively maneuvered with the aid of a miracle of convincing makeup. Joel McCrea, in the other titular role, suffers the penalties of a part in which all of the virtues are objectively described by his wife and only the weaknesses made visible on the screen. Brian Donlevy makes Steely Edwards, the gambler who was honest enough to admit he was crooked and nobody could win in one of his games, by far the most admirable figure of them all. Thurston Hall's Mr. Sempler is a study in paternal incompetence that wholly justifies Hannah's defiance of his wishes. The role of the young biographer to whom the slow-moving tale is told is ingenuously played by Katharine Stevens.

ᔕᔓᔕ

Harry Anger has staged the Earle's new stage bill with a speed and color that make it seem better than it is, item by item. Dennis Day, fresh up from the Jack Benny radio hour with his fine tenor voice, was the unchallenged hit of yesterday's first performance. With an easy air about him and a nice selection of numbers, Mr. Day scored tremendously and deservedly. For the rest—with the exception of the Roxyettes' spectacular interpolations—it was all comedy, of one sort or another. The Gaudsmith Brothers, with their familiar troupe of exceptionally trained French poodles, offer their time-honored tumbling act, of which the dogs are the real stars, and Ames and Arno clown about in their equally venerable, rough-and-tumble gymnastics.

ᔕᔓᔕ

A new release of "Information Please," with Cornelia Otis Skinner a delightful guest star; "Bugs Bunny Gets the Boid," a ridiculous Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy in color; the newsreel and Jo Lombardi's overture of George M. Cohan hits complete the bill.

Metropolitan

Stalwart Bob Hope almost loses the decision to a penguin in his current escapade, entitled "My Favorite Blonde," now playing at the Metropolitan.

Co-starred with Madeleine Carroll, who is our favorite blonde, too, Bob is getting mixed up with a gang of spies, who are the foils for his latest set of gags. As a vaudevillian who gets second billing to his partner, the penguin, Percy, Bob is minding his own business when the appearance of the lovely Miss Carroll in his dressing room sets him off on a cross-country dash madly pursued by a gang of heavies who fall victims to Bob's relentless type of humor.

Always a fall guy for blonde hair and baby-blue eyes, our hero sets out to aid the attractive British agent and in so doing lets himself in for a mess of trouble. In New York, Chicago and Los Angeles the redoubtable Mr. Hope gets involved in enough jams to earn himself a life-time berth at Leavenworth. But who could resist a single come-hither look from the eyes of a blonde angel? Bob solves every tight situation by letting loose with a joke, corny or otherwise, that gets 'em right between the eyes.

The stars are supported by a notable cast of villains, led by Gale Sandergaard.

On the same bill is a short subject released by the National Conference of Christians and Jews which makes a plea for racial and religious tolerance. The remainder of the program is rounded out with a cartoon and the latest newsreels.

And One of the Men Is Great

BRIAN DONLEVY, BARBARA STANWYCK, JOEL McCREA cast in the pivotal roles in the Paramount production of "The "Great Man's Lady," presented yesterday for the first time in Washington on the screen at the Earle Theater. Other roles of importance are taken by Thurston Hall, Lloyd Corrigan and Katharine Stevens in this story that spans the years from 1848 to 1941 and ranges from Philadelphia to the Western frontier

HEDDA HOPPER

Their Master's Voice!

Hollywood, Calif., July 10. President Roosevelt has given permission to Republic to use the radio transcription of his declaration of war against Japan for a sequence of "Flying Tigers," which will be the first picture to focus public attention on our Chinese allies.

LILLIAN GISH

We can't show too soon nor too often our appreciation for those courageous people's conduct of a war against insuperable odds.

When Lester Cowman takes "The Commandos" company on location to Victoria, B. C., he'll pick up and cast, Robert Coote, from the RAF there, Coote, who left pictures two years ago to enlist, is taking advantage of a leave to get back into grease paint.

Lillian Gish has arrived in town to confer with Lester, and he's also having sessions with that fine actress, Ruth Gordon. But Barbara Everest, English actress who came over for "Anne of England" with Flora Robson, will play the lead.

ᔕᔓᔕ

Barbara tells me her ship was one of a convoy of 65, and the crossing took 23 days.

ᔕᔓᔕ

When Arthur Hornblow wanted Mary Martin for "Calgary Stampede," the studio said she wasn't the outdoor type. Now Arthur's moving to Metro, so Mary's being cast as an outdoor girl.

Maybe it's because her closeups for "Ta-Ra-Ra Boom-De-Ay" in "Happy Go Lucky" were too hot for the censors.

ᔕᔓᔕ

An aircraft worker sent Ann Sothern a canary, which Ann took home. Now it's been warbling so much she can't sleep, and wants to know how to put the bird to sleep. Sure! Cover the cage, Ann—that always does it!

ᔕᔓᔕ

Wallace Beery returned to town from Jackson Hole, to start "Salute to the Marines" with an increased waist measurement of four inches. Says new Carol Ann has learned to cook, and he can't hurt her feelings by not eating it.

ᔕᔓᔕ

Inasmuch as Maureen O'Sullivan's going to have another baby and can't be in the next Tarzan picture with Johnny Weissmuller, Sol Lesser is scanning the newsreels for all the bathing beauties, hoping to pick up Tarzan's mate there.

ᔕᔓᔕ

Saved by the Navy! Richard Ney goes to the naval training center in South Bend, Ind., for three months, and I believe during that time, cadets aren't allowed to marry. Anything could happen—even Greer Garson might change her mind. It's been done!

ᔕᔓᔕ

I wonder if the reason Mapy Cortes says she and Fernando aren't married is that she's seeing a great deal of Jimmy McHugh, song writer.

I had a letter from a Puerto Rican soldier the other day who writes: "I was born there, and I've always known Mapy and Fernando as husband and wife. I can't think why she's denying it, and the truth sooner or later will come out."

ᔕᔓᔕ

I had as a guest on my air show Comdr. Weldon Lee Hamilton, commander of the dive bombers from the ill-fated Lexington. It was he who saw the wakes on the ocean which tipped him off to the Japanese fleet 40 miles away. "But," said he, "if I hadn't had a pair of binoculars, we would have missed them. The crying need in the Navy is more binoculars. The shortage is acute."

ᔕᔓᔕ

To date, Irene Dunne has the inside track on "The American Way," which George Stevens will direct.

ᔕᔓᔕ

Eddie Horton's planning a dinner party and vaudeville show out at Belly Acres Sunday, and Carmen Miranda promises to sing me "Chattanooga Choo Choo" in Portuguese.

Her tan is the envy of everyone, and she won't tell what kind of oil she brought with her from South America.

Columbia

The "devil-may-care" doings of Danny, Pilon and company continue on their merry way in the movie version of John Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat," now showing at the Columbia.

Aided and abetted by such stellar personalities as John Garfield, Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr, the story revolves around a small group of Mexican peasantry who spend their time wondering how to eat, live and drink without working. Minor disaster almost meets the happy clan when Danny inherits two broken-down houses and proceeds to change his former point of view to a more materialistic one. Further complications set in when he becomes enamored of "Sweets," the Portuguese girl who lives down the block. Earthy humor becomes the keynote when Pilon sets out to separate Danny from his newly found wealth and his matrimonial intentions.

Hedy Lamarr gives her most notable performance to date as the inspiration for Danny's new-found ways. John Garfield is seen as Danny and Spencer Tracy plays the rascally Pilon, who is responsible for almost causing Danny serious injury. Frank Morgan as the simple old beggar with a deep religious feeling gives a really moving portrayal. Akim Tamiroff, Sheldon Leonard, John Qualen and Allen Jenkins make up the remainder of the small group of ne'er-do-wells.

A Foul Blow

"Asking an actress' age is hitting below the double chin," remarked Ilka Chase, on the set of "Now, Voyager," at Warner Bros., when someone wondered how old a certain player is.

RKO-Keith's

The capricious ways of Miss Irene Dunne are meeting with such considerable success that she is being held over for a second week at RKO-Keith's.

As the "Lady in a Jam," who loses a considerable fortune as the result of her irresponsible extravagance, Miss Dunne is both gay and charming. Playing the impetuous Jane Palmer, she sets off across the country to Arizona to recoup her losses in a "lost" gold mine, owned by her grandmother. Following her is Dr. Enright, psychiatrist, who has been engaged by Eugene Pallette, as the executor, to adjust Miss Palmer's careless ways. When his treatment is about to take effect, gold is discovered on the property and, believing he has lost his patient, the doctor returns to New York only to be followed by the screwball heiress, who in the long run gets what she wants. In this case, him.

Patric Knowles is properly heroic, as the medico who falls in love with his No. 1 patient, and Ralph Bellamy almost steals the picture from the principals as the cowboy who considers everyone else a "character," but neglects to include himself. The direction is well paced and despite its oft-done plot the picture contains many highly amusing sequences.

Broadway Glossary

New York, July 10.

SALVAGE: When the rubber salvage campaign was about to begin, President Roosevelt instructed one of the White House servants to locate a pair of rubbers in the Executive Mansion and donate them to the salvage heap . . . The servant found a pair, which were in good condition. "But aren't we going to save these for a rainy day?" he asked the President . . . "Yes," replied Roosevelt, "and this is it."

CARY GRANT

ᔕᔓᔕ

SAFETY: Jimmy Doolittle and his observer went up, in a recent flight. The plane rose so quickly that the onlookers were positive that it would hit the Administration Building at the airport . . . Doolittle laughed, and said to his observer: "I'll bet at least 95 per cent of those people down there thought we wouldn't make it" . . . "And up here," sighed the observer, "only 50 per cent thought so."

ᔕᔓᔕ

RIVALRY: Cary Grant and Groucho Marx were making a tour of the big cities, raising money for Army and Navy Relief. After the show, a visitor came to Groucho's dressing room and said: "Did you hear that terrific ovation Cary got? The applause was so loud and prolonged." . . . "Yes, wasn't it awful," said Groucho. "I had to turn on the water in my room."

ᔕᔓᔕ

COURTESY: Alma Clayburgh, the opera singer, attended a reception in honor of young King Peter. When she was presented to him, she clutched her cane and said: "My troublesome knee just can't bend—not even for the King of such a brave people as the Yugoslavs." . . . "Not only brave," said Peter, shaking her hand to prevent any attempt at curtseying, "but courteous, too."

ᔕᔓᔕ

CELEBRATION: Mrs. A. G. Robinson, wife of the "Marblehead's" commander, Capt. Robinson, was taken by some friends to El Morocco. They asked bandleader Chauncey Gray to play a gay tune, one to commemorate a happy event . . . "Something special?" asked the bandleader . . . "Yes," he was told. "Capt. Robinson was promoted yesterday. He's a Rear Admiral now."

ᔕᔓᔕ

CHATTER: Lauchlin Currie, the President's aide, is visiting old friends . . . When Donald Nelson alters the make-up of his War Production Board, Ferdinand Eberstadt is expected to emerge in the top spot . . . Dick Rodgers, the songwriter, is entering the Army . . . Balaban may buy Roxy's Theater . . . Tex McCary, the editorialist, is enlisting in the Air Corps . . . Norman Corwin's series of broadcasts from England will start July 27. Corwin is taking only one actor to England—Joe Julian, who broadcast for the "This Is War" program, and who will be the narrator in this new series.

ᔕᔓᔕ

REMINDER: When Melvyn Douglas went to Washington he left one item in the dressing room at Columbia, where he made "They All Kissed the Bride." That item was a framed photo of the three Douglas children. On it is an inscription: "Here are three good reasons why Melvyn Douglas should never argue with a producer."

ᔕᔓᔕ

EXERCISE: Felix Ferry, the proprietor of Fefe's Monte Carlo, went to Billy Rose's farm last Sunday. He hiked through the pastures and cornfields, played ping-pong and tennis and then did some swimming. At sundown he stretched out wearily and tried to rest . . . "How about some gin rummy?" Otto Ludwig Preminger suggested . . . Ferry raised his arms weakly and said: I'll play—if you can get light cards."

ᔕᔓᔕ

SCENE: The Stork Club last night was the arena for an unusual event: The drummer in Bob Knight's orchestra made room for a customer, who played the drums for one number. The customer was James C. Petrillo, head of the American Federation of Musicians . . . And watching Petrillo play was the man with whom he had arrived—Westbrook Pegler.

ᔕᔓᔕ

ADVICE: During the Rio conference, Drew Pearson accompanied Brazil's Foreign Minister, Aranha, to the latter's home, after a long session. "The one thing you must do now is relax," Pearson told him. Aranha, however, paced the room . . . "You've just got to relax," Pearson repeated—and then he himself fell asleep in his chair . . . When Summer Welles arrived, later, Aranha told him: "American newspaper men are very strange. When they want to sleep they tell you YOU'RE tired."

Yanks' First-Inning Attack Beats Browns, 5-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This is most certainly the year when Clark Griffith muffed the chance to make a big haul for himself and his stockholders in Boom Town Washington. The firm is losing no money on the season's operations at Griffith Stadium, but they let the big dough get away.

POVICH

In a year when the city's population has zoomed toward a million, Griffith has come up with the worst Washington team in his 30-year connection with baseball here. Even the fact that the Nats are in last place, and have been for some time, hasn't scared all the customers away. It requires no vision at all to understand that a first-division club would have meant a bonanza for Griffith in Washington this year.

He got his 21 night games and that was a great break for the Washington firm. An idea of how night ball has helped attendance can be gleaned from comparative crowds this week. The Red Sox, in the thick of the pennant fight in a town that is pennant-hungry, met the Tigers, another first-division team, at Boston on Wednesday. Seventy-seven hundred fans turned out that afternoon. In Washington, the same night, with the last-place Nats playing the sixth-place White Sox, the game, despite itself, drew 7000 customers.

The Government would have subtracted most of Griffith's profits in taxes at the end of the fiscal year, but the crowd figures could have hit a new high in Washington this season. And the profits, temporary though they might have been, might also have achieved a peak, because the Washington club is operating with probably its lowest payroll in history.

Trade With Tigers a Washout

The Washington Club got out from under two of its big obligations when Uncle Sam took Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis off the payroll. They were the highest paid of Griffith's employes. Only Buck Newsom and Dutch Leonard are drawing in excess of $10,000 from the Washington firm and the nut, as the saying goes, is small indeed. There is doubt that the entire Washington infield's combined salaries equals the sum the Yankees are paying Joe DiMaggio, for instance.

And there isn't much doubt now that Griffith and Bucky Harris outfoxed themselves in the trade with the Detroit Tigers last winter which brought them Frankie Croucher and Bruce Campbell in exchange for Jimmy Bloodworth and Roger Cromer. The Nats' greatest single weakness, all season, has been second base and it's no comfort for Griffith to realize that Bloodworth has been doing a great job for the Tigers at that position all season.

It's hard to appraise just how much Dutch Leonard's broken leg in late April cost the Washington firm. It deprived them of their best pitcher and the Nats would not be in the cellar at this time if Leonard had been in there taking his regular turn. A Washington club in sixth, or fifth place wouldn't be vastly more profitable to the stockholders than the current last-place team. Washington fans aren't demanding a pennant. They just like to see the club win a few ball games now and then.

The Nats got a tough break, too, because Mickey Vernon and Jake Early somehow have settled on this year to go into batting slumps. That pair was supposed to take up some of the slack left by the departure of Travis and Lewis in the hitting department, but there have been too many days when they couldn't buy a hit.

Nats' Pitchers Among Victims

Among the Nats' victims have been the Washington pitchers. Sid Hudson and Buck Newsom would have been big winners this year with any first-division or even fifth-place club, but it has been all very futile for them. On the days when the Nats' minor-league infield wasn't messing things up for Newsom and Hudson, they were getting precious few runs for them, which added up to the same thing. In his last four starts, for example, Hudson has seen the Nats give him a total of only five runs.

Griffith can say, with some truth, that he's pretty helpless in the situation. He can't buy ballplayers, because talent is running so thin that the clubs lucky enough to own good ballplayers are keeping 'em. And the Nats' farm system has always been something of a joke.

The club won't lose money this year, because the payroll is down and the attendance is up, but the profits that could have been made are plenty. When 7000 fans turn out to see a last-place club play a sixth-place team that had lost eight of its last nine starts, the evidence is that Washington has a lot of money to spend for baseball. The Nats are drawing well, despite themselves.

Weather Postpones Contest As Nats Lead Sox, 1-0, in 4th

Teams Meet Tonight at 8:30; 4000 in Stands, Griffs Have Man on Third When Action Ends

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

On account of a military secret, the Nats lost a chance to win a ball game from the White Sox last night. They were leading by the slender but nice margin of 1 to 0, and had another run working when the weather began to act up in the last half of the fourth inning. It didn't snow, but the game was stopped permanently.

And so the two clubs will meet again, but not this afternoon as originally scheduled. Griffith Stadium officials rescheduled the resumption of the series for tonight, under the lights.

Buck Newsom was the chief victim last night. He was seemingly on his way to the rare experience of winning a ball game when the weather went sour on him and erased his chance. Newsom was outpitching ancient Ted Lyons in the nocturnal battle when the teams were forced to call it quits.

4000 Fans

The 4000 customers had seen the Nats take a 1-0 lead against Lyons in the first inning of Lyons' first American League game under the lights. After 20 years in the majors, Teddy was making his arc-light debut and the Nats wrung a first-inning run out of him without making a hit.

They had the help, though, of two Chicago errors, and one of them was Lyons' own misplay. The old fellow permitted George Case's rap into the box to roll up his shirt sleeve for an error and eventually Case scored. Joe Kuhel moved Case to second with a wild throw to that base on Spence's grounder and Case scored on two infield outs.

Both Lyons and Newsom gave up three hits in the brief affair but two of the blows off Newsom were for extra bases. Kennedy tripled to right with one out in the second, and Newsom got out of that hole by striking out Kolloway. In the fourth, after Sullivan's wild throw to first put Appling on base, the White Sox got too ambitious and lost a run. Appling tried to score all the way from first on Kennedy's double to right center and didn't make it. Johnny Sullivan made a lively relay of Case's throw and nipped Appling at the plate.

There Bobby Stayed

It looked as if the Nats were all ready to give Newsom another run to work with in the fourth inning. Bobby Estelella led off with a lusty three-bagger against the center field wall but before anybody else could get to bat the you-know-what's came, and they stopped the ball game.

For tonight's engagement, it will be Early Wynn pitching against Bill Dietrich, White Sox righthander. . . . Dietrich hurt his arm on White Sox's last trip to Washington and has pitched little since. . . . Young Ellis Clary, his injured thumb healed, returned to second base for the Nats last night and did all right. . . . He made one of the Nats' three hits.

Cards Rally, Beat Giants In Tenth, 3-2

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 10.—The St. Louis Cardinals snatched a victory over the New York Giants out of the fire today after being shutout by Bob Carpenter on four hits for 8 2-3 innings.

Then suddenly they sparked for two runs to tie the score and in the tenth inning they rushed across the deciding run in a 3-to-2 triumph before anyone was out.

The trouble started with Whitey Kurowski's apparently wasted single in the ninth, but Pinch-hitter Walker Cooper doubled and everybody quickly realized the heat was on. Manager Mel Ott of the Giants flagged Ace Adams in from the bull pen and Coaker Triplett batted for Max Lanier.

On the first pitch Triplett singled to left to score both runners and tie the game. Jimmy Brown grounded out but as soon as the Cards came to bat in the tenth they opened up on Adams again.

Terry Moore singled, Enos Slaughter singled and Stan Musial bunted down the third-base line. Both Adams and Third Baseman Bill Werber charged in for the ball. Adams fielded it and uncorked a quick throw to third for a force play—but nobody was there and the ball sailed into left field to let the winning run score unmolested.

Bill Welch, Of Publinks, Is Victor

McCormick, Abbott And Gwan Also Gain Semifinals in Annual Amateur Play

By the Associated Press

Spokane, July 10.—The National Public Links golf champion beat the National Amateur champion today in a quarterfinals match of the Western Association's championship. It was poker-faced Bill Welch of Houston, back on the scene of his triumph a year ago, who knocked Defending Titlist Corpl. Marvin "Bud" Ward out of competition, 2 up.

Ward, stationed with the Army Air Force here, snapped out of the slump that overtook him yesterday but he didn't snap far enough. Welch, the Texas toolshop worker, chopped par to bits. He toured the par 72 course in 69 and double clinched the match on the eighteenth hole with a birdie 3.

Ward, seeking his third straight Western crown, had to scramble but he racked up a 35, 36—71 and at the ninth hole was 1 up on Welch. The latter put together nines of 36, 33 against the pair of 36s for the layout's par.

Ward was 2 up at the tenth but his rival grabbed the next two to square things and they battled even until the sixteenth. Ward hooked his drive into the woods on this 197-yarder and lost it to a par 3, Welch being on the green. The Texan laid his second up to within 3 feet on the last hole, where Ward's drive hit a tree and he was on the green but far past the pin on his third.

It was the first time national champs from the U. S. G. A. two big men's amateur tournaments had hooked up in a major tournament and the common people's representative came out on top.

Two former national public links kingpins also came through with flying colors to dominate the quarter-finals.

Fireman Bruce McCormick of Los Angeles whipped an old rival and fellow Californian, Skee Riegel of Glendale, 3 and 2, while Corpl. Pat Abbott of Denver blasted the hopes of Marsh Hammond, local entry, 4 and 3.

In the other match former Walker Cup star Harry Givan of Seattle, gave Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., a links lesson to the tune of 5 and 4.

Welch meets McCormick and Abbott takes on Givan in tomorrow's semi-finals.

Horse Trainer Is Suspended In 'Dope' Case

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—The first stimulating case of the year in Maryland was disclosed by the stewards this afternoon and resulted in the suspension of Trainer Everett Brining and all horses trained and owned by the Hagerstown horseman. The official announcemen treported that the horse Marandan, winner of the fourth race last Tuesday, was found to have been under the influence of a stimulant, the nature of which was not revealed. Under the rules, trainers are held responsible for their horses and are subject to a minimum suspension of one year.

Marandan was a strongly played favorite and won under a hard drive by Jockey Butsy Hernandez. Norman Corbin's Brazen Hussy was second and Mrs. P. G. Simms' Silver Beam was third in the test over the 6½ furlongs.

Report of Stewards

The full report of the stewards follows:

"Trainer E. Brining has this day been suspended for violating Rule 146 (dealing with stimulation) of Maryland racing and his case refered to the Maryland Racing Commission for such action as they deem fit and further entry of the horse Marandan owned by him has been ordered refused.

"The purse won by the said horse on July 7 has been ordered held up pending instructions from the Maryland Racing Commission for its distribution.

"Likewise the entries of the following horses trained by E. Brining are ordered refused and this case refered to the Maryland Racing Commission for such further action as they deem fit: Maiden Fern, Sea Pilot, Granny Cake, Mowet, Persian Queen, Lennance and Marandan."

Try Flying Wins

The Williamsport Purse, a speed battle over the Mason-Dixon course of slightly less than 5 furlongs, proved a romp for Mrs. A. Bevans' Try Flying and the sixth straight victory for the fleet son of Flying Heels and Trycome. Winner of five in a row at Charles Town, Try Flying took the lead in the first jump today and won by four lengths under good handling by Jockey Lawrence Eversole.

Try Flying finished ahead of Mrs. Dion K. Kerr's Any Way. The latter was a length in advance of Miss Jayne Waugh's Last Bet in the field

Foxx Singles, Cubs Defeat Braves, 3 to 2

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 10.—Jimmy Foxx' third hit, a single to left in the eighth inning, today gave the Chicago Cubs and Claude Passeau a 3-to-2 victory over the Boston Braves.

Passeau pitched a five-hit game to best Jim Tobin and end a four-game Cub losing streak. It was Passeau's thirteenth victory of the season against five losses.

Tobin, twice before victor over the Cubs, allowed only six hits and none until the Cubs tied the score with three hits in the fifth inning. Passeau pitched to 18 batters in the last six innings.

Foxx' winning hit came with Phil Cavarretta on second as a result of Tobin's wild throw trying to start a double play on Novikoff's grounder.

The Braves scored their two runs in the second when Lombardi singled, West walked and after Miller forced West, Gremp doubled to score Lombardi and Miller.

Coach Neyland's Work Wins Him Rank of Colonel

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., July 10.—It is now Col. Robert R. Neyland, United States Army engineer, with headquarters at Norfolk. The former Tennessee football coach was promoted from rank of lieutenant colonel to full colonel on July 4 and was notified and took the new oath on July 7.

Coming to Norfolk from Tennessee less than two years ago with rank of major, his ability won quick recognition from the War Department and just a few months ago he was promoted to lieutenant colonel.

Reds Stop Dodgers, 2-1, in 10 Innings

Walters Scores Winning Run, Hurls Six-Hit Ball in Head-and-Head Battle

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 10.—Big Frank McCormick singled home Bucky Walters in the tenth inning tonight to give Cincinnati a 2-1 victory over Brooklyn. Walters hurled six-hit ball in earning his tenth victory and first in four starts against the Dodgers.

The winning run was unearned. Walters led off the Reds' half of the tenth with a single, and Hugh Casey replaced Kirby Higbe and fanned Eddie Joost. Lonnie Frey then tapped to Casey, and Shortstop Peewee Reese dropped the pitcher's low throw to second. Max Marshall popped, but McCormick lined a single through mid-diamond, and Walters slid home under Pete Reiser's throw.

For nine innings Walters dueled with Higbe, who was charged with the defeat—his sixth against eight victories.

Each side got only one man on base in the first two innings, but in the third the Dodgers scored when Higbe bounced a single over Walters' head, took third on Reese's single and scored on a force play. The Reds tied it in their half of the third on singles by Ray Lamanno and Harry Craft, a sacrifice by Walters and Joost's long fly.

Walters' second single off Higbe in the tenth was the sixth safety the big right-hander yielded. In the six innings before the winning rally, not a Redleg reached third.

Two errors and a walk put three Dodgers on the runways in the fifth, but the first runner was out trying for second, and the two others were among 11 men the Dodgers left stranded.

Harder Hurls 4-Hitter, Tribe Tops Macks, 4-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 10.—Mel Harder's four-hit pitching gave the Cleveland Indians a 4-to-2 victory over the Athletics at Shibe Park today. The triumph preserved the Tribe's hold on third place in the American League, four games behind Boston and eight below New York.

Harder held the A's to two hits for six innings. In the seventh he walked two batters and both scored on Pete Suder's double.

Aided by fluke hits, the Indians scored three times against Herman Besse in the fifth inning and added a run in the sixth. Ray Mack, who had three hits in three chances, drove a run home in each rally.

Greenberg Gains Open Tennis Finals

Evanston, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Seymour Greenberg of Chicago, seeded No. 1, advanced to the finals of the men's singles competition in the North Shore Open Tennis Tournament today by defeating unseeded Bod Smidl of Chicago, 6—0, 6—1, 6—4.

Greenberg's opponent in the finals will be decided in tomorrow's other semifinal match, between Gardner Larned and Jimmy Evert, both Chicagoans.

Bill Reinhart Leaves G. W. To Serve Navy Under Tunney

Athletic Director Gets Commission Of Lieut. Comdr.

By Jack Munhall

An A. E. F. veteran of World War I, Bill Reinhart, George Washington director of athletics yesterday changed his service brand.

With a suddeness that left George Washington in the dark about his successor, the 41-year-old Reinhart accepted a commission of lieutenant commander in the United States Navy and will leave for Norfolk Sunday to take up his duties in the physical fitness setup under Commander Gene Tunney.

The jovial, rotund Reinhart was named director of athletics at G. W. only last spring when Max Farrington stepped down and his leaving throws the athletic condition of the G Street school into a muddle.

Just what Reinhart's work with the Navy will be, he himself didn't know last night.

"I'm to report to Norfolk Sunday," he said, "for preliminary training. How long I'll be there

Hughson's Bat, Hurling Win For Bosox, 6-1

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 10.—Cecil (Tex) Hughson drove in three runs with a lusty double and single today to score half his team's tallies as he notched his ninth victory of the season while the Boston Red Sox were defeating the Detroit Tigers, 6-1.

The Sox got to starting Pitcher Paul (Dizzy) Trout in the second inning after his erratic hurling gave successive bases on balls to Bob Doerr and Tony Lupien. Jim Tabor chased them both home with a double to the left field corner and Hughson drove in Tabor with a sharp single to right.

Boston concocted another three-run cluster in the fifth with Hughson's double, the only safe blow of the inning. Ted Williams opened with a walk and Doerr was safe when Rudy York let his slow roller go right through. Lupien sacrificed and Tabor was purposely passed. Williams scored on Bill Conroy's long fly and Hughson's double chased the other pair home.

Detroit was blanked until the ninth when Bill Hitchcock, Barney McCosky and Doc Cramer singled in succession. Hitchcock scored as Pinky Higgins was thrown out and York ended the game by rapping into a fast double play, the third of the day for the Sox.

Pete Appleton Signed By St. Louis Browns

New York, July 10 (AP).—Manager Luke Sewell announced today that the St. Louis Browns have signed Pitcher Pete Appleton, who was recently cut adrift by the Chicago White Sox.

The right-hand veteran, who has performed with the Cincinnati Reds, Cleveland Indians, Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees and Washington Senators under the name of Jablonowski as well as Appleton, was in uniform today with the Brownies.

Niggeling Is Shelled For All Runs

Stan Ferens Takes Over and Throttles Champs; New York Keeps 4-Game Lead

By the Associated Press

New York, July 10.—Manager Luke Sewell of St. Louis guessed wrong today when he started Johnny Niggeling on the mound, with the result the New York Yankees whipped the Browns, 5 to 2, and maintained their four-game lead over the Boston Red Sox.

The Yanks connected with only five hits off the combined offerings of Niggeling and left-handed Stan Ferens but they bunched three of the blows with as many walks and a hit batsman in the first inning to score all of their runs and send Niggeling to the showers. Ferens entered the game with two out and Yanks perched on first and second. He made Frankie Crosetti hit into a force play and then hurled two-hit ball the remainder of the distance. Crosetti singled in the fourth and Tommy Henrich did the same in the fifth. An error and intentional pass, his only walk, got him in a hole in the latter frame, but this time Phil Rizzuto hit into a force play.

Meanwhile, the Brownies could do little with Atley Donald, who chalked up his fifth success as against two losses. They picked up a run in the third on Don Gutteridge's single, an error by Crosetti and George McQuinn's one-bagger and added another in the ninth when Mike Chartak singled and Chet Laabs doubled. But during the other innings Donald kept them in check as he yielded a total of nine hits.

$2491 Double Is Recorded At Arlington

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 10.—The largest daily double of the present Arlington Park season was hung up today when the combination of Count Traumer, winner of the first race, and Epiget, winner of the second, paid $2491.20.

Count Traumer was up along the rail in the last strides to nip Cideam at the wire. Count Traumer, owned by Allen T. Simmons of Columbus, Ohio, paid $66.60 to win, $22.40 to place, $10.40 to show.

Jockey Shelby Clark, make a comeback following an injury, which kept him out of the saddle for many months, was the rider.

In winning the second race Epiget scored her first victory this year. She led most of the way to outstay the favorite, Hereshecomes, who finished strong, a half length off the winner. Epiget, owned by James Emery of Chicago, was ridden by Jockey M. L. Fallon. The filly's price across the board was $20.90, $9.60, $6.40. Nine tickets were sold on the double.

Tris Speaker's Condition Called 'Quite Serious'

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 10.—The condition of Tris Speaker, 54-year-old baseball immortal suffering from a punctured intestine, was "quite serious" tonight. Lakeside Hospital reported he gained slightly last night but that no further improvement was noted today. When admitted early this week he was suffering a cold bordering on pneumonia but as he recovered from this complications developed, his physician reported.

Speaker, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, also is chairman of the Cleveland Boxing Commission. He was manager-outfielder when the Cleveland Indians captured their only pennant, in 1920.

Unofficial Mile Record Broken by Swedish Runner

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, July 10.—Swedish assaults on world track records continued tonight when Arne Anderson equalled Gunder Haegg's eight-day old unofficial mark for the mile with a clocking of 4:06.2.

Anderson ran second to Haegg when the latter clipped two-tenths of a second off Sydney Wooderson's recognized world standard of 4:04.4. In that race, Anderson was caught in the same time that Wooderson hung up in London on August 28, 1937.

Haegg also established a new unofficial standard of 8:47.8 for 2 miles, two days after breaking Wooderson's mile time.

Shut Out Gets Top Impost for $20,000 Empire 'Cap Today

Nine Stars To Run in Long Race

Col. Teddy, Apache Head List Entered In $20,000 Event; Vagrancy Also Goes

By the Associated Press

New York, July 10.—They're giving Shut Out the toughest job he's ever had to do tomorrow.

Head man in a field of nine for the rich Empire City Handicap, the Derby and Belmont winner will be loaded down with 129 pounds, more weight than he's ever been asked to carry before, will be spotting even his most dangerous rivals up to 24 pounds, and will have at least three other gallopers as hot as firecrackers trying to knock his ears off.

On top of that he'll have to "saddle" with these gee-gees for a mile and three-sixteenths over Empire's sharp-cornered, short straightaway strip that's tough for the best of them. In his only previous start over this layout, the son of Equipoise finished five lengths back.

There's plenty of jinx going along with Ekky's kid, too. No 3-year-old ever has won this stake packing more than 125 pounds and no Derby winner ever has grabbed the brass ring.

From a lot of angles, it's not only Shut Out's toughest assignment but just about as stiff a job as any 3-year-old has been asked to tackle in years.

He'll be tangling with such better-than-bad hay consumers as Warren Wright's Col. Teddy, who has just about reached his peak under Plain Ben Jones' magic touch; William Woodward's Apache, who is coming back to his early-season form under the wizardry of Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons and Vagrancy, the other half of Woodward's entry and Glamour Gal of the 3-year-old fillies, who is getting her first shot at the colts in her division.

Col. Teddy will carry only 115 pounds and Apache and Vagrancy 114 each.

Then there are Tom Howell's Amaho, winner of his last three starts; Joseph Roebling's Lochinvar, who's been chasing Shut Out and Alsab all season; Walter Chrysler, jr.'s, Ramillies, a threat if he can carry his speed that far; Texas Ben Whittaker's Eternal Peace and Jake Freedman's Billy O.

With more than $20,000 waiting at the finish line Shut Out is still the solid horse, off his track record triumph over Valdina Orphan in the Yankee Handicap at Suffolk last Saturday. Victory this time would boost the chocolate son of the Chocolate Soldier right up into the important money class, over the $185,000 marks and among the top 30 American money winners of all time.

KAYDEEKAY, off alertly, saved ground while setting pace and drew out in closing stages to win with speed in reserve. DARTING STAR went to contention on outside and closed willingly. JOSIE DONATI was hard ridden closest to pace and weakened. HEROD'S PILATE was off poorly and had no chance.

Daily Double—SWEETIE FACE and KAYDEEKAY Paid $17.20.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600. For 4-yearolds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:38. Winner, Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' b. c. (4) by Supremus—Lacinia. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:21¾.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH MAN, $4.80, $3.40, $2.70; SMART LAD, $3.70, $2.80; CORNELIA JANE, $4.60.

ROUGH MAN took command in opening furlong, saved ground while setting good pace and won easily. SMART LAD improved position gradually on outside to stretch and then hung. CORNELIA JANE was pinched off between ROUGH MAN and CROISSANT in early stages and came willingly thereafter. CROISSANT had early speed and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. P. Jostis' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DON DASH, $17.30, $5.50, $4.20; GLITTER GIRL, $3.50, $3.40; RIPPLING ON, $9.70.

DON DASH was well placed from start, displaced Pandoramint as pacemaker approaching stretch and just lasted ahead of GLITTER GIRL. The latter saved ground early while close up, carried SIR KID wide after a half and closed with good energy. RIPPLE ON stumbled leaving gate and came with rush in closing stages. PANDORAMINT was taken up approaching stretch.

FIFTH RACE—Mason and Dixon course. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:36½. Off at 4:36. Winner, Mrs. A. Bevans' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRY FLYING, $4.50, $3.20, $3.40; ANYWAY, $3.10, $5.50; LAST BET, $6.20.

TRY FLYING, first away, saved much ground at first turn and held ANYWAY safe, winning easily. ANYWAY was off slowly, went to contention with a rush, bore out at first turn and hung after moving up boldly. LAST BET was not a serious factor. CYNIC M286 closed some ground.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:07. Winner, Miss M. D. Heubeck's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL JELIS, $6.90, $4.20, $3.70; NYLEVE, $8.40, $5.30; PENWAY, $7.90.

EL JELIS raced on outside from start, responded willingly when placed to pressure and held NYLEVE safe. The latter was far back for three-quarters and closed willingly and might have been best. PENWAY was well placed and showed a good effort. LUPOBA weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:37½. Winner, Florence White's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAKE, $9.00, $4.60, $4.00; BATTLE LINE, $3.50, $3.30; BIG GAY, $4.70.

WAKE was well placed from start and, under steadying restraint, responded when placed to drive and wore down the leaders to win going away. BATTLE LINE lacked speed for half, came between horses to better position and closed willingly. BIG GAY moved up boldly and then weakened. GENDARME went wide at the turns and Harrell lost stirrup at one stage.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:07. Off at 6:07½. Winner, H. G. Tonkin's b. m. Selections at Hagerstown

Dear Al:

The little red-haired boy who is referred to as "H. Williams" on the programs and who is starting out on a jockey's career, is Herbert Williams, a youngster I wrote about last year. At Cumberland, he did riding tricks on a pony and I believe I wrote at the time that somebody should try to make him a rider. He is 16 years old now and weighs 92 pounds and is trying his best to learn the saddle trade. He can't handle horses as he handled his pony, but he is learning. Herbert is from Trenton, N. J., and the closest he has come to winning so far has been two thirds. Through some mixup, Williams does not have the apprentice allowance now and rides for Joe Camac. The boy says he still has "Bobby," the pony, but is too busy now with horses to ride him. Walter Haight goes today. He has a battle on his hands, but I believe he can win it. Mutuel Manager Walter McConnell of Bel Air sent word that due to transportation problems, mutuel clerks will not have to report until 10 a. m. on the first day of the meeting. In other years, he has had a tryout the previous day. Eddie McCann of the Racing Form came up from Baltimore for a visit and reports that Gaby Haugh, popular racing writer for the Baltimore News-Post, is on the mend after his illness. Somebody was kidding about four veterinarians being assigned to the Maryland tracks. He said, "Have you heard about the Notre Dame backfield in the paddock? Four vets—and can they shift—the blame!" Beverly Brown, chairman of the West Virginia Racing Commission, saw yesterday's card here. Young Harry Stevens came down from New York to look over the concessions situation. He is headed for the Naval Air Force shortly. Harry Doub's speed boat is a dark. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—FANCY THRILLS and LINDEN GIRL are a tight fit in the day's opener. They represent the chief speed and I prefer them in the order named. SHY MISS is good now and belongs in the pay circle.

Second race — AMPERAGE is a doubtful starter but will take it all if sent postward. CHIEF TEDDY appears best of the eligibles. CLIFTON'S DAWN and HAPPY GALLOP will be right there if placed in action.

Third race—CLOCKS should take the top on this kind and figures to take the main portion of this purse. CHAPS had class once and may be ready to be a serious factor. SCOOTIE to take care of the others.

Fourth race — SPECTATOR has speed enough to be a dangerous factor, if not the winner in this short sprint. I'm going to string along with this one. LITTLE SUZANNE has plenty of foot and belongs close. ROMAN BOY'S chances depend on his ability to outrun these to the first turn.

Fifth race—SARAN was a champion at Charles Town and seems capable of carrying 120 pounds to victory in the day's feature event. INGOMAR should go well at this distance. NAVY may have trouble with the turns.

Sixth race—WALTER LIGHT got the feel of the track last out and should be ready to turn back this kind. CANDLE ENDS meets the right opposition here. GROUCHE'S BOY to take care of the others.

Seventh race—WALTER HAIGHT has shown two good races in a row and deserves the top pick in this company. MERRY MISTAKE and ROLLS ROUGH are the ones to beat.

Eighth race—PART ONE looks best in this distance affair. Comes off good races at Charles Town. SISTAUR is in light enough to be a threat. SINGING STEEL belongs in the money circle.

Best bet—CLOCKS.

CLOCKER MIKE AT HAGERSTOWN

1—Shy Miss, Oldwood, Linden Girl.
2—Miss Defiance, Chief Teddy, Happy Gallop.
3—India Pass, Clocks, Scootie.
4—Blue Gander, Time Her, Ida Time.
5—Saran, Navy, High Plaid.
6—Myrtle Man, Amaltha, Walter Light.
7—Tripod, Camp Meeting, Rolls Rough.
8—Tanganyika, Part One, Singing Steel.
Best bet—SARAN.

Bucs Send Duo To Minneapolis

Pittsburgh, July 10 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates assigned two players to Minneapolis of the American Association today to supplement the undisclosed cash they paid out in buying Shortstop Eugene (Huck) Geary from the Millers.

The deal was completed by the outright release to Minneapolis of Infielder Stuart Martin and the loaning of Infielder Alf Anderson under option. The transfer is effective immediately, Anderson and Martin leaving tonight to hook up with the Millers in Kansas City tomorrow.

Frankie Frisch, manager of the Pirates, said he would send Geary into the Bucs line-up at once, as he now has only Pete Coscarart as an extra infielder.

Huge Field Starts M. A. Men's Tennis Today at Columbia

70 to Seek Crown Worn By Welsh

Thompson Only Dark-Horse Entry; Murphy and Hayes In Season Debuts

With its largest entry list in recent years, some 70 players, the annual Middle Atlantic men's tennis tournament opens at Columbia Country Club today as Barney Welsh seeks his third straight singles title.

Although the seeded list of eight contains not even one strange name to give hope that some powerful outsider might upset Welsh, there is at least one unranked contender who is likely to cause considerable trouble.

He is Frank Thompson, captain of the 1940 University of Virginia tennis team and currently playing in fine form, who has been placed but not seeded because officials had no recent data by which to judge him. That Thompson easily might upset several of the seeded boys is indicated by the fact that he has always been able to whip Charley Channing, a former Virginia teammate, who is seeded sixth in the tournament.

D. C. Netters Return

A pair of formidable local netmen will be making their season's debut in this, the second major tournament of the District tennis season. They are clever little Dick Murphy and eccentric-styled Samuel K. Hayes.

Murphy, when in form, is liable to beat any of the local bunch, with exception of Barney Welsh, but owing to his duties with the Navy he is not likely to be at his peak.

S. K. Hayes, the baldish gent with the Western looping forehand that never fails to give a new opponent pause for thought, is good enough to extend any of the favorites, although he hasn't the all-around game to defeat many of them.

Bensinger Enters

The presence of Junior Champion Bobby Bensinger on the seeded list in seventh spot is evidence that this year's entry list, though large, may prove to be not near so strong as those of other years. Bensinger is notorious for his failures against men's opposition, even considering his upset of Buddy Adair in the City of Washington Tournament recently.

Seeded, in order behind Welsh, are Davie Johnsen, finalist to Welsh in the City of Washington Tournament; Don Leavens and Hugh Lynch, semifinalists in the same tournament; Murphy, Channing, Bensinger and Buddy Adair.

Placed are Tom Thaler, Baltimore champion; Thompson, Red Shenkin, Doyle Royal, Austin Rice, Jerry Courtney, Igor Cassini and Ricky Willis.

First Round

Chibears' Snyder Made Notre Dame Freshman Coach

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., July 10.—The Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, president of the University of Notre Dame, today appointed Robert A. Snyder as Notre Dame freshman football coach.

Snyder, who has been quarterback on the Chicago Bears, starred at Ohio University, Athens, Ohio, before he starred in professional football.

He will teach the freshmen the rudiments of the T-formation, help with scouting and, if time permits, will assist Backfield Coach Ed McKeever with the varsity.

Snyder graduated in 1936 from Ohio University. Shortly after graduation he married a classmate, Miss Elinor Kuney of Toledo, Ohio. Snyder was born in Fremont, Ohio.

He succeeds Lieut. William H. Cerny, United States Navy Reserve, who is participating in the Navy aviation physical hardening program.

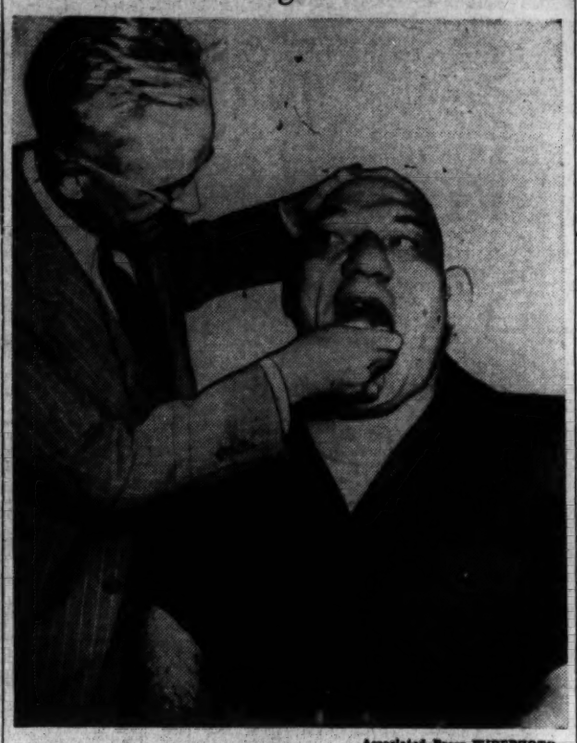
Meet an 'Angelic' Draftee



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"The Angel," villain par excellence of the wrestling circuit, passes a draft board physical examination by Dr. C. J. Cronin of Brighton, Mass. Under his real name, Maurice Tillet, "The Angel" once served six years in the French navy and now wants to help the United States. "I like to fight," he says

Mrs. Hartman Wins CBS Golf Tourney

Prince Georges Woman Has Net 71; Mrs. John Thomas 2d, Mrs. D. Stuart 3d

Mrs. C. B. Hartman, a tournament regular from Prince Georges Country Club, came through with one of her best rounds of golf yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club to win the Columbia Broadcasting System Cup tournament, an annual event for the Class B players of the District Women's Golf Association.

Mrs. Hartman played championship flight golf for most of the front nine and turned in 46 strokes and then ran into a little more trouble on the return trip for a 50 and 96 for the round. The new C. B. S. Cup champion, who succeeds Mrs. George M. Jani, then deducted 25 handicap strokes for a net 71 to win by a four-stroke margin.

The host club supplied the low gross winner in Mrs. Lloyd Dennis whose 44-51, 95, was the lowest score in the field of more than 50 players.

Mrs. Thomas Second

Second and third low net prizes went to Indian Spring, with Mrs. John Thomas finishing four shots back in second place with 101—26, 75, just two strokes better than a clubmate, Mrs. D. Stuart who was third with 99-22, 77.

Mrs. D. M. McPherson, of Manor, completed the list of 100 breakers in posting a 99-21, 78, and tying for fourth net with Mrs. W. R. Russell, Army and Navy, who had a 107-29, 78.

Three tied at net 80's to complete the prize list, Mrs. H. C. Fisher, Columbia, 105-25, 80; Mrs. Mae Hill, Manor, 104-24, 80, and Mrs. R. W. Ayers, Washington, 107-27, 80.

Yesterday's C. B. S. Cup participants and the Class A players have only three more days to file their entries for The Washington Post tournament which is scheduled next Friday, the low handicapped linkswomen competing at Columbia and those with stroke allotments of 19 and up playing at Kenwood. Monday at 1 p. m. is the entry deadline with Mrs. C. P. Magruder, tournament chairman.

CONGRESSIONAL

Mrs. M. R. Paul was the Class A winner in the weekly Ladies Day tournament of the Congressional Country Club committee, winning a blind bogey match play against par event by finishing 13 up on regulation figures.

Mrs. J. W. Godfrey was second, 10 up, while the Class B winners were Mrs. E. A. Swingle, 9 up, and Mrs. H. E. Weber, 8 up.

Little Tavern Bows, 7-3, to Center Market

A pair of three-run outbursts accounted for Center Market's fourth straight triumph yesterday in The Washington Post-Industrial League second half, Little Tavern bowing by 7-3 after an exciting tussle on the Ellipse.

With Frank Watt hurling six-hit ball, the Marketmen overcame Tavern's one-run lead with a trio in the second inning, then settled the issue conclusively with a similar spree in the fourth. Watt struck out eight batters and allowed no bases on balls.

Kimmel and Barroni combined in a six-hit pitching job for the losers, but their efforts were hurt by three errors behind them. Leading hitter of the day was Harry Bassin, former Georgetown star, who collected a double and triple in four trips to the plate for Little Tavern.

Colts Release Pair of Players

Richmond, Va., July 10 (AP).—Three Richmond players were given their release last night after the Colts dropped a 4-2 decision to the Norfolk Tars.

Manager Ben Chapman announced that George Carter, a catcher who hasn't been able to hit, was given his outright release, while Lloyd Maloney and Ernie Ankrom were optioned to Sanford, N. C., of the Bi-State League.

Don Vettorel, suspended catcher, was placed back on the active list, giving the Colts two catchers, Vettorel and Marcus Carrola, who recently joined the Colts from Fort Worth of the Texas League.

Banks Seeks Revenge in Collins Bout

That long-awaited chance to get revenge for a previous defeat at the hands of Jimmy Collins, Baltimore headliner, will come to Billy Banks, Washington's promising colored lightweight scrapper, on Monday night, July 20, at Griffith Stadium.

Collins yesterday was signed to meet Banks in a 10-round feature match, following a trip to Baltimore by Promoter Joe Turner.

The Monumental City fighter is handled by Sylvan Bass, himself a former pugilist, who, besides being a promoter and matchmaker, is a manager and trainer.

Turner decided on Collins as the lad to face Banks, after the colored battler personally pleaded with the promoter to give him an opportunity to "get revenge."

Banks lost a hairline decision to Collins in their first meeting before some 3000 persons in Baltimore. In a return match they fought tooth-and-nail for 10 rounds, with the judges and referee balloting a draw. Banks' supporters, to the number of some 500, booed vociferously, claiming the kid was "robbed" of the decision.

The name of Jimmy Collins, although a bit unknown locally, already has replaced Harry Jeffra, former world's featherweight and bantamweight champion, as Baltimore's favorite fighting son. In 50 matches during four years of professional fighting, the Irish battler has dropped only two decisions.

Promoter Turner, greatly pleased with his first 10-rounder, is seeking two good boys for another co-feature.

Two Foreign Stars Enter Tennis Finals

By the Associated Press

Orange, N. J., July 10.—Francisco Segura of Ecuador and Alejo Russell of Argentina assured a foreign flavor for the singles final of the forty-ninth annual New Jersey State Men's Tennis Tournament today with convincing victories over seeded American stars in the quarterfinal round.

Segura's two-fisted cannonball drives carried him to a 6—0, 8—6 triumph over E. Victor Seixas of Philadelphia, while Russell, not as spectacular but equally as workmanlike, polished off husky Charles Mattman of Forest Hills, N. Y., 6—3, 6—3. Mattman was seeded third and Seixas fourth on the domestic list. Segura and Russell were placed first and second in the foreign draw.

The semifinals, scheduled tomorrow, will pit Segura against sixth-seeded Budge Patty of Los Angeles, Calif., the country's No. 1 junior player, and Russell against Ladislav Hecht of Brooklyn, N. Y., former Czecho-Sovakian Davis Cupper seeded third in the foreign field.

The only other engagement today at the Berkeley Tennis Club saw Segura and Russell enter the doubles final at the expense of Don Hawley and Barclay Kingman of Orange, 6—2, 7—5, 6—4. Their opponents in the final Sunday will be Mattman and George Richards of Los Angeles, Calif., the top-seeded domestic tandem.

Charley Paddock Joins Marines As a Captain

San Francisco, July 10.—The Leathernecks today claimed the services of a one-time "world's fastest human"—Charles Paddock.

The former world champion track star, now general manager of three Southern California newspapers, was commissioned a captain in the U. S. Marine Corps.

Paddock, Olympic Games champion in 1920 and still holder of the world record for the 300-meter dash—32.2 seconds—said his induction into the Marines was "the greatest and biggest thrill in my life since winning the Olympics."

At 17 he enlisted for World War duty and was sent overseas attached to General Pershing's staff. In 1919 he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the field artillery.

A.A.U. Revives 'All-Around' Track Today

By the Associated Press

Bridgeton, N. J., July 10.—The National A. A. U. all-around track and field championship, a ten-event grind scheduled for competition within five hours, will be held at Bridgeton High School Stadium tomorrow.

The competition, not held since F. Harrison Thomson of the Los Angeles A. C. won the title in 1921, has attracted a field of nine entrants instructed to line up for the first event at 1:45 p. m. and start the tenth at 5:50.

Among the entrants are Howard Jensen of Philadelphia, national A. A. U. junior pole vault champion, and Joshua Williamson of Atlantic City, who was third in the 1941 decathlon.

Kenneth Whitney of New York University, national junior high jump champion, and Howard Jones of Virginia Union College, Middle Atlantic high jump champion, also will compete.

The all-round program, considered by track experts to be a more severe test of athletic prowess than the decathlon, includes the 100-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles, 880-yard walk, 1-mile run, high jump, broad jump, pole vault, 16-pound shot-put, 16-pound hammer throw and 56-pound weight throw.

Billy Talbert Faces Everett In Net Finals

By the Associated Press

Ocean City, N. J., July 10.—Billy Talbert of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., the top-ranked players, gained the men's singles final of the annual Atlantic Coast Tennis championships today, but both had to quell stiff resistance.

Talbert, tenth in the national rankings, was given a two-hour battle by George Ball, El Paso, Tex., school teacher, before winning by scores of 2—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—3. Everett won in straight sets over Billy Vogt, Princeton University sophomore, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3, but he, too, was kept under continual pressure.

Ball, who eliminated third-seeded Bob Odman of Seattle, Wash., on Wednesday, covered the court like a jack rabbit against the top-seeded Talbert, but his game weakened in the last two sets.

Talbert later teamed with Mrs. Richard Todd of New York to win the mixed doubles title with an easy 6—1, 6—3, victory over Ball and Mrs. Millicent Hirsh Lang of New York.

Hawaiian Champ To Miss A.A.U. Meet

Neenah, Wis., July 10 (AP).—Chieko Miyamoto, twice winner of the 300-meter individual medley event in the National A. A. U. women's swimming and diving championships, will not defend her title here August 14-16, officials said today.

Miss Miyamato, who won the 300-meters in 1940 and repeated last year, competed for Alexander House, Maui, Hawaii. Officials said the war had created transportation problems which made it impossible for her to leave the islands.

Chief contenders for Miss Miyamoto's title include June Fogle, of Indiananapolis, and Helene Rains of the New York Women's Swimming Association.

The Lowdown on Whirly—From Ben Jones

New York, July 10.—Plain Ben Jones, gum-chewing veteran trainer of Whirlaway, Some Chance, Sun Again, Colonel Teddy and a few dozen others, was standing near the shady Empire City paddock, trying to dope out a winner in the third race.

CONSIDINE

He was doing much mumbling, and pencil-marking, as is the wont of his breed. We hung nearby, knowing that here was the font of all horse knowledge in the very process of picking a winner. Ben talked while he figured, and naturally he talked about Whirlaway.

"He came out of the Butler real good," Ben said, with some relief. "I sent him up to Boston today for that $50,000 race. Can't skip a race like that, hey? Leastwise you can't skip one like that if you want to win a lot of money."

We asked him if Whirly's defeat by Tola Rose was much of a shock to him.

"Nope, I gues not," he said. "Honestly, I never expect to win a handicap race with Whirlaway. They're putting the weight on him, and bringing him down to the others. But if he can finish second, that's okay. Even third. I just want him to run a good race, and I think he ran one in the Butler here last Saturday.

Outside Position Hurts His Chances

"That's a lot of weight to give away, but he closed good and he might have taken it all if he had been to the fence. They hadn't harrowed the track too good, away from the rail. It was soft-like, out where he was running.

"I thought for a while he was all in, after the race. But he stuck his nose in his bin and didn't raise his head until there wasn't an oat left. I knew he was okay then, when he ate good."

Whirly can soar past Seabiscuit's $437,710 winnings by taking the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap this coming Wednesday. We asked Ben if Warren Wright planned to retire him once the record was broken.

"No . . . I hope not," Ben said, looking up from his figuring in alarm. "He'll sure run the rest of this year, and I think he ought to run next year too. He's sound as a dollar. It won't hurt him." Ben couldn't estimate how much he'd win if he stayed around for another full year after this one. But given a break or two it ought to go up around $800,000

Jones thinks the horse Whirly must beat for the $50,000 at Suffolk Downs is Valdina Orphan. "That's a real good little colt," he said. "He's got his right weight in the race, too, 116 pounds. He's a fat little devil. Every trainer likes to get a horse who can put on a little fat while he's in training. Valdina Orphan can. We got 130 pounds for the race. Market Wise got 128, but he won't be there. Attention's got 122. I think, but Valdina Orphan's the one to beat."

The horses were almost at the starting gate for the third race, and Ben finally reached his decision. "I'm betting Flaught," he announced, with the quiet determination of John D. Rockefeller, jr., saying that he was buying more steel. Your venal correspondent knocked over three old ladies getting up to the window to bet Flaught. Ben was right behind us, and bet $50 to win and $50 to place.

In case you're interested, Flaught got off fifth, stayed there until the home stretch, made a tremendous effort and got up to third, and finished there. Which just goes to prove, etc., etc.

'Lefty' Acts as Go-Between for Joe

A friend of ours detected Lefty Gomez busily wrapping a bulky package at the mail cage of the Book Cadillac Hotel in Detroit not long ago. He peered over Lefty's shoulder and was somewhat surprised to notice that the contents of the box consisted of a steel helmet.

Lefty finished wrapping it and then in a bold hand addressed it to Lou Novikoff, the eccentric Cub outfielder who is an even bet to get hit on the head every time he circles under a high fly.

Lefty left enough stamps to mail it, then thought of something else. he took back the package and in the upper left-hand corner he wrote "from Joseph Stalin, Moscow."

July 27 Date Set For Christoforidis, Mose Brown Fight

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 10.—Former N. B. A. Light Heavyweight Champ Anton Christoforidis of Cleveland will meet Mose Brown, McKeesport Negro slugger, in one of five 10-round boxing bouts here July 27 at Forbes Field, the Rooney-McGinley Sporting Enterprises announced today.

The Dapper Dans, charity club, will help promote the fights with expectations of attracting a crowd of 25,000, Al Abrams, sports columnist and club secretary, said.

Former Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic of Pittsburgh is to meet Norman Reubio of Brooklyn in another bout. Reubio decisioned Zivic last week at Newark, N. J. Curtis Sheppard, local Negro heavyweight, will fight Joey Maxim of Cleveland.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 10 (AP).—James Wilson of the Maccabi A. C., New York, who has been competing in walking events for only five months, won the 30,000-meter National A. A. U. walking crown on the boardwalk today. His time for the 18.3 miles was 2:57.45.

The 30-year-old New Yorker saw three other contestants fall by the wayside and still another collapse only 50 yards from the finish line.

John Deni of Pittsburgh finished second, and John T. Abbate of Cincinnati third.

90 Men, 50 Women Enter Eastern Net

New York, July 10 (AP).—There will be no lack of players when the Eastern clay courts tennis championships open at the Jackson Heights Club tomorrow with approximately 90 entered in the men's singles and about 50 in the women's competition.

Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., the country's fifth ranking player and one of the few top notchers in action this season, heads the list of seeded players in the men's draw. Margaret Osborne of San Francisco tops the women's list.

Terp Summer Sport Teams Well-Filled

University of Maryland's lacrosse squad is exceptionally well set and the Old Line nine is fairly well fixed for the games they will play as headliners of the summer program of physical fitness at College Park. In all there are 45 stickmen and about 25 diamonders toiling.

Jack Faber's lacrossers, in fact, appear somewhat better off for their four summer tilts than they were for the regular spring campaign, while Burton Shipley's baseballers, who have eight games listed, lack much of their past season's strength.

Only Bill McGregor, Bob Stockbridge, Landis Hill and Ashton Thumm of the spring lacrosse squad are missing and only the first two named were regulars. McGregor was graduated and Stockbridge will not return until fall.

This leaves 13 lettermen who will be bolstered by some highly capable talent from the frosh squad. "M" men on hand are Jim Forbes and Barnett Broughton, goalies; Ralph Burlin, Jack Dittmar, Bob Fetters and Howard Keller, defensemen; Bill Tarbert, John Hoyert, Bill Taylor and Bernie Ulman, midfielders, and Ray Grelecki, Milt Vanden-Berb and Carroll Rowny, close attack.

Howard Smedley, John Ruppersberger and Lloyd Mallonee, defensemen; Otts Lundvall, midfielder, and Bob Smith, close attack, are the most impressive rookies.

However, the sad part of the situation is that Forbes, Burlin, Fetters, Keller, Grelicki, and Vandenberg, who ordinarily would be on hand for the 1943 season, are slated to go out with the advanced graduation class next February.

Baseball has lost Bob Smith, pitcher; Louis Tierney, catcher; Mearle DuVall, first sacker; Jim Wharton, second baseman, and Roscoe Whipp, third sacker, and Ernie Travis, outfielder, is not in school this semester.

Lefty Crist, Lloyd Roberts, and Max Hunt, pichers; Kenny Bransdorf, catcher; Clark Hudak, Bill Ellett, and Henry Sunier, infielders, and Dan Boothe and Hal Evans, outfielders, are the lettermen on deck.

Also on hand as leading performers are Jack Brenner, catcher, and Jack Wright, pitcher, who were lost to spring baseball by grid drills; Jim Kinsman, infielder, and Sam Burch, catcher, 1942 reserves. Promising rookies are Charley Cawunder, first baseman; Bill Slater, catcher; Tom Smoot, infielder, and Bill Adkins, who won all three games he hurled for the frosh.

Lacrosse tilts are: July 18—Penn State; 24—Hopkins at Baltimore, August 7—Hopkins; August 12—Navy at Annapolis.

Capital Store Sales Up 20% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended July 4 were 20 per cent larger than in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. However, volume was 12 per cent under the previous week this year, due to the July 4 holiday.

In the four weeks ended July 4 local department store sales were 17 per cent heavier than in the similar period of 1941.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole showed a sales gain of 20 per cent in the week ended July 4 and an increase of 13 per cent for the four-week period.

National Sales Lower

Nationally, department store sales in the week ended July 4 were 1 per cent lower than the corresponding period last year and were also 1 per cent lower for the four-week period.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in its weekly retail report said that a seasonal broadening which developed in wholesale trade activity this week failed to disclose any significant change of buying temper.

"Retailers ordering for fall," said the survey, "were in a conservative mood. Retail trade improved slightly in the week under the influence of clearance promotions and more favorable weather conditions, but still lacked the snap of buying in the earlier months of the year.

Weather More Favorable

"More favorable weather after the prolonged rainy spell gave an added lift to sales in a few regions. Some retailers reported a better showing in sports goods and outing wares than in the usually record week preceding the Fourth of July.

"Trade in women's ready-to-wear was enlivened in several cities by advance offerings of fall merchandise. In both men's and women's clothing lines the sales showing was generally better in accessories than in the items of larger unit price. Small goods were also reported most active in home furnishings. Occasional summer pieces and bedding led in furniture volume.

"In the reports of retailers, less emphasis was given to the week's transactions than to the apparent reasons for the recent letup of demand in view of record and increasing incomes. The slump in credit sales accounted for much of the decline, according to many retailers, who also reported charge account collections heavier than usual."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Peoples Drug Sales Up 19.8%

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc. yesterday reported June sales of $2,563,799, as compared with $2,140,243 in the same month last year or an increase of 19.8 per cent.

For the first six months sales aggregated $14,904,015, against $12,764,696 in the same period last year or a gain of 16.8 per cent.

Treasurer W. H. Churchill pointed out that the sales figures are given without adjustment for change in number of stores.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Profit taking and hedging sales halted the week's wheat price advance today but only after early gains of a cent a bushel had lifted quotations to new peaks since late in May.

Renewed buying of flour, reflected in the wheat pit by purchases of mills to lift hedges or cover requirements, put wheat up as much as ⅞ cent at one stage. July contracts reaching $1.21⅛, with May, 1943, delivery up to $1.33⅛. All this was lost partly as a result of subsequent selling attracted by the fact that at the high point wheat showed gains of about 7 cents from the 1942 lows recorded only last Monday.

Wheat closed ⅛-⅞ lower than yesterday; July, $1.20½; September, $1.23-1.23⅛; corn, ⅝-⅞ down; July, 86⅛; September, 89¼-89⅝; oats, ⅛-½ off; rye, ⅞-¼ lower and soybeans, ⅝-2¼ lower.

Range follows:

Mild Profit Taking Depresses List Slightly; Steel Issues Lead Scattered Rally at Close

New York, July 10.—Stock market bulls retired in good order today in the face of mild profit taking pressure inspired by the lengthy upswing.

Hesitancy prevailed at the start and, at the worst, declines ran to a point or so. While there were scattered recoveries in the final hour, with steels stiffening, the minus ranks were well populated at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 37.2 compared with upturns of .4 yesterday and .8 the day before. Transfers totaled 435,415 shares against Thursday's biggest turnover of the year to date of 844,290 shares.

Prominent on the losing end were Chrysler, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Sears Roebuck, Deere, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Consolidated Edison, Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Westinghouse, American Can and Philip Morris.

Radio Corporation turned lively at the finish with an advance of ⅝ at a new year's high. Improvement ranging to a point or more was shown for Standard Oil (N. J.) Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Sperry Air Lines, Woolworth, General Electric and Goodrich. United States Steel was unchanged and Bethlehem up ¼.

In the Curb Aluminum of America climbed 3½ points on meager dealings. Lesser advances were registered for Novadel-Agene, Quaker Oats, Gulf Oil and United Light. Backward were American Gas, Humble Oil, Brewster Aero, Phoenix Securities and Singer Manufacturing. The aggregate was 51,115 shares versus 82,145 Thursday.

The bond market fell back into an irregularly lower drift with changes in all sections small and trading extremely quiet.

A handful of utilities and foreign dollar loans maintained the forward motion prevalent earlier this week. Transfers contracted to $4,451,500, par value, from $6,653,100 on Thursday. The Associated Press averages were only slightly changed in all groups.

After virtually disappearing from the tape on Wednesday and Thursday, when the Treasury was selling two billion dollars of new 2s, a few Government bonds sold on the Stock Exchange with mixed results. Treasury 2¾s of '65-60 gained 8-32 of a point but the 4¼'s of '47 lost an equal amount.

Banner Year Forecast for Nation's Crops

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department, stating that growing conditions have rarely been better at this season of the year for the country as a whole, said yesterday a "banner year" for the production of crops and livestock for United Nations war needs appeared to be in the making.

Prospects were said to point to a record production of such vital vegetable oil crops as soybeans, peanuts and flaxseed, foreign supplies of which have been cut off by the war, and of sugar beets, barley, dry edible beans, rice and canning vegetables.

Likewise, large supplies of the bread and feed grains also were indicated.

Best Crops Since 1932

The department said that if present prospects are borne out at harvest time, this year's acreage of crops would be the largest since 1932 and the total production would be 3 per cent greater than last year and 14 per cent greater than the 1923-32 average—the period prior to inauguration of AAA crop control programs.

While stating that weather conditions had been unusually favorable for the country as a whole, the department said some areas had suffered from unfavorable conditions. Those areas included parts of the Midwestern corn belt, where the weather has been excessively cool and wet, hindering cultivation. Dry weather harmed crops in parts of the Southwest. On the other hand, prospects were said to be particularly favorable in the Great Plains, scene of droughts in recent years.

Wheat production was estimated at 904,288,000 bushels, which would be a big crop, although the acreage sown was the smallest since 1917. The crop totaled 945,937,000 bushels last year and 747,507,000 bushels for the 10-year (1930-39) average. The 1942 crop estimate included 675,482,000 bushels of winter wheat, 32,521,000 bushels of durum and 196,285,000 bushels of other spring wheat.

Corn Crop Above Average

The corn crop was forecast at 2,627,823,000 bushels. This was slightly below last year's crop of 2,672,541,000 bushels, but far above the 10-year average of 2,307,452,000 bushels. The corn acreage was about 4 per cent greater than that harvested last year.

Production increases were forecast for sugar crops. The sugar cane production was estimated at 7,297,000 tons, compared with 5,462,000 last year, while the sugar beet crop was forecast at 12,457,000 tons, compared with 10,311,000 last year.

The department said fruit production seemed likely to be about equal to the record production of last year.

Lumber Freeze Extended for Extra Month

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board yesterday extended its lumber "freeze" order for a month, pending development "of a system of distribution," based on need of lumber for war purposes.

Officials declined to say what form of distribution would be adopted, emphasizing that plans had not been worked out.

At the same time, WPB revised the freeze order, permitting sale and delivery of lumber for repair and maintenance of railway cars and allowing small sawmills to resume retail sales.

Arthur T. Upson, chief of the lumber products branch, said the shortage of many types of construction lumber had become more serious since sales were halted May 13 and that demands of the armed services "are large and rapidly increasing."

He said requirements for boxing and crating of munitions would soon be vastly expanded, adding to the already heavy burden of lumber producers who are furnishing wood as a substitute for many articles formerly made of metal.

Under the revised order, Mills sawing less than 5,000 feet of softwood a day are exempt from the restrictions. Further, sawmills which normally engaged in local retailing because their communities are not served by regular retail yards may resume such sales to the local trade.

Meanwhile, the WPB moved to eliminate another bottleneck in the manufacture of machine tools by prohibiting production of tools calling for special electrical specifications after July 15.

The special specifications include nonstandard types of electric controls and motors not ordinarily used by machine tool makers. The order is expected to speed production by simplifying manufacturing processes.

In the past, WPB said, machine tool buyers have made it a practice to develop their own specifications with the result that tool makers were forced to spend much time and effort in readapting production methods for each new order.

Tubeless Tire For Trucks Developed

By the Associated Press

Akron, Ohio, July 10.—Development of a tubeless pneumatic tire for heavy vehicle use, was announced here today by John L. Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Co.

Utilizing a specially designed locking member which retains the air in the casing, the new tire effects an important saving in rubber by dispensing with the ordinarily required inner tubes and flaps.

While the amount of rubber saved by the new development varies depending upon the size of the tire, Collyer estimated that the minimum was approximately seven per cent of the rubber content of the conventional casing, tube and flap combined.

Collyer said that already substantial test results obtained by the company demonstrate the usefulness of the tire and its ability to perform under all sorts of difficult road conditions. Further tests under other auspices, he said, now are being conducted.

In the event the tire is cut or otherwise becomes deflated, it was explained, time can be saved in repairs as there is no inner tube to be patched or replaced.

The announcement emphasized that the tubeless tire, described as a goal of tire engineers for half a century, is strictly a heavy vehicle device at this stage. Its possible ultimate application to conventional passenger cars was not even hinted.

Money Circulation Increases in June To All-Time Peak

By the Associated Press

Despite the Government's efforts to prevent inflation, money in circulation jumped another $300,000,000—equivalent to $2.18 per person—in June.

The Treasury said yesterday that coin and currency in circulation outside of the Treasury and Federal Reserve banks totaled $12,377,119,781, equal to $92.04 for every man, woman and child in the Nation.

Resulting primarily from the huge war-spending program of the Government, this figure has climbed steadily from $9,612,375,332, which was $72.16 per person a year ago.

Previous records of money in circulation were smashed many months ago, and currently, a new high has been set every month.

OPA Aide Urges Eligible Persons To Buy Cars Now

Cleveland, July 10 (AP).—Persons eligible to purchase new automobiles should do so at once to save themselves money and to cooperate with the war effort, Hubert G. Larson, chief of OPA's Automobile Rationing Section, declared today.

Larson pointed out to a press conference it is the policy to encourage movement of the 400,000 new passenger cars allocated for sale in the year ending March 2. Of this number, about 140,000, or roughly 35 per cent, have been sold in the first four months of rationing.

"Price Administrator Leon Henderson has stated that it is not unpatriotic for an eligible user to buy a new car now," Larson declared. "On the contrary, such purchases may contribute to

NEW ORLEANS COLONIAL RESIDENCE

Spring Valley

The Garden of Beautiful Homes

Close to transportation, stores and schools. Located on a high elevation, with beautifully landscaped and fenced ground shaded by small groves of native trees.

Of stone and brick construction with iron grillwork on porch and balcony. 3 doors which open onto the 2nd floor balcony lend a distinctive architectural charm, and the chimneys at either end of the house give it additional dignity.

The house contains a wide center-hall, beautifully arranged antiqued ping-paneled library with fireplace, large living room, a well-proportioned dining room with corner cupboard and a deeply recessed group of 3 windows with wide sills; large sunroom, first-floor lavatory, kitchen, butler's pantry with separate door to the hall; 4 bedrooms and 4 baths and an abundance of closets.

The basement contains maid's room and bath, a large paneled recreation room with fireplace and numerous closets. A door leads to a paved loggia, offering a secluded spot for summer relaxation or a gallery for observing lawn games. 2-car garage; gas air-conditioned heat. Owner leaving city.

Listen! with Glynn

"The People's Platform" over WJSV at 7 tonight gets to a sore point. But it looks as if there'll be enough doctors around to take care of it.

The subject of CBS's informal discussion period is the need—a sore problem, as we've said—of getting thousands of doctors into the armed services and, at the same time, making certain that there are enough doctors left around to take care of civilian needs.

On the theory of the old saw, "Doctor, cure thyself!", Lyman Bryson, moderator of the program, has invited a group of doctors to the studios to talk the matter over.

They include Lieutenant Colonel Sam F. Seeley, executive officer of the Procurement and Assignment Service of Paul V. McNutt's War Manpower Commission; Dr. Michael M. Davis, of the Rosenwald Foundation, and Dr. Thomas McGoldrick, chairman of the Preparedness Committee of the Brooklyn Medical Society and chief of Medical Civilian Defense for Brooklyn.

So the program won't have an overdose of medicos, however, the last guest is to be Miss Maxine Davis, well known magazine writer. She's just returned from a long tour during which she surveyed medical conditions in the South.

The Federal Government recently issued a warning to doctors that if enough medical men don't volunteer for service with America's armed forces, it will be necessary to conscript many.

The subject, undoubtedly, calls for a lot of treatment.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand at a six-club contract. You are sitting South and West opens a small diamond, which East wins with the king. He then shifts to the club deuce; carry on from this point so as to make 12 tricks. The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ K 10 9 7 6 4 2 ♡ A K 7 ◇ 4 ♣ 9 4
WEST: ♠ A Q 5 3 ♡ Q 9 2 ◇ J 8 6 5 ♣ J 7
EAST: ♠ J 8 ♡ 10 8 6 5 ◇ A K 10 9 3 2 ♣ 2
SOUTH: ♠ None ♡ J 4 2 ◇ Q 7 ♣ A K Q 10 8 6 5 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 5 ◇.

The Solution

South makes his six-club contract by squeezing West. He wins the trump lead in the closed hand with the queen, ruffs his losing diamond with dummy's last club, re-enters the South hand by trumping a spade with the club king, and then plays the club ace, drawing the opponents' last trump.

Declarer sees that he can discard his losing heart on North's spade king if the ace of spades is held doubleton by one of the defenders, so he plays a small heart to dummy's king and ruffs a small spade on the return, the ace refusing to fall. It does declarer no good to ruff another spade now, as even if the ace drops he will be unable to enter dummy to cash the king; so instead he cashes all but one of his clubs, leaving this situation:

NORTH: ♠ K ♡ A 7 ◇ None ♣ None
WEST: ♠ A ♡ Q 9 ◇ None ♣ None
EAST: ♠ None ♡ 10 8 ◇ A ♣ None
SOUTH: ♠ None ♡ J 4 ◇ None ♣ 3

Declarer then leads his last trump, hoping to find West holding both the high spade and the queen of hearts. West is squeezed; if he throws the spade, declarer takes the high heart and the spade king for the last two tricks; if West unguards the heart queen, South leads a small heart to dummy's ace, dropping the queen, and returns a heart to the good jack. He makes six-odd giving up only the diamond king.

District Divorcee Found Smothered To Death in Hotel

Apparently smothered between two pillows, Mrs. Maria F. Mullaney, 39-year-old Washington divorcee, was found dead yesterday in a hotel room in Frederick, Md., Sheriff Horace M. Alexander reported.

A verdict of "asphyxiation due to acute alcoholism" was returned by Dr. R. W. Baer, county medical examiner. Sheriff Alexander and hotel employes said that the woman checked in the hotel the night before after attending the races at Hagerstown. A purse found in the room contained $100, officials said.

A call to Mrs. Mullaney's address, which was listed as 3407 Fourteenth Street Northwest, was answered by a woman who said she had rented a room about two days ago from either Mrs. Mullaney or a woman friend. The roomer said she had found a note yesterday left by Mrs. Mullaney, saying she had gone away and would not be back for several days.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Skull Practice — BY MILTON CANIFF

THE YANKEE BOMBER COULD HAVE LANDED ONLY IN THIS VALLEY!...THERE WILL BE A PICKET AT THE VALLEY ENTRANCE! IF HE GIVES THE ALARM, WE WILL NOT TAKE THE AIRPLANE INTACT!... BY KNOCKING THE WOMAN OUT—AND TURNING THE CHILD LOOSE—WE WILL CAUSE THE GUARD TO SHOW HIMSELF!
THE BABY WILL CRY OUT IN ENGLISH THAT HER MOTHER IS HURT...THE SENTRY WILL COME TO HELP ONE OF HIS OWN PEOPLE!... HE WILL CARRY THE WOMAN TO HIS SUPERIOR... AND WE SHALL FOLLOW! HOLD THAT SHE-WOLF SO I MAY TAKE AIM!
SERGEANT, YOURS IS THE MOST IMPORTANT SENTRY POST OF THE LOT! —OUR GREATEST DANGER OF DISCOVERY LIES IN THIS PASS! HEADS UP!
YESSIR!
MEANWHILE...

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

FEELING BETTER THIS MORNING, MRS. WORTH?
I FEEL LIKE AN OLD WEAKLING! A GROWN-UP WOMAN.... FAINTING!
WHEN YOU DO TEN WOMEN'S WORK FOR DAYS WITHOUT REST, YOU MUST PAY THE PRICE!
HOW ARE THE CHILDREN ..AND BILL BIFF?
THEY'RE FINE!
I MUST GET OUT OF THIS BED AND FIND US SOME SORT OF A HOME! THE CYCLONE DESTROYED MY LITTLE HOTEL, YOU KNOW!
YES..THERE'S A GENTLEMAN WAITING TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT THAT!...A VERY IMPORTANT GENTLEMAN!

MICKEY FINN — The Freeze Out! — BY LANK LEONARD

MR. AND MRS. — Before the News Goes On — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

THAT WAS THORNE HE WANTS YOU BOTH TO GO OVER TO HIS ROOM AT THE HOTEL RIGHT AWAY!
BOY-O-BOY! I'LL BET WE'RE REALLY GOING TO GET ACTION NOW!
MICKEY, I'M PROUD OF YOU! HAVING ONE OF OUR MEN BREAK A CASE FOR THE F.B.I., WILL BE A FEATHER IN THE DEPARTMENT'S CAP!
WELL, IT'S NOT BROKEN YET, JOHNNY—BUT IT'LL BE SWELL BEING IN ON IT, WHEN IT DOES!
PERSONALLY, I DOUBT IF ANYTHING WILL COME OF THE LEAD YOU'VE GIVEN ME, BUT I DO INTEND TO FOLLOW IT UP—HOWEVER, WITH MY OWN MEN, OF COURSE!
—SO ON MONDAY YOU'LL GO BACK TO THE ACME PLANT—THAT'S WHERE YOU CAN BE OF THE MOST SERVICE TO US!

DIXIE DUGAN — Proud! — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

WE'LL HEAR THE NEWS IN FIVE MINUTES NOW
YEAH?
DON'T YOU WANT TO KNOW WHAT'S GOING ON IN THE WORLD?
SURE. TURN IT ON
DON'T TELL ME. I READ ALL THIS IN THE PAPERS. I'VE HEARD EVERYTHING
YOU'RE SO INDIFFERENT. YOU DON'T CARE!
I DO CARE! YOU USED TO TELL ME ABOUT THE ROOF LEAKING OR A PIPE BREAKING. NOW IT'S THE WAR
WE CAN HAVE THE ROOF FIXED WHEN WE'VE BOUGHT OUR WAR BONDS

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — News Hawk — BY FRANK V. MARTINEK

YOU SEE MRS. RAY, THE OWNER, HAS GIVEN ME PERMISSION TO MAKE THIS PLACE A SERVICE CLUB FOR THE U.S.O.
O.K., YOU WIN!
WAIT! BEFORE YOU GO THERE'S A LITTLE MATTER OF $32,000,000 TO BE SETTLED!
$32,000,000! ARE YOU CRAZY??—WHAT FOR?
FOR THE U.S.O. WAR FUND CAMPAIGN! I'VE BEEN ASKED TO DO MY BIT—YOU CAN DO YOURS! WE ALL HAVE TO! C'MON! FORK OVER FOR AMERICA'S FIGHTING MEN AND FORCES BEHIND THE LINES!
I—I APOLOGIZE FOR MY SNOBBISHNESS, MY LITTLE FIRECRACKER! YOU'RE AS INDEPENDENT AS THE 4TH!—I MIGHT ADD, I'LL BE ONE OF THOSE FIGHTING MEN, MYSELF, SOON
NOW I'M PROUD TO KNOW YOU!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

WE'RE ALONE NOW. WHAT'S CAUGHT YOUR EYE IN THAT NEWSPAPER, DON?
A CERTAIN PICTURE, RED.
HERE YOU ARE!
YOHMO, A JAPANESE VOLCANO ON THE ISLAND OF HOKKAIDO, HAS BURST FORTH IN SURPRISE ERUPTION!
LOOK AT THAT SMOKE POURING UP! I'LL BET IT'S DRIFTING OUT OVER THE PACIFIC FOR A HUNDRED MILES!
SURE... BUT WHAT...
IT GIVES ME AN IDEA, RED, AN INSPIRATION FOR STRIKING FROM INSIDE JAPAN!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

THERE AIN'T MUCH TO TELL, PRINCESS! THEY CALLED ME JACK HALE, AT THE ORPHANAGE I SKIPPED FROM, THREE YEARS AGO!
YES--?
SINCE THEN, I'VE BEEN ON THE BUM--RIDIN' THE RODS ON EVERY ROAD FROM THE BIG FOUR TO THE CASEY--PUSHIN' MY THUMB ON EVERY HIGHWAY FROM MAINE TO TEXAS--
--TRYIN' TO GET A BREAK--A JOB! BUT NOBODY CARES ABOUT A KID WITH NO FOLKS—THE WORLD'S AGAINST ME! SO TONIGHT I DECIDED TO GO AGAINST THE WORLD!
--AND YOU NABBED ME!--GO ON! CALL THE COPS!!
NO, JACK! EVEN THE JAIL IS OVER-CROWDED IN WASHINGTON! COME WITH ME! I BELIEVE OUR LANDLADY CAN FIX YOU UP!

DONALD DUCK — Inseparable Pals! — BY WALT DISNEY

From the News Fronts of the World

His Tanks—A Nazi tank (below) advances toward burning objectives on the Russo-German front. The massed steel might of the German armies in South Russia, including such tanks as this, have driven within 235 miles of industrial Stalingrad. This photo reached the United States via London

Army's 'Joey'—Sweet toothsomes attract the attention of a "Joey," name for a young kangaroo. An American antiaircraft crew in Australia has adopted the half-grown animal as a mascot. He is dining just outside a well-established gun emplacement

Torpedoed at Dock—An enemy submarine slipped into Puerto Limon Harbor, Costa Rica, the night of July 2 and torpedoed the United States ship San Pablo which was tied up at the dock (below). At least 23 lives were lost. View of the vessel's deck (above) shows great damage

U-Boat 'Garage'—This waterfront view, which came from a neutral nation through London to the United States, is described as showing a German submarine dock on the French coast. Atop the concrete-covered U-boat "garage" a fortification is being built. Aircraft will be assigned to protect the structure, it was stated
